LUER CAPTORS ARE ASKED TO SEND NEW INSTRUCTIONS

Appeal Issued After First Message From Alton Banker's Kidnapers Is Delivered Too Late to Meet Time Conditions.

HANDWRITING OF VICTIM ON NOTE

First Indication Since Abduction That He Is Still Alive—Agents Deny East St. Louis Man Has Been Named Intermediary.

Instructions from the kidnapers of August Luer, wealthy 77-year-old Alton banker and meat packer, for his release on ransom have been received but not met by the family because of an unexplained delay in their delivery, it was disclosed last night in a statement by the Luers' agents, Orville S. Catt and Lawrence Keller Jr.

In the statement, directed to the abductors, it was revealed that the family has received from the kidnapers its demanded proof that Luer is alive, namely, a specimen of his handwriting.

Because apparently the negotiations looking toward Luer's release went awry, the family appealed in its statement to the kidnapers for a new set of instructions, which also are to include a new specimen of Luer's handwriting and his signature. Grave fears have been felt for his life, because he is a victim of frequent violent heart attacks, which are likely to be aggravated by manhandling and the mental strain of captivity.

The Agents' Statement.

The text of last night's statement follows:

To the kidnapers of August Luer:

We believe that your communications concerning instructions relative to the return of Mr. August Luer have all been received, but too late. The receipt by us of note written and signed by Mr. Luer assures us that we are dealing with his captors. Your instructions have been confusing and complicated.

The note for Friday 7 p. m. instructions was not found until Saturday morning, so we could not comply. We urge that you act immediately by issuing new instructions and contact the man named in order to effect a speedy release.

We must insist that the new instructions include a specimen of Mr. Luer's handwriting and his signature. We will try to meet any reasonable demand.

THE LUER FAMILY.

We further announce that no East St. Louis business man, as reported in the press, has been authorized to act as intermediary in the release of Mr. August Luer.

Story About Business Man.

The reference to the East St. Louis business man, in the last paragraph of the appeal to the kidnapers, was occasioned by a news story in the East St. Louis Journal last night to the effect that an East Side man had been asked by the abductors to help in effecting Luer's release. It was stated in the news story that the business man had asked that his name be withheld because he feared the kidnapers might be angered by its publication.

Issued at 11 o'clock last night, 122 hours after Luer was dragged from his home by two men and a woman and hustled off in an automobile, the appeal to the kidnapers made public for the first time the definite information that the kidnaped man has apparently survived the ordeal of his captivity and that the family has had proof, through his note or notes, of that fact.

The representatives of the family made no statement as to whether negotiations have reached a stage where a demand for a definite sum of money has been made by the kidnapers. The family's agents have repeatedly stated that no demand for a great amount can be met because the Leur cash account is depleted by recent business deals.

Appeal for Special Prayers.

An appeal to Protestant and Catholic congregations to pray today for the release of Mr. Luer was published in an advertisement in

ROOSEVELT MAKES AUTO TOUR OF MARYLAND EASTERN SHORE

President Later Returns to Yacht Sequoia to Resume Cruise on Chesapeake Bay.

By the Associated Press.

CRISFIELD, Md., July 15.—After spending six hours on land, President Roosevelt returned to Crisfield from a sight-seeing tour of the Maryland historic Eastern shore late today and boarded the yacht Sequoia to resume his cruise on the Chesapeake Bay. On his motor trip, the President saw several churches more than 200 years old, visited residences that are nearly their 300th birthday and visited a terrapin farm.

Members of the crew said the yacht would cross the Chesapeake Bay to Solomon's Island to anchor for the night.

The trip ashore received no advance publicity, but a crowd estimated at 3000 was on hand to greet the President when the ship nosed her way into harbor here and a similar crowd bid him good-by. The first crowd gathered after the arrival of two White House motor cars and four motorcycle police.

TWO ST. LOUISANS IN CHICAGO ROBBED OF $323 AND JEWELS

Auto Forced to Curb and Valuables Taken When Returning From Fair.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Arnold A. Collins of St. Louis here attending the fair, had a costly experience with organized robbers early today. They have a temporary residence at 1224 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park.

Accompanied by Mr. and Mrs Herbert Bach of Elmhurst, in the Bachs' car, they were returning from the exposition grounds when their machine was forced to the curb by another automobile.

There were four robbers, Collins told police later. One of them, he said, carried a sawed-off shotgun. He and one other got into the Bachs' machine.

In a three-block drive, Collins was robbed of $300, a watch valued at $50 and a diamond tie pin valued at $170. Mrs. Collins was robbed of $23 and a diamond dinner ring valued at $170 and Bach was robbed of $18. The robbers finally got out of the Bachs' car and taking the keys with them, drove away in their own machine. The keys were found later.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Marx of St. Louis also were victims of robbers. Their luggage was stolen from their parked car.

STEEL CODE FILED, PROVIDING 15 PCT. PAY INCREASE AND 40-HOUR WEEK

READY FOR HEARINGS ON LARGE SCALE

Electrical, Lumber, Oil and Various Other Group Plans Will Go Under Examination Within Next Few Days.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The steel industry today submitted a wage-raising and work-spreading agreement under the industrial legislation act.

Robert P. Lamont, president of the Iron and Steel Institute and one-time Secretary of Commerce, took the steel agreement to Hugh S. Johnson, the Industrial Administrator. It was signed, Lamont said, by companies representing 90 per cent of the country's output.

In concert with this announcement came word from steel center after steel center that wages were being increased 15 per cent immediately.

The code, however, was criticised in part by labor. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said its wage levels were too low, and the average of 40 working hours a week too high. He said he would oppose a provision for organization of steel employes limited to work councils or company unions.

Labor's Chief Objections.

Green, the Federation of Labor president, assailed the employe representation plan of the steel men because he argued that, despite any assurances of secret election of representatives, the workers are not free of their employers' influence and that, in effect, "the corporations are dealing with themselves."

Of the wage and hour provisions, he said: "If the purposes of the National Recovery Act are to be realized, it is necessary that the large basic industries like steel increase wages and cut working time far more than is proposed. Steel should be called upon by the Government to do its whole share in absorbing unemployed workers."

At Johnson's office, the action of the steel industry brought expressions of satisfaction. No approval was given the terms, which will be scrutinized in public at a date to be set next week.

All Textile Men Getting In.

The action topped a concerted movement by rayon and silk spinning and weaving mills, "throwing" plants which twist thread, to apply immediately the terms of the cotton textile code which, beginning Monday, will put 450,000 cotton workers on a 40-hour work week with minimum wage increased to $12 and $13 in the South and North, respectively. Formal administration sanction was promised, and the expectation is that the action will put another 200,000 or more workers on the higher pay basis.

Administrator Johnson today telegraphed Gov. Ely of Massachusetts that "the suspension of the 6 o'clock closing law in Massachusetts is necessary if cotton manufacturers in your State are to compete on a more equal basis with manufacturers in other cotton manufacturing states." The 6 o'clock law is one under which women may not work after that hour. An effort is under way in Massachusetts to permit employment of women workers until 10 p. m.

Wool men, too, put in a code today, and there is expectation they will join the rayon and silk movement. A public hearing on the code of fair competitioon submitted by the wool textile manufacturers was set.

The wool manufacturers asked the administration to protect them against foreign importations. In addition to increasing wages and cutting working hours, they limited machine operation to two 40-hour shifts, just as cotton did, and they also banned child labor.

The underwear manufacturing industry today conditionally agreed to operate under the provisions of the cotton textile code pending completion of one of its own.

Next week hearings on codes will begin on a large scale. The agreements of the electrical manufac-

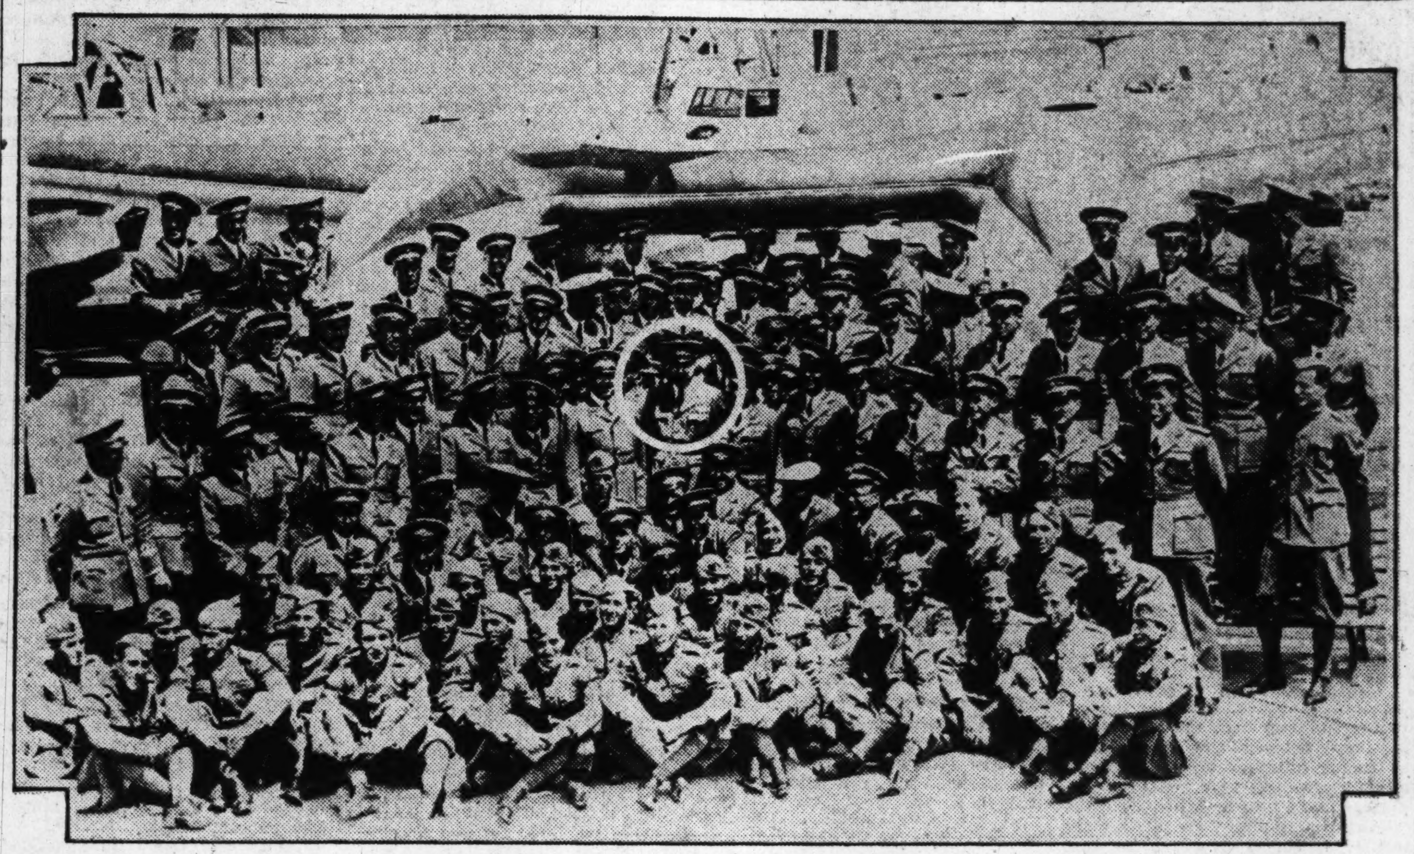
ITALIAN AIR FLEET ARRIVES AT CHICAGO, LANDS ON LAKE

Airmen Who Made Record-Breaking Mass Flight From Italy to Chicago



GEN. ITALO BALBO (in circle, center), Italy's air minister and leader of the expedition, with the officers and men who flew 24 seaplanes, from Orbetello, Italy, to Chicago, a distance of about 6000 miles, in 15 days. The air fleet left Orbetello July 1 and arrived in Chicago yesterday afternoon.

PRESIDENT FAVORS LOANS FOR CITY OWNED UTILITIES

Entire Sum Needed to Build Water and Electric Plants May Be Obtained From U. S.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Roosevelt hopes that municipalities will apply to the Public Works administration for Federal aid to build their own electric power plants and water supply systems.

It was learned at the White House yesterday that such applications from municipalities will receive very favorable consideration. Secretary of Interior Ickes, who is also administrator of the $3,300,000,000 public works funds, has told callers, among them City Couselor Charles M. Hay of St. Louis, that he favors the use of Federal funds to help cities and towns build their own public utilities.

Under the public works act municipalities can obtain from the Federal Government 100 per cent of the funds necessary for a self-liquidating project such as a utility. Of this, 30 per cent is an outright gift for unemployment relief aand the remaining 70 per cent must be repaid over a period of years.

The attitude of the White House regarding loans to municipalities was made known when President Roosevelt announced that he wanted the entire fund of $3,300,000,000 to be expended for job-making relief work.

Broadly speaking, the $3,300,000,000 fund will be allocated as follows:

Earmarked for straight Federal projects, such as crop loans, navy construction and public roads, $1,300,000,000.

For special Government projects, such as development of a 9-foot channel on the Upper Mississippi River, $500,000,000.

For non-Federal projects, principally self-liquidating loans, $1,500,000,000.

Funds for deepening the Upper Mississippi River channel have not yet been allocated, but there were indications this would be done soon.

It is expected that at least 70 per cent of the $1,500,000,000 for non-Federal projects will be repaid. Some of it will go to enterprises such as a big dam and power plant that is proposed on the North Platte River. This project involves between $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

As yet regulations have not been drawn covering the collateral nec-

MISSOURI TO GET $12,180,000 U. S. AID FOR HIGHWAYS

One of 10 States in $75,000,000 Allotment Approved by Public Works Administration.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Plans for spending $75,000,000 on roads in 10 states were approved by the Public Works Administration today to carry out President Roosevelt's program of pouring the entire $3,300,000,000 construction funds into the channels of trade as soon as possible.

Missouri was allotted $12,180,306, 50 per cent to be used on the Federal aid system, 25 per cent on extensions through municipalities and 25 per cent on secondary roads. Ninety-two of the 114 counties will share in the allotment.

The administration accelerated work on proposals for spending on Federal public works projects several hundred thousand dollars in addition to what has been allocated already in an effort to have 1,000,000 men who now are idle at work by Oct. 1. In line with this program, the President will consider over the week-end an allotment of $90,000,000 to river and harbor and flood control projects which his Cabinet board has approved. The board on Monday will take up recommendations for about $750,000,000 for Federal buildings.

Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, and Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, will fly down the Potomac tomorrow to board the yacht Sequoia and confer with President Roosevelt. The river and harbor and flood control projects may be approved at that time.

Ickes announced he had approved plans submitted by Indiana, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Missouri and Wisconsin to spend $75,643,445 and the District of Columbia an additional $1,912,469 on roads. This sent to about $125,000,000 the total of expenditures from the $400,000,000 set aside for roads which have received approval. Four states already had obtained action on plans for spending about $50,000,000.

U. S. INSPECTOR AND PILOT KILLED IN FLAMING PLANE

Department of Commerce Ship Takes Fire and Falls Into the Delaware River.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 15.—J. Allison Buck, Wilmington pilot, and Jack Moran of New York, an inspector of the aviation department of the United States Department of Commerce, were killed late today after a new airplane they were testing burst into flames and fell into the Delaware River.

TWO PLANES SIGHTED GOING EAST FROM NEWFOUNDLAND

One Probably Wiley Post's Round-the-World Ship, Other That of U. S.-to-Lithuania Flyers

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—A plane thought to be that of Wiley Post, American round-the-world flyer, heading for Berlin, was reported at 1:10 p. m. today passing out to sea from Torbay, Newfoundland.

Post took off from Floyd Bennett Field here at 4:10 a. m. today.

About an hour after Post took off, at 5:24, Capt. Stephen Darius and Stanley Thomas Girenas, Lithuanian-born Chicagoans, made a surprise start for Lithuania in their plane, the Lithuanica. A plane thought to be theirs was reported sighted at Clarenville, Trinity Bay, Newfoundland.

If this ship was the Lithuanica, as seems probable, Darius and Gerenas evidently had lost their bearings temporarily and were a hundred miles off their course. After being sighted over Terrenceville, on the East Coast, at 2:45 p. m., the orange-colored monoplane was next seen over Bishop Falls, N. F., 100 miles westward. At 3:38 p. m. the ship was again flying seaward, passing over Gander Bay at high speed.

Post Due Before Noon Today.

If all goes well, Post expects to be in Berlin some time between 5 a. m. and noon tomorrow. It is hardly possible to schedule the Lithuanica's time, but the plans called for a 4900-mile non-stop flight.

Post, flying alone, hopes to break the round-the-world record of eight days 15 hours 51 minutes which he and Harold Gatty set in 1931. He is flying his purple and white monoplane, Winnie Mae of Oklahoma, which was used on the previous flight.

Post arrived at the field about midnight. He was greeted by a crowd of a thousand or more. He curled up on a cot for a last-minute nap.

Attendants filled the Winnie Mae's tanks to their capacity of 659 gallons. Then the pilot arose, said good-by to his wife, Mrs. Mae Post, and climbed into the plane.

"I'll be back as soon as possible," he shouted to the crowd.

In a moment the ship sped down the 4100-foot runway and was in the air.

Close behind was a second plane, bearing Mrs. Post to wave a sky farewell to her husband.

Darius and Girenas Start.

Darius and Girenas took advantage of the interest in Post's departure and warmed their engine for what they told airport officials would be a test flight with their load of 779 gallons of gas. Under this ruse they left the ground with the good wishes of friends, one of whom was Paul Zadekis, New York Counsel-General for Lithuania.

They had no passports or per-

8000 PHONE CALLS IN WEEK BY LONDON PARLEY DELEGATES

Only Chinese and Japanese Unable to Talk to Their Governments.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 15.—The world economic conference has set at least one record—for international telephone calls. More than 8000 calls were made from the Geological Museum in the first week and 500 of these were special priority calls by foreign delegates. The delegates of only two countries, Japan and China, were unable to telephone their home governments.

MAN, 70, KIDNAPED BY ERROR FOR EMPLOYER, IS RELEASED

Says He Was Drugged After Being Forced to Write for $50,000 to Free Californian.

By the Associated Press.

EUREKA, Cal., July 15.—E. T. Wiggins, 70-year-old salesman for the Wright Corporation, reported to authorities he had been kidnaped from Stockton and released near here today, apparently when his abductors became convinced he was not W. O. Wright, his employer. Wiggins told police he was forced to write a letter asking $50,000 for the release of Wright, head of the Wright Corporation, and was taken up the Redwood highway north of Arcata and forced to drink a concoction which caused him to lose consciousness. Wiggins said he believed his abductors thought him to be Wright.

One man, Wiggins said, was called 'Stub," and had a finger missing, and the other had a scar on his left cheek about an inch long.

BOOTH CO. SOLD FOR $1,171,000

Reorganization Committee to Continue Fisheries Business.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 15.—Millar Brainard, Boston, as chairman of a reorganization committee, today bought the assets and property of the Booth Fisheries Co., with headquarters in Chicago, for $1,171,000. The purchase was made at a bankruptcy sale authorized by the United States District Court for Delaware, the price representing payment of $821,000 and assumption of $350,000 in liabilities.

Brainard said the business would be continued by the Booth Fisheries Corporation, chartered here yesterday. Headquarters will be maintained in Chicago.

VAST THRONG SEES FINISH OF 6000-MI. MASS FLIGHT

Gen. Italo Balbo's 24 Seaplanes Roar in From the East With Escort of 42 U. S. Army Ships — Million Spectators Line the Shore.

OFFICIAL WELCOME AT SOLDIER'S FIELD

Commander of Expedition, First Down After 770-Mile Run From Montreal, Raises Arm in Fascist Salute and Crowd Shouts Back Applause.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Gen Italo Balbo's Italian air fleet of 24 seaplanes alighted on Lake Michigan at 6 p. m. today, ending their record-breaking mass formation flight of about 6000 miles that began July 1 at Orbetello, Italy.

The first plane down on the surface of the lake, only slightly ruffled by a breeze, was that piloted by Gen. Balbo, commander of the flight. Gen Balbo had with him the Italian ambassador to the United States, Augusto Rosso.

The first plane landed at 6 p. m. All were down and safely in harbor at 6:40. Tall, black-bearded Gen. Balbo scrambled out of the twin-motored, double-cabined craft and raised an arm in the Fascist salute to the thousands lining the shore.

The other planes landed in rapid succession, and the occupants were taken aboard the coast guard gunboat, Wilmette.

Greeted Aboard the Wilmette.

On the Wilmette, moored at navy pier, the flyers were given time to bathe and dress. Then they were taken in triumphal procession to the lagoon of the World's Fair, there to debark and march to Soldier's Field where 100,000 persons waited for the formal welcoming ceremonies.

The flyers all appeared tired. As a consequence officials in charge of the reception at Soldiers' Field agreed to cut the ceremonies short.

Balbo Expresses Thanks.

Gen. Balbo said he had brought greeting from Premier Mussolini and expressed thanks for himself and his men for their reception.

His speech, delivered in Italian, in part was:

"It is impossible to find sufficient words for me and my companions to thank the people of Chicago.

"I have made many acquaintances here and know I will make good friends—as are our two nations.

"Chicago is a great city.

'Hurrah for Chicago! Hurrah for the United States!"

Gen. Balbo smiled broadly when Mayor Kelly told of a Chicago street being named for him and of tomorrow being designated "Balbo Day' 'at the World's Fair.

Messages came from the American Secretaries of War and of the Navy.

Cheering crowds lined Michigan boulevard as the flyers were taken to a hotel and thousands milled about in front of the hotel. The flyers rested 45 minutes and then made ready to be feted again at a dinner dance at the Saddle and Cycle Club.

Parading through the fair grounds to the Italian pavilion, Italy's flyers were greeted by thousands massed on the exposition ground.

At Soldier Field before throngs the flyers were welcomed by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, Gov. Horner and others.

Chicago's Mayor said the flyers "did something immeasurably more valuable to the world than the linking of our two distant nations in

ECONOMIC BLOC AMONG AMERICAN NATIONS PROPOSED

U. S. Delegate to London Parley Said to Have Discussed Plan for Trade Concessions.

MUTUAL TARIFF AGREEMENT PLAN

Experimental Period Suggested — Efforts at Conference to Save Some Part of Program.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 15.—The United States delegation today made preparations to try to save something of its tariff truce and world price-raising program as the World Economic Conference moved toward its final 10 days of work.

Prospects of important results are regarded in some quarters as meager, however, and the delegation is discussing a separate movement of several western hemisphere nations to try to form a New World economic bloc.

It is reliably reported in Latin-American circles that Ralph W. Morrison of the American delegation has participated in discussions exploring the prospect of a joint agreement of several American nations to grant mutual trade concessions, possibly along the lines of the Ottawa agreement between Great Britain and the Dominions.

Western Hemisphere Plan.

Morrison declined to discuss his work in connection with the western hemisphere movement, but it has been learned from other sources that he has had several private meetings with Alberto J. Pani, Secretary of the Treasury of Mexico; Dr. Joaquim Francisco de Assis Brasil of Brazil, and Orestes Ferrara, Secretary of State of Cuba. It also has been learned that he has arranged to sail next Wednesday, several days earlier than originally planned, to report to President Roosevelt.

It is understood that the suggestion has been advanced in some Latin American circles that a group of nations might agree to grant mutual tariff concessions, of say 10 per cent, for an experimental period, perhaps a year. In successive years a further reduction might be made along such lines as it seemed had generally aided, while tariffs might be restored in any line where reductions seemed to do harm.

Case of the Tariff Truce.

The steps to be taken to preserve President Roosevelt's general tariff truce, which was for the duration of the conference, remain undecided. The American delegation, however, has prepared a tentative statement which may be offered as an addendum to the report of the Economic Commission Drafting Committee.

The American thesis is that currency stability cannot be achieved until price levels have advanced to a point to bring the economic structure into balance once more, and a tentative resolution which the American delegation may submit for consideration to the conference is understood to state in effect that each country should decide what price level it requires, then proceed to achieve it by whatever means most feasible.

A Delegate Sums Up.

Summing up the work of the conference, one leading American delegate said the most impressive thing was the universal agreement as to the need of reducing trade restrictions. Despite short disagreements as to the proper time and methods, he felt that the stage had been definitely set for piecemeal progress in the future.

The economic subcommission which attacked the problem of a world-wide reduction of trade barriers has issued a report of its drafting committee which, in effect, acknowledges that its work has been sabotaged in the monetary controversy which disturbed the conference for so long.

Sweden to Negotiate With U. S. for Trade Agreement.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Sweden made a favorable reply today to the American invitation to negotiate for a trade agreement with the United Staes. The charge of the legation, Baron Johan Beck-Frisao, notified Acting Secretary of State William Phillips.

Argentina and Colombia have accepted similar invitation. Brazil and Portugal were invited to begin such negotiations, but have not replied.

STEEL CODE FILED; 15 PER CENT PAY RISE AND 40-HOUR WEEK

turing industry and the shipbuilding and shiprepairing trade will go under examination on Wednesday. The next day a code for the lumber trade will be taken up. The following Monday, July 24, a collection of codes proposed for the petroleum industry will be examined; and the wool industry's 40-hour week plan with minimum wages of $13 South and $14 North will be taken up.

The steel hearing probably will be begun that week and so will one on coal. One group of operators has filed an agreement, but the two largest, northern and southern non-union operators, who control 70 per cent of the bituminous coal output, will get together here Monday to reduce the two codes they have completed to a single one if possible.

That will put the bigger raw material industries, with the exception of non-ferrous metals, copper, zinc, etc., all in process of joining the industrial control program. Big lines still not heard from include automobiles, machinery and chemicals, but their agreements. too, are looked for in the near future.

An agreement is expected next week from the National Retail Council, which is trying to frame one plan suitable to the two million or so stores in every community which sell everything that people buy.

Details of Steel Code on Hours, Pay and Prices.

The steel code filed today called for its administration through the board of directors of the Iron and Steel Institute, 30 men to be chosen who, Lamont said, were representative of 80 per cent of the industry.

Its labor provisions are: Forty hours work week, averaged over each six-month period; common labor minimum wages of 25 cents in Southern districts, running up to 40 cents in the bigger producing centers; a flat increase of 15 per cent for workers above the minimum; preservation of the present system of collective bargaining through work councils or company unions "without interference, restraint or coercion of any sort," with final appeals lodged in the head of each company, and with no outside unionization.

This, however, was qualified by subscription to the mandatory clause of the recovery law which maintains the right of workers to organize in any way they see fit and deal with their employers through delegates of their own free choosing.

No specific control of production volume was proposed beyond forbidding increase of any plant's pig iron or ingot producing capacity.

On prices, an elaborate system of "basing points" was set up for each product. Each mill must report its prices, as at present, to the Steel Institute, whose board may investigate them if need appears. Discounts for prompt payment were fixed at one-half of one per cent for payment within 10 days except in the case of shipments from the Eastern zone to the Pacific coast, when the limit is 25 days. Maximum periods of free credit also were prescribed.

Here are the detailed minimum wage schedules for various sections of the country:

Eastern district, 35 cents an hour; Johnstown, 37; Pittsburgh, 40; Youngstown, 40; North Ohio River, 40; Canton, Massillon and Mansfield, 37; Cleveland, 40; Buffalo, 38; Detroit-Toledo, 40; South Ohio River, 37; Indiana, Illinois, St. Louis, 37; Chicago, 40; Southern, 25; Birmingham, 27; Kansas City, 35; Duluth, 37; Colorado, 40; Utah, 39; Seattle, 38; San Francisco, 37; Los Angeles, 35.

Figures on the actual number of workers in steel plants available here were not regarded as dependable by officials because of the many changes that have been taking place. In 1931, with the industry running between 60 and 70 per cent of capacity, census figures listed 264,000 workers. Now the 60 per cent mark again is being approached but technical changes may have reduced the number of men involved.

essary for states and municipalities to get part of the $1,500,000,000 fund. The White House indicated strongly that the best collateral that could be offered for the 70 per cent that must be repaid would be a levy on the earnings of the self-liquidating projects. It was also made clear at the White House that none of this fund would be used merely to create employment. There must be some provision for self-liquidation.

More Liberal Than R. F. C.

The Roosevelt-Ickes policy on municipally-owned utilities reflects a more liberal attitude than that taken by officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which was authorized to make self-liquidating loans to states and municipalities. The R. F. C. has made many loans for developing publicly owned water supply and sewerage disposal systems but only a few loans for municipally owned electric power plants. The reluctance of the R. F. C. to make such loans has been attributed to the fact that Harvey C. Couch, president of the Arkansas Power and Light Co., is one of the corporation directors.

The immediate aim of the Public Works Administration is to put a million men back to work by Oct. 1. Yesterday the Cabinet Advisory Board allocated $115,513,660 of the $3,300,000,000 fund. Thus far $753,513,610 has been allotted, including $400,000,000 for Federal road aid and $238,000,000 set aside by President Roosevelt for naval construction over a period of three years.

U. S. TO SET UP TWO NEW FARM BANKS HERE SOON

St. Louis Area Will Be Testing Ground for First of Production and Co-operative Credit Units.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Two new banks to provide funds for agriculture, a production credit band and a co-operative credit bank, soon will be established at St. Louis. Farm credit administration officials later will set up similar agencies in the other 11 cities where Federal land and intermediate credit banks are situated.

Governor Henry Morgenthau Jr., of the administration was reported today to have decided to make St. Louis a testing ground for the new banks authorized in the farm credit act passed shortly before Congress adjourned.

The production credit banks will have $120,000,000 available for subscribing to stock of production credit associations which will be organized among farmers. These associations will be modeled after the national farm loan associations, of which there are now more than 4000 and through which farmers obtain farm mortgage loans from Federal Land Bank funds.

Must Subscribe for Stock.

Each farmer will be required to subscribe to association stock equal to five per cent of the loan desired in order to borrow. The association will authorize the loan and the farmer's note will be discounted through the intermediate credit banks.

The production credit bank will have as its chief purpose the establishment and supervision of the associations and will not be a lendin institution except in advancing money to provide capital for the associations.

The co-operative credit bank will make loans to regional farm co-operative groups from the remainder of the $500,000,000 revolving fund originally provided for the Federal Farm Board. Losses on Farm Board efforts to stabilize wheat and cotton prices reduced this fund to about $150,000,000 of which $68,000,000 today was in cash.

Regional or local co-operatives in order to qualify for loans also will be required to subscribe for stock equal to 5 per cent of their loan.

National co-operatives will obtain their loans directly from the credit administration in Washington through Francis W. Peck, the co-operative loan commissioner, who has taken over the farm board's lending functions.

Mortgage Refinancing Plans.

The Farm Credit Administration today announced farm mortgages held by closed and restricted banks in Minnesota would be refinanced immediately after completion of the campaign to thaw out Wisconsin mortgages. The administration was reported to be planning the transfer of its force of appraisers and other employes from Wisconsin to Minnesota late in the fall. After the Minnesota campaign is completed, it is tentatively planned to sen dthem into North Dakota.

The plan provides for buying first mortgages held by closed and restricted banks, and now is being put in operation in Illinois, Iowa and South Carolina in addition to Wisconsin, where the plan was first employed. Morgenthau will leave Washington July 24 to visit states where the program is being used, and make a study of its actual working.

STEEL COMPANIES INCREASE WAGES OF 100,000 MEN

Minimum Hourly Rate Generally Fixed at 40 Cents Instead of Present 33 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 15.—More than 100,000 men employed in the steel industry today received notice that their wages would be increased. Coincident with the submission of an industrial code in Washington by the steel industry, announcement was made of 15 per cent increases by several important corporations, with the minimum hourly rate generally fixed at 40 cents compared with 33 cents in most cases at present.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. was the first to announce a 15 per cent increase, effective tomorrow.

Immediately similar increases were made known by the Republic Steel Corporation, the Sharon Steel Hoop Co., the Corrigan McKinney Steel Co. of Cleveland, the Carnegie Steel Co. of Pittsburgh, the National Steel Co. of Pittsburgh, the National Tube Co. of Lorain, O., and the Follansbee Brothers of Wheeling, W. Va.

Another firm to announce like increases was the American Steel & Wire Co., a subsidiary of United States Steel. Otis Steel Co., at Cleveland posted a notice immediately establishing the 40-cent minimum and declaring the company's intention of following the steel code in all its details.

The United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the nation's first and second largest steel concerns, were silent, but it was pointed out the code submitted at Washington called for a general 15 per cent increase. It also was noted the Carnegie Steel Co. and the National Tube Co., the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., and the American Steel and Wire Co., subsidiaries of U. S. Steel, were among those announcing increases.

In the South, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. announced at Birmingham, Ala., that it would raise wages from 17½ to 25 per cent, effective Monday. The pay of common labor will be increased from 23 to 27 cents an hour, with a 10-hour working day, and the schedules in the manufacturing and transportation departments will be increased from 20 to 25 per cent. About 4500 employes will benefit.

The increases mark a partial restoration of two cuts given laborers during the depression. In September of 1931, wages were reduced 10 per cent, and in May of 1932 an additional 15 per cent was sliced off.

The increases announced by the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., the Sharon Steel Hoop Co. and the Republic Steel Corporation will affect 40,000 men in the Mahoning and Shenango Valleys.

The increase by Carnegie Steel will affect 30,000 more in the Youngstown and Pittsburgh districts. About 6000 workers at Lorain will benefit by National Tube's action, 4000 at Cleveland by American Steel & Wire's; 4100 more at Cleveland by Otis Steel's, an additional 3000 at Cleveland by Corrigan, McKinney's; and 1100 at Follansbee, W. V., and Toronto, O., by Follansbee Brothers' increase.

Similar wage advances were announced yesterday by the Wheeling Steel Corporation for 12,000 employes at plants in Ohio and West Virginia and by the Great Lakes Steel Corporation at Detroit for 4000 men.

Plan to Brand Code Goods With Government's Approval And Urge Public to Buy Them

Patriotic Insignia Would Be Used and "4-Minute" Speakers Put on Stump—Drive to Bring All Industry Into Line.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A rain of proposed codes of competition was precipitated by President Roosevelt's bland suggestion that he might proclaim a minimum wage-maximum hours schedule for all industry, pending permanent codification of individual industries, but it was learned tonight that officials of the national recovery administration are considering a new and drastic method to bring recalcitrant industries into line.

Under the proposed method, the Government would authorize the use of certain designated insignia by industries whose codes had been approved. An emblem conveying patriotic implications, such as the American eagle or the national coat of arms, would be selected, and industrial concerns operating under codes would be authorized to display it on their buildings, labels, advertisements, etc. It would amount to a certificate of good character from the Government.

In addition, the plan contemplates the launching of a propaganda campaign of the kind employed during the war to sell Liberty bonds. Posters, the radio, "four-minute speakers" and other campaign devices would be used to persuade the public to patronize only those industries which operated under codes of fair competition.

As will be seen, the effect of such a program would be to proclaim a Government-sponsored boycott against industries that refused to conform. Naturally, a much softer word would be used in official circles.

Alternative to Licensing.

This method of bringing recalcitrant industries into line with the administration's plan to increase mass purchasing power by raising wages and creating jobs, was advanced as an alternative to the licensing system provided in the recovery act. Under this section of the law the President is authorized to license all industries engaged in interstate commerce, or in business affecting interstate commerce. It was intended that he could if necessary, withhold licenses from those who refused to abide by codes of fair competition.

The fact is that the administration is wary of this provision, and reluctant to employ it. Its legal advisers have stated that they believe it to be constitutional, but there is a substantial fear that the courts might hold otherwise, in which event the entire scheme of codifying industry would collapse.

Accordingly, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson or some other resourceful member of the administration hit up the idea of the insignia. Apparently there is no question of the Government's legal authority to grant permisison to firms and industries to display insignia showing that they are operating under codes, or to prohibit their use by those who are not.

Neither the administrator nor any of his aides will admit publicly that the program is being studied, although some of the posters submitted as models for the publicity campaign has been seen in recovery administration headquarters in the Commerce Building. Those who privately acknowledge what is happening admit that the plan might seem a little high-handed at first blush, but that public welfare demands the recovery program shall succeed.

Avalanche of Codes.

The administrators are still scrambling to emerge from the avalanche of proposed codes which descended on them after the President's suggestion of a tentative code for all industry, but they are not fully satisfied. A large percentage of the new drafts came from small and obscure industries, while some of the most important, notable the automobile industry, continue to hold back.

It has been made abundantly plain, both at the White House and Johnsons' office, that the administration is determined that the recovery program shall succeed, and that it is prepared to resort to any legal method to insure its success. The codification of industries is the very heart of the program.

TWO ACCUSED OF SENDING EXTORTION NOTE TO GROCER

Warrants were issued yesterday charging Alfred Harden and Hosie Johnson, Negroes, with sending a threatening letter to Arthur Ikens, a grocer, at 1208 North Nineteenth street, demanding $500.

Harden, a former convict, told police and postoffice inspectors, they said, that he had conceived the idea of extorting money from Ikens, whose brother, Charles, a grocer at 3969 Easton avenue, was the victim of a similar plot about a year ago, and had selected his victim at random.

Both went to jail unable to furnish bonds of $5000 each.

'JOHNSON HARD MAN TO FOOL,' FORD THINKS

Auto Man Agrees Administrator Is in "a Pretty Tough Spot."

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 15.—Observing that Hugh Johnson, administrator of the industrial recovery act, "is in a pretty tough spot," but will be "a hard man to fool," Henry Ford said in an interview today that thus far everything has indicated that the Government is acting with good intention in carrying out its program.

"Of course, there are a lot of surmises going around," he said. "We hear a lot about intended 'interference.' My position is that there will be time to deal with interference when it shows itself. So far as I have been able to see there has been nothing of that yet."

The pioneer automobile manufacturer expressed confidence in the ability of Gen. Johnson, and remarked that the administrator "has a fine mind and a broad understanding of American ideals. Tricksters in business had better not try tricks on him."

Ford said he thought the men most likely to "feel the sting of the act" would be those "who take their profits out of the workers' pay envelopes instead of earning them by their own brains."

"The first thing needed," he said, "is modern hours of work and a modern scale of wages. It is easy enough to raise wages if you make your customers pay for them. But, as I understand it, that will not be permitted.

"Prices have shot up even where wages and materials have not been affected, and that is not right. That is what put us where we are. The Government wants to put wages up first and let prices follow naturally."

Ford said he did not believe in some of the things now being proposed and added: "I doubt if the Government believes in them, either."

"For instance," he continued, "I don't believe you can get very far making the good manufacturer pay for the backward manufacturer. We are not entirely ignorant of the basic principles of business and I don't believe you can violate any of them without paying pretty heavily for it. You can't create a new set of principles as you can invent a new tax. These things are founded in nature."

Italian Air Fleet Reaches Chicago; Wildly Acclaimed

terms of minutes rather than miles."

"The flight," he said, "has strengthened anew the bond of friendship that has existed between our people and your people since this republic was formed."

Gov. Horner said the flight illustrated forcefully the progress of the world during the last 100 years and "the progress that our world's fair stands for."

"The flight heralds definitely the coming of regular trans-Atlantic air travel in the not far distant future," the Governor said.

On the Wilmette Ambassador Rosso joined Prince Rospiglioso of Rome, delegated by Premier Mussolini to attend the welcoming ceremonies.

Also welcoming Gen. Balbo and his men on the Wilmette were Prince Potenziani, Italian representative at the World's Fair; Italian Consul-General Guiseppi Castruccio, in full diplomatic garb, Mayor Kelly of Chicago; Harry S. New, United States Commissioner to the fair; Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois and other dignitaries.

Over navy pier floated the Italian national ensign. As the 24 Italian planes bobbed at anchor, the United States army planes flying above them spelled out the word "Italia," and blimps floated lazily through the sky trailing greetings spelled in Italian to "Balbo and the sons of Great Italy."

One Plane Has Some Trouble

One of the Italian planes, commanded by Capt. Borghetti, appeared to have some trouble. As the ship settled down on the water its engines began to go again full blast. It was learned later that Capt. Borgetti's motor trouble was due to a clogged fuel line. He refused to leave his cabin until all was in working order again.

He was then taken from the plane to a small boat and finally aboard the Wilmette.

The delay caused a pause before the 97 visiting Italians and their Ambassador actually stepped ashore.

So great was the crush aboard the Wilmette that Gen. Balbo asked the Consul to protect his men, and United States Marines, army and navy squads formed a guard line. Members of the Reception Committee explained that apparently unauthorized persons had gotten aboard.

So great was the crush at navy pier that three persons were injured and taken to an emergency hospital. One boy suffered a broken arm and two young men were cut by glass from a broken window.

"I am amazed at the warmth of our reception," Gen. Balbo said, speaking in Italian. "It is so warm I fear for our safety.

"We have had a glorious trip." Finally the Italian commander came ashore with Gov. Horner, Rufus C. Dawes, president of the exposition, and Consul Castruccio.

The air fleet came from Montreal, 770 miles away, in 6 hours, 51 minutes, making a total of 47 hours, 30 minutes flying time for the 6000 miles.

The Italians expect to remain in Chicago three or four days. They will fly home over the Southern Atlantic route—New York to the Azores Islands, to Gibraltar, to Rome.

Million Witness Spectacle.

It was estimated that more than a million persons witnessed the landing. Spectators waved their arms, and roars of applause welled up as the Italian planes settled on the lake.

The planes were sighted at 5:28 p. m., roaring in toward the city from out over Lake Michigan. Accompanying them were 42 Army planes from Selfridge Field. The 24 planes were in perfect formation of eight triads. Bright sunshine glinted from their silver wings. There was not a cloud in the sky and only a slight breeze ruffled the lake and the mile-square area reserved for the landing.

Thousands lined the lake front and other thousands watched the arrival of the planes from downtown streets and the windows of office buildings and hotels.

Rosso Joins Balbo at Montreal.

Ambassador Rosso joined Gen. Balbo at Montreal this morning as the seaplanes hopped off on the final stage of its flight.

The takeoff was delayed until after 10 a. m. because the Ambassador's train from Washington was late. Gen. Balbo met him at the station and the two sped in an automobile to the harbor, where a small band of Italians cheered a farewell.

Gen. Balbo's flagship arose from the water at 10:14 a. m. Immediately two other craft, forming the first trial, were in the air.

The other planes followed, kicking up clouds of spray from the surface of the St. Lawrence River.

The Italian flyers had stopped here overnight after flying from Shediac, N. B. On that trip they had paid their first visit to the United States, flying over Maine for a short time.

Enroute Gen. Balbo radioed this message for retransmission to Rome:

"This leg has been very hard and the longest except the crossing of the Atlantic. We had to modify our course, passing to the north of Lake Ontario because over the lake there were forecasts of thunderstorms.

"We have found throughout this leg of the flight very rough air which taxed out nerves, but now that we are in sight of Lake Michigan about 60 miles off Chicago all our fatigue has disappeared."

The air fleet was scheduled to take off from Orbetello, Italy, on June 25, but it was July 1 before the 25 planes got away.

From Orbetello Balbo led the way north over the Alps to Amsterdam. There one of the ships was capsized and wrecked in alighting on the Zuider Zee. One man was killed, three were injured.

Nevertheless the 24 planes remining flew to Londonderry, Ireland, the next day; and on July 5 they proceeded to Iceland, alighting on a bay near Reykjavik. They were held a week in Iceland waiting on the weather. Then, on July 12 (Wednesday), they hopped to Cartwright Bay, Labrador. The next day (Thursday), they moved on to Shediac, New Brunswick, and on the following day (Friday), to Montreal. From Montreal they flew to Chicago.

The Italians covered about 6000 miles, flying in mass formation, in 15 days.

ROME, July 16 (Sunday).—Enthusiastic thousands bearing lighted torches paraded in the downtown streets of Rome at midnight in celebration of the arrival of Gen. Balbo and his air squadron at Chicago. News of the arrival was received late at night. The public was informed by the blowing of sirens continuously for half an hour.

Cafes and clubs, many of which were filled with parties awaiting the news, were converted into scenes of jubilation.

Premier Mussolini was informed immediately. He ordered congratulations wired to Gen. Balbo and his men.

Pope Pius wired Cardinal Mundelein to confer special benediction.

Scenes similar to those in Rome were enacted in towns and cities throughtout the country. In port cities, steamships joined with sirens in raising a tumult.

In all the cities people paraded the streets singing Fascist hymns and cheering Mussolini and Balbo.

WOMAN IN LOTTO CASE GIVES BOND ON INDICTMENTS

Mrs. Bess Finnegan, Who Has Dodged Service for Two Weeks, Appears Voluntarily.

Attired in summery blue and white, Mrs. Bess Finnegan, 5850 Easton avenue, who has evaded service for nearly two weeks in depositions concerning the operation of lotto games taken by Associate City Counselor McKeown, appeared at Municipal Courts Building yesterday and made $1000 bond on two lottery indictments.

Charges against Mrs. Finnegan were based on raids April 11 and June 25 on "socials" at Carpenter's Hall, North Grand boulevard and Cozens avenue, said to have been given for benefit of Spirit of St. Louis post of the American Legion. Thomas A. Casey, service officer of the post, which was organized at Veterans' Hospital, was indicted with her and furnished similar bond.

Casey gave his deposition in hearings in connection with the Legion post's suit to enjoin the police from interfering with lotto games, but process servers and, for the last 10 days, Sheriff's deputies, were unable to find Mrs. Finnegan. Casey and others testified that Mrs. Finnegan paid $450 a month rent but obtained only $10 a "social" from the organization.

"Social" was camouflage, McKeown contended in an answer filed yesterday in the injunction suit. The suit had described the activities as legitimate "recreational games and amusement." The answer for the police denounced that as "a sham and pretense, designed to deceive the public, the Legion post under whose name and auspices the gathering was to be held, and the public."

Attorney Richard Hart told a reporter at Municipal Courts Building that he planned to withdraw the injunction suit.

JOHN R. BOOTH, MILLIONAIRE CANADIAN, WEDS AMERICAN

Bride Is Betty Jane Smith; Both Divorced Previous Mates Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—In the presence of relatives and friends, John Rudolphus Booth, millionaire sportsman of Ottawa, Canada, and Betty Jane Smith of Philadelphia, were married today.

The ceremony took place in the Overbrook Presbyterian Church and was performed by the Rev. Dr. Harold F. Carr, pastor of Asbury-University Methodist Episcopal Church. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lloyd Smith. The best man was Capt. Frank Badgley of Ottawa.

Grandson of one of Canada's pioneer industrialists, the first John Rudolphus Booth, who died at 100, after amassing a vast fortune, the bridegroom is an aviation enthusiast, fancy skater, big game hunter and war veteran. His bride is the daughter of the late Roland Hilton Smith of Tulsa, Ok. Both Mr. and Mrs. Booth obtained divorces at Reno, Nev., last year.

TWO PLANES GOING EAST SEEN OVER NEWFOUNDLAND

mission to fly over any of the countries along their route except Newfoundland. They had no clearance papers.

Darius and Girenas had been in altercation with official Washington about permits to fly over countries between the United States and Lithuania and left without obtaining these permits. The dispute centered on who should pay $100 for cost of cables to the countries in question. A Commerce Department official in Washington when informed of their action said that if they should land in some country on their route it would be embarrassing to the United States Government and make the fliers subject to some disciplining by that country.

Orange and Silver Plane.

The big orange and silver Bellanca monoplane was loaded to capacity with 779 gallons of gasoline, 135 of which was in five-gallon cans, and 25 gallons of oil. The plane bore the markings NR688E.

The takeoff was loggy. The flyers used every foot of the long runway and were so slow in getting away that the crowd gasped. "It was a game takeoff," said flying experts. "They should have dumped gas to play safe, but they didn't. They didn't dump and drop."

When the plane passed out of sight, headed east, the plane still had not attained an altitude of more than 200 feet.

For food they took 18 oranges, 12 apples, two bottles of malted milk tablets, a quart of black coffee, a roast chicken, and a gallon of water.

Post, who will try for a world solo record as well as attempting to better his own time, is elaborately equipped. He will be aided by a robot pilot, designed to keep the plane on its course and maintain its altitude and lateral stability. "I'm going to let the robot do all the work," Post said before the takeoff.

The Winnie Mae, weighing more than any ship that ever has left Floyd Bennett Field for a trans-Atlantic flight, has a cruising speed of 170 miles an hour, with a top of 210 miles. Besides the robot pilot, it carries a new radio compass devised by the United States army.

He carried a food supply and elaborate equipment. Three packages of chewing gum and a box of hard toast were packed with a quart of water and a quart of tomato juice. Extra shirts, ties, underwear and a razor were stowed away, together with three patches for his left eye, which he lost in 1926 on an oil well job.

Other Equipment.

His other equipment included maps, passports, wireless guide, extra parts for his plane, fishing lines and hooks, a cigarette lighter, mosquito netting, a sleeping bag and a flashlight.

For defense he carried an Indian tomahawk, which other flyers said he keeps sharpened to razor keenness. Another prized possession is a trick parachute which he can slip on in a hurry in event of an emergency.

Post planned six stops on his 15,400-mile flight—Berlin, Novosibirsk, Khabarovsk, Fairbanks, Alaska; Edmonton, Alberta and New York. He has expressed the hope of completing the journey in less than a week.

Post and the Lithuanians were reported flying into good weather along the North Atlantic coast, but the takeoff of the monoplane Lithuanica in a heavy mist was considered a difficult feat.

SUIT OVER $8,000,000 ROCKEFELLER TRUST

Mrs. Muriel McCormick Hubbard Seeks Part of Principal.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—A contest started by Mrs. Muriel McCormick Hubbard of Middletown, Conn., over a trust fund valued at present at $8,000,000 created by John D. Rockefeller Sr. for her mother, the late Edith Rockefeller McCormick, was disclosed in Supreme Court today.

Mrs. Hubbard contends that she is entitled to four-sevenths of the principal of the trust fund, while the Chase National Bank, trustee of the fund, declares that the terms of the trust agreement provide that the bank continue to hold the principal and pay its income to Mrs. McCormick's children, Mrs. Hubbard, Mrs. Mathilde McCormick Oser of Switzerland, and Fowler McCormick of Chicago.

On application of the bank, Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck today granted a motion permiting it to take the testimony of Judge Charles S. Cutting of Chicago, who drew up Mrs. McCormick's will, before the case reaches trial.

Thomas A. Ryan, of counsel for the bank, said that Judge Cutting was 79 years old and in the Presbyterian Hospital at Chicago, about to undergo a major operation.

The attorney said that since Mrs. Hubbard contended that her mother's will by "implication" intended her to have four-sevenths of the principal of the fund immediately, that it would be necessary to take Judge Cutting's testimony with respect to communications he had with Mrs. McCormick prior to and at the time she executed her will.

"For these reasons'" Ryan said, "the plaintiff believes that it is of the most extreme urgency, inasmuch as Judge Cutting is the only person now living in the world who is informed on some of these matters, that this order be granted as requested."

The attorney said that when the trust fund was created by Rockefeller July 3, 1917, the trust agreement gave Mrs. McCormick limited powers of disposing of the principal of the trust at her death to her children and charities.

DR. MILTON J. HOPKINS DIES, PRACTICED HERE 37 YEARS

Came to City in 1897; Was Graduate of Old Missouri Medical College.

Dr. Milton J. Hopkins, who had practiced medicine here for 37 years, died of a kidney ailment yesterday at Barnes Hospital. He was 73 years old and resided at 336 North Newstead avenue.

Dr. Hopkins was born in Michigan and lived in Indian Territory before he came to St. Louis in 1892. He was graduated from the old Missouri Medical College in 1896.

He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Byrne; a son, Milton J. Hopkins Jr. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Arthur J. Donnelly's chapel, 3840 Lindell boulevard, followed by cermation.

W. R. VICKROY, TEACHER HERE 50 YEARS, DIES

Former Principal of Manual Training School Victim of Heart Disease at 74.

William Rees Vickroy, former principal of Manual Training School of Washington University, and a teacher in St. Louis for 50 years, died of heart disease yesterday at his home, 2901 Rauschenbach avenue. He was 74 years old and had been kept from school work by illness since last March.

Prof. Vickroy was associated with the late Prof. Calvin M. Woodward, known as "the father of manual training" in the early work of Manual Training School, which Dr. Woodward founded in 1879.

He graduated from Washington University in the class of 1883, and in that year became principal of Baden grammar school in North St. Louis. He was later principal of Bates School, and in 1887 he joined the faculty of Manual Training School, then at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, and conducted as a branch of Washington University.

Prof. Vickroy was principal of Manual from 1903 until the school was closed in 1915. The closing of Manual, like that of its brother institution, Smith Academy, came after the city high school system had so expanded its courses as to make the separate school needless.

Mr. Vickroy was added to the faculty of Soldan High School, after the closing of Manual, and taught English and mathematics at Soldan thereafter, except that from 1918 to 1920 he was at Blewett Junior High School.

He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Clara Sessinghaus of St. Louis; one son, Theodore S. Vickroy, and two grandsons; also a brother, S. P. Vickroy of St. Louis, and three sisters living elsewhere.

The funeral will be held Tuesday at 3 p. m. at the Church of the Unity, 5015 Waterman avenue. Prof. Vickroy had held most of the higher offices of the Scottish Rite of Masonry, and was past commander of St. Aldemar Commandery, Knights Templar.

Prof. Irving Babbitt Dies.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 15.—Prof. Irving Babbitt, 68 years old, of Harvard University, an outstanding figure in the field of literature, died today. He was professor of French literature. He was an exchange professor from Harvard to Sorbonne in 1923. He was the author of many works.

ADDITIONAL PLANS FOR MISSOURI VOTE ON U. S. DRY REPEAL

Time for Precinct, County, Senatorial District Meetings Fixed in New Schedule by Gov. Park.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 15.—Gov. Park today virtually completed preparation of the schedule for calling a Missouri convention to act on ratification of the proposed amendment repealing the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. He designated the time for a series of precinct, county and senatorial district meetings to nominate delegates to the convention.

Last Tuesday he announced the State-wide election, in which either a solid repeal delegation, or a delegation solidly opposed to repeal, will be chosen to sit in the convention, would be held on Saturday, Aug. 19. The convention will be held in Jefferson City on Aug. 29.

The New Schedule.

The Governor today announced this schedule:

His official proclamation setting up the machinery for the convention will be issued on July 25, one day after the effective date of the Weeks Act, prescribing the procedure.

On Wednesday, July 26, at 3 p. m., mass meetings of qualified voters will be held simultaneously in each of the 4233 precincts of the State. In counties of more than 350,000 population (applying only to the city of St. Louis and to Jackson County, including Kansas City) the precinct mass meeting will elect delegates directly to senatorial district conventions. In counties of less than 350,000 population the precints will elect delegates to county conventions.

On Thursday, July 27, at 11 a. m., county conventions will be held in counties of less than 350,000 population, to elect delegates to senatorial district conventions.

On Friday, July 28, at 3 p. m., conventions will be held in each of the 34 State Senatorial Districts, to nominate two sets of two each to the State convention, one set favoring the repeal amendment and one opposing it.

The only detail still to be arranged by the Governor is the meeting place in each of the senatorial districts. The meeting places for precinct and county meetings will be fixed by the local county courts, except where boards of election commissioners replace the county courts in handling election matters.

All of these arrangements, not official so far because the new law is not in force, will be validated and become effective through issuance of the Governor's proclamation on July 25.

The procedure in the series of preliminary meetings is designed to bring about a convention whose members either will unanimously favor or unanimously oppose the proposed amendment.

Each precinct in the City of St. Louis and in Jackson County will choose one delegate favoring and one delegate opposing the amend-

The code of fair competition being drawn by the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners will include provisions making insurance of all customers' garments and concise statement of guarantees compulsory, A. P. Hartman, secretary of Scott's Cleaning Co., 3829 Olive street, said yesterday.

Vote of 3 Southern States This Week May Determine If Repeal Can Be Put Over in 1933

Alabama and Arkansas Hold Elections Tuesday, Tennessee on Thursday—Previous Tests Indicate Close Result.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The votes of three Southern states, in the next five days, may determine whether the eighteenth amendment can be repealed within the calendar year 1933.

Alabama and Arkansas hold elections Tuesday to name their delegates to state conventions to vote on the proposed twenty-first amendment, repealing the eighteenth. Tennessee holds its election Thursday.

Supporters of repeal in the three states believe their cause has been greatly furthered by President Roosevelt's appeal to the people of the South, asking that they back up the national administration and the Democratic national platform in this matter.

The President's telegram to National Committeeman McCord of Alabama was followed by Postmaster-General Farley, who in a radio address from Memphis to the people of Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama, advocated repeal, as a measure of "true temperance" and on grounds of revenue.

Victory for repeal in these three states would be taken generally as meaning that the once dry-voting South has turned against prohibition. It would indicate a likelihood that repeal will be completed before the beginning of 1934.

Poll Shows Close Vote.

The Literary Digest, on the basis of the vote of Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee in its 1932 prohibition poll, predicts that the vote in the three states will be close. Of the votes cast in the poll, 44.51 per cent were dry in Alabama, 47.76 per cent dry in Arkansas and 48.54 per cent in Tennessee. The Digest points out that some states have cast a larger percentage of dry votes in the repeal elections than they did in the poll.

Oregon, which votes on the repeal issue Friday, last November gave a large majority for the repeal of its state enforcement statute, and its vote for repeal is considered certain.

If Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee and Oregon are added to the 16 states whose people have voted for repeal, the number of states so voting will be increased to 20, of a required 36 for adoption.

Fifteen other states have set election dates thus far in the year 1933. They are: Missouri, Aug. 19; Texas, Aug. 26; Washington, Aug. 29; Vermont, Sept. 5; Maine, Sept. 11; Minnesota and Maryland, Sept. 12; Idaho and New Mexico Sept. 19; Arizona, Oct. 3; Florida, Oct. 10; North Carolina, South Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania Nov. 7.

Dates Set in 35 States.

These 15, added to the 16 states which have voted for repeal and the four to vote in the coming week, make 35 states voting in 1933. If all go for repeal, the number would still be one short of what is required. But there is a possibility of repeal elections this year in Montana and Utah, the Governors of which have been authorized to fix dates either in 1933 or 1934. Could these states, with the foregoing ones, be added to the repeal column, repeal would win in 1933 with one vote to spare.

The Oklahoma Legislature has just voted to authorize the Governor to call a special election on the repeal issue at any time after Dec. 5. If Gov. Murray does not choose to call the special election, the matter will go over until the 1934 general election.

There is a possibility, but not a likelihood, that Colorado and Mississippi may provide, at special legislative sessions, for elections this year.

Nebraska and South Dakota have decided to defer their vote until the November, 1934, election. In Kentucky, Mississippi and Virginia, Legislatures will not meet until next year. In Georgia, Kansas and North Dakota, no legislative provision has been made for a vote on repeal.

The 16 states which have voted for repeal are: Michigan, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Wyoming, New York, Delaware, Nevada, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Iowa, West Virginia and California.

ADDITIONAL PLANS FOR MISSOURI VOTE ON U. S. DRY REPEAL

ment, to attend the conventions of the senatorial districts in which the precincts are situated. The senatorial district conventions then will nominate the two sets of two delegates to the State convention.

Each precinct in counties of less than 350,000 population will elect two delegates, favoring and two opposing the amendment to the county convention. In the county convention four delegates favoring and four delegates opposing the amendment will be elected to a senatorial district convention. The rural senatorial districts, like those in the cities, will choose two sets of two delegates, one set for and one set against the amendment.

Names of the delegates nominated in the senatorial district meetings will not be printed on the ballot of the election on Aug. 19. On it will appear the text of the repeal amendment and alternatives for the voter, as follows:

"(1) For the delegates favoring the pending amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"(2) For the delegates opposing the pending amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The voter will express his preference by scratching the delegation he does not wish to support. If he wishes to vote for the repeal amendment, he will draw a line through clause No. 2. If he wishes to vote against repeal, he will draw a line through clause No. 1.

The delegation receiving a majority vote will be seated in the State convention as a unit.

To expedite handling of the arrangements, the Governor said he would send a letter to the various county courts and the election boards of St. Louis, St. Louis County, Kansas City and Jackson County, asking them to announce lists of precinct meeting places, and county meeting places, where county conventions are held, in advance of July 25. He will ask the county courts and boards to be in session on July 25 to validate their advance arrangements by official announcements, as soon as the Governor validates his advance arrangements with his official proclamation. There is no requirement in the Weeks act as to the time in which notice must be issued in advance of the precinct, county and senatorial district meetings.

MAN EMPLOYED 50 YEARS BY CITY NOT TO LOSE JOB

Discharge of Hubert Ruff, 74, a Mistake, Water Commissioner Daily Says.

Hubert Ruff, 74-year-old employe of the Water Department, will not lose his job, as had been announced, as a result of a municipal political shakeup. His discharge, after 50 years of service in the department, was a mistake, Water Commissioner Daily said last night.

"The rule is that no employe with a service record of more than 30 years may be laid off, but since the records do not go back so far, Ruff's period of service was not known when his discharge was ordered," Daily explained. "He will keep the same job at the same salary and will lose no time as a result of the error."

John Ruff, his son, was dismissed after 23 years in the same department, to leave the city payroll Aug. 1. The elder Ruff resides at 8456 Concord place and his son at 916 Elias avenue. About 1800 jobs have changed hands so far in the Democratic shakeup.

To a St. Paul Man
Who asks the Reason

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

A man in St. Paul, Minnesota, makes courteous inquiry on the subject of the Ford spring. He relates a recent experience in which a salesman felt he could not sell his own make of car without first depreciating the Ford car in this customer's mind. The main attack was made on the Ford spring. I take pleasure in explaining this point.

We use transverse springs in Ford cars for the same reason that we use round wheels—because we have found nothing better for the purpose.

Most people think that the only purpose of a spring is comfortable riding. But springs, and even very flexible springs, can cause discomfort as well as danger. A good spring must not only be comfortable—it must be safe. It must also assist operation economy. The spring we use serves all three purposes.

A transverse spring—which simply means a spring set crosswise—gives comfort. It is like the wings of a bird—the tips move most, while the body remains steady. I cannot prove that in a letter, but you can prove it in a Ford V-8. Any dealer will gladly allow you the opportunity.

The safety reasons for the transverse spring may be simply stated. In rounding a curve or turning a corner, one side of the car naturally lists downward. Transverse springs do not lift up the opposite side. They actually decrease the car's lean-over. Each spring is set in line with the axle and is attached at its center to the frame. This tends to prevent that swaying on a curve which is so uncomfortable and often dangerous. Notice for yourself how greatly these springs control this in our car.

Transverse springs also make steering and braking exceedingly safe. The Ford car is not driven through its springs. Hence the axles do not see-saw back and forth and so cannot interfere with normal steering and braking action.

Now, about economy. Unsprung weight is that part of the car weight that does not rest on springs. For tire economy it must be low in proportion to sprung weight. It must be low to prevent excess jarring of the frame and body. In the Ford car it is low, due to the use of transverse springs.

We choose to retain the transverse spring for the above good reasons. From every point of view it justifies our choice. If there had been anything better for our car, we would have used it.

We make these springs ourselves—every leaf in every spring—set them up and install them. We know what they are and we know why we use them.

E. H. BAUMANN DIES; POLITICAL FIGURE HERE

State Senator From South Side From 1903 to 1907 — 68 Years Old.

Edward H. Baumann, former State Senator and long a figure in Republican politics here, died of a complication of diseases yesterday morning at St. Anthony's Hospital. He was 68 years old and resided at 6169 Pershing avenue.

For about two months he had been in poor health and he had been confined to his home for several weeks. He went to the hospital a week ago for an operation, which, however, was not performed.

A colorful incident in Mr. Baumann's career occurred in 1905, when he was State Senator from the Twenty-ninth District and a leader in the Senate. At that time United States Senators were elected by the two houses of the Legislature, jointly.

The Republicans, who controlled the Legislature, in caucus nominated Thomas K. Niedringhaus, chairman of the Republican State Committee. Through neglect of the presiding officer of the caucus, its members were not pledged to vote for the party choice. Richard C. Kerens, who later became Ambassador to Austria-Hungary under President Taft, was defeated for the nomination in the caucus, but called on his followers to bolt.

Protracted Deadlock.

This caused a protracted deadlock, with frequent votes of the joint houses. By alphabetical chance Mr. Baumann was the first Republican on the roll call. His colleagues were instructed to vote the way he did. He was a staunch supporter of Niedringhaus but sometimes, by agreement, voted for other candidates to test strength. It was impossible to elect either Kerens or Niedringhaus, and finally William Warner of Kansas City was chosen.

Mr. Baumann was a Senator, representing a South Side constituency, from 1903 to 1907. He stood against some of the early efforts to enact prohibition laws.

Born here June 29, 1865, Mr. Baumann attended Washington University and for a time was employed as a surveyor. He was special tax assessor for the old Board of Public Improvements from 1895 to 1901 and was Ninth Ward Republican Committeeman from 1895 to 1899.

Surviving are Mrs. Baumann and three daughters, Mrs. J. R. Mickle of Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.; Mrs. C. S. Gill of Carbondale, Ill., and Mrs. John J. Mullally of Evansville, Ind. The funeral will be at the Wagoner mortuary, 3621 Olive street, at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, with burial in St. Paul Rock Hill Cemetery, Baumgartner road, St. Louis County.

UNIVERSITY CITY MAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July 15.—Martin Lazerwitz, 74 years old, of University City, died today of injuries suffered last night when he was struck by an automobile on Lake Shore Drive. He was visiting a daughter here.

Lazerwitz, who was retired, resided with a son, Bert, at 605 Westgate avenue.

GETS DIVORCE AT CLAYTON FROM J. PERCY FINKENAUR

Wife Charges Secretary-Auditor of Refrigerator Firm With Indignities.

Mrs. Constance B. Finkenaur obtained a divorce at Clayton yesterday from J. Percy Finkenaur, secretary-auditor of the American Refrigerator Transit Co., on grounds of general indignities.

Circuit Judge Mulloy awarded her $100 a month alimony. In brief testimony, Mrs. Finkenaur said although she conducted the family home, 232 Bristol road, Webster Groves, "to the best of my ability," her husband became cold and indifferent, told her he was sorry he married her and that he no longer loved her.

They were married in 1905 and separated recently. They have two grown sons. Finkenaur was represented by counsel but did not contest.

CITY DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH BEING REORGANIZED

Commissioner Bredick Making Changes to Conform With Views of United States Public Service.

Reorganization of the Health Department to end waste motion and focus responsibility in every phase of its work was announced yesterday by Health Commissioner Joseph F. Bredeck, appointed last April on recommendation of a physicians' committee.

Modernization of the department set-up along lines approved by the United States Public Health Service and American Public Health Association follows, in general, the recommendations laid down in 1927 by Dr. Haven Emerson of Columbia University, distinguished public health consultant.

Dr. Emerson, in an exhaustive survey for the Community Council, rated the department 780 on a scale of 1000, and pointed out inadequacies which the reorganization is designed to correct. It goes somewhat further in centralization than even the recommendations of Dr. Emerson.

While the department has been outstanding in many respects for years, Dr. Bredeck explained, its revamping along modern lines will end what he called "free wheeling"—activities not fully tied in with related functions in the department or subject to definite and responsible supervision. It ends such anomalies as the control of milk by the City Chemist, or the duties of sanitary adviser which sometimes devolved upon the City Bacteriologist.

Sanitary Code Has Faults.

Not all the anomalies can be so cured. Some of them arise in the sanitary code itself, such as the requirement that dance hall complaints go to sanitary inspectors. The ordinances are under study, with a view to revision so that nuisance complaints and other police matters shall go to police, and the Health Department left free to concern itself with public health.

Dr. Emerson had recommended separate divisions for secretarial service and popular health education. They are to be combined here, since the work of one contributes directly to the functions of the other. Those functions are important as any in the department, emphasized Dr. Bredeck, since public information and support are the chief reliance for public health. Another division will record and analyze vital statistics.

Every other activity of the department is grouped under four sections, the heads of which form a sort of cabinet, meeting with Dr. Bredeck at least once a week. Largest of these is the section on medical, dental and public health nursing, headed by Dr. Paul J. Zentay. Dr. Bredeck's assistant, and taking in eight formerly uncorrelated branches.

Laboratory Section Changes.

A laboratory section is headed by Dr. Joseph C. Willett. It comprises a chemical and bacteriological laboratory, concerned only with laboratory work. Milk control, formerly under the city chemist, comes now under the food control section, headed by Dr. J. S. Koen. Sanitary questions, once a frequent perplexity of the city bacteriologist, now go to the sanitary section, headed by W. Scott Johnson, a sanitary engineer, who will call on the laboratory section only for such tests as he requires.

Milk Is Largest Branch.

Milk will concern the largest branch of the food control section. Separate branches will have control of meats and of other foods.

Activities in the assistant health commissioner's section are divided into maternal hygiene, child hygiene, mental hygiene, public health nursing, epidemiology and contagious disease control, tuberculosis control, social hygiene and dental hygiene. Each has its director, and every specific activity of the department is grouped under one of the eight heads, such as the 31 chest clinics under tuberculosis control, the 10 health centers under public health nursing, or the three child guidance clinics under mental hygiene.

In addition to the co-ordination within the department, Dr. Bredeck and his cabinet are planning a closer co-operation with physicians in private practice and the medical schools, and of each division with the organizations of aims related to its work, such as the Board of Education hygiene department, the Tuberculosis and Health Society, the Provident Association, Visiting Nurse Association, Health and Hospital Council, Mental Hygiene Society, and so on.

$250,000 Estate Claim Denied.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The claim of Thomas Wilson, Negro of Nashville, Tenn., that he is the son and legal heir of the late Dr. Daniel H. Williams, noted Negro physician and surgeon, was rejected today by Probate Judge Oscar S. Caplan. The bulk of Dr. Williams' estate, worth $250,000, was left to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and to Negro educational institutions. Dr. Williams was said to be one of the first physicians to remove a human heart from the body and replace it successfully.

French Birth Rate Still Declines.

PARIS, July 15.—The French birthrate continues to dwindle. Official figures for the first quarter of 1933 showed an excess of deaths over births of 32,259 as compared with 9397 in 1932.

Dr. Brinkley Threate To Broadcast-

Owner of XER Faces Possible Cur Activities Through New Regula Barring Programs in English, Authorized, and Setting Up Cens Broadcasting.

NEW radio regulations issued by the Mexican Government have heartened the United States delegation to the Radio Conference in Mexico City for their fight to curb broadcasting by Americans ousted from the air but licensed by Mexico, and have caused Dr. John R. Brinkley, owner of XER (735 kc), to threaten to buy a large ship, erect on it a powerful station and broadcast from beyond the 12-mile limit off the coast of this country.

The new regulations provide for two classes of stations in Mexico—commercial and cultural—the former presumably to be operated by private persons, the latter by the Government. Licenses are to be issued only to Mexicans or Mexican corporations. All operators must be Mexican. All programs must be in Spanish unless the Government gives special permission for use of other languages.

ADVERTISING over Mexican stations, particularly medical, must be approved by the Secretary of Communications, and there are provisions for monthly inspection fees ranging from $50 to $350 and for payment to the Government of 5 per cent of gross revenues. Foreign studios are prohibited, and rebroadcasts from foreign countries are not to be allowed except by special permission.

BROADCASTERS in this country interpret these provisions to mean the possible end of what they call "outlaw" stations on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, including Dr. Brinkley's XER and Norman T. Baker's XENT, which have "squatted" on or between United States-Canadian channels and have caused considerable interference with United States stations.

Dr. Brinkley Threatens To Broadcast From Ship

Owner of XER Faces Possible Curbing of His Radio Activities Through New Regulations by Mexico Barring Programs in English, Unless Specially Authorized, and Setting Up Censorship of Medical Broadcasting.

NEW radio regulations issued by the Mexican Government have heartened the United States delegation to the Radio Conference in Mexico City for their fight to curb broadcasting by Americans ousted from the air but licensed by Mexico, and have caused Dr. John R. Brinkley, owner of XER (735 kc), to threaten to buy a large ship, erect on it a powerful station and broadcast from beyond the 12-mile limit off the coast of this country.

The new regulations provide for two classes of stations in Mexico—commercial and cultural—the former presumably to be operated by private persons, the latter by the Government. Licenses are to be issued only to Mexicans or Mexican corporations. All operators must be Mexican. All programs must be in Spanish unless the Government gives special permission for use of other languages.

ADVERTISING over Mexican stations, particularly medical, must be approved by the Secretary of Communications, and there are provisions for monthly inspection fees ranging from $50 to $350 and for payment to the Government of 5 per cent of gross revenues. Foreign studios are prohibited, and rebroadcasts from foreign countries are not to be allowed except by special permission.

BROADCASTERS in this country interpret these provisions to mean the possible end of what they call "outlaw" stations on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, including Dr. Brinkley's XER and Norman T. Baker's XENT, which have "squatted" on or between United States-Canadian channels and have caused considerable interference with United States stations.

The United States delegation at Mexico City was prepared to protest vigorously against licensing by Mexico of these and other stations known to be backed by Americans denied radio privileges in the states.

Whether this interpretation is correct remains to be learned from Mexico City. The American-financed stations across the Rio Grande make no secret of their intention to serve the northern audience, and will probably fight any restrictions. In fact, Dr. Brinkley's XER has the former Vice-President of the United States, Charles Curtis, representing it as an "observer" at Mexico City.

DR. BRINKLEY, who is spending a vacation on his yacht on Green Bay, Wis., is quoted as saying, in a telegram: I have previously stated, and repeat, that should anything happen to my broadcast over XER in Mexico, I will purchase a large ship, equip it with a powerful station and broadcast beyond the 12-mile limit. Mexico has passed a law prohibiting language other than Spanish over her radio stations, except by special permit, and prohibiting use of time by a physician not registered in Mexico. If this is enforced to the letter, no American physician can lecture over Mexican stations in English, which would nullify my broadcast. It is my intention to continue broadcasting, but I may have to go to Santo Domingo, Haiti or some other island."

As has been told in this section, Dr. Brinkley's XER was built to use 75,000 to 80,000 watts power, but has been authorized by Mexico to increase power to 500,000 watts. Norman T. Baker's XENT is licensed to use 150,000 watts. Two other 500,000-watt stations have been licensed on the Mexican border, but neither has been erected.

Stratosphere Flight Broadcast Tomorrow Night.

SPECIAL TRANSMISSION equipment has been installed in the balloon gondola for the Piccard-Compton stratosphere flight, a description of which will be broadcast over the WJZ chain tomorrow night if the weather permits an attempt at a record ascent into the air. The flight is scheduled to begin about 9:30. A three-watt transmitter, for voice transmission, will be connected to the cosmic ray reception apparatus in the gondola with the idea of broadcasting the electrical impulses set up by the cosmic rays. The radio mechanism in the gondola will weigh 125 pounds. A half-wave Zeppelin type aerial will be coupled to the gondola transmitter. A 20-meter receiving aerial will trail from the bottom of the car. Both the transmitter and the receiver in the gondola will be sealed as a protection against the excessive humidity which will build up in the car interior during the flight. The radio apparatus was tested July 6 with an NBC chain audience listening. At 8:45 tonight the WJZ net will carry a discussion of the flight by Jean Piccard and Commander T. G. W. Settle, who will be the balloon pilot.

Historic Drug Store Auction to Be Broadcast.

THE CBS chain will carry, at 11:15 Wednesday morning, a description of the auction of the historic Leadbeater drug store in Alexandria, Va. Citizens of Virginia have raised funds to buy the old store for the city as another monument of Revolutionary days. The store was patronized by the Washingtons, the Fitzhughs, the Fairfaxes, the Lees, the Ramsays, the Carlyles and dozens of families of the late 1700s. The last of his line, Edward Stabler Leadbeater, died recently. It was in this drug store that an obscure army lieutenant, acting as messenger for Major-General Winfield Scott, handed to Col. Robert E. Lee sealed orders which started him on his historic journey to Harper's Ferry to put down the John Brown insurrection. There, too, is a letter from George Washington, setting forth the first President's "appreciation of your indulgence" in the matter of an unpaid bill. Washington gave his expenses in constructing Arlington House as the reason for delayed payment.

Purple Blue, Maroon Gain in Favor as Automobile Colors

Gay Looking Gray and Yellows Popular on Cars Seen at Paris Style Show.

The Duco Color Advisory Service's Automobile Color Index will say: "Although black still leads in volume of sales, purple blues and maroons have climbed considerably higher on the ladder of consumer appeal since June."

With reference to European automotive color preferences, the Index will state: "The first elegance competition of the Paris season for custom made automobiles was held recently in the Champs Elysees, with 135 cars displayed. Women owners, dressed so that costume and car would present as stunning and harmonious a unit as possible, drove their entries. Prizes were awarded for the most effective ensembles.

"A census of the car colors displayed showed black was a slight favorite. Of greater interest, however, is the fact that greys and yellows, formerly little used, were next to black in order of prominence, blue having been relegated to fourth place for the first time.

"The prominence of grey as a custom car color favorite at this contest can be readily understood, on the basis that it is now most favored by Parisian style arbiters. The majority of greys displayed on these cars were not of the dark, lifeless variety, but ligh and gay looking greys similar in character to the high value neutrals sponsored originally by Patou.

"Chromium plated decorations—belts and stripes—were numerous. Chromium plated bumpers were in several instances embellished with gay colored stripes.

"The great majority of cars were fitted with disc wheels finished in the body color or accented with wide bands of contrasting hue.

"Upholstery selections were mostly plain broadcloth. Some leather was used. Piping in contrasting colors proved a more prominent upholstery feature than usual."

Goodyear Factories Have Added Over 6000 To Payroll Since Apl. 1

'More than 6000 additional workers have been re-employed in Goodyear's factories since April 1, according to A. W. Ellis, branch manager in St. Louis.

"This includes tire factories in Akron, Los Angeles and Gadsden, Ala., and cotton Mills in New Bedford, Mass., and Cartersville, Cedartown and Rockmart, Ga.

"Renewal tire sales show an upturn of 90 per cent in excess of normal seasonal improvement since March.

"Increased orders are coming into Goodyear's factories and production of Goodyear tires has increased 100 per cent since January. To take care of this increased production, factory employment has been stepped up 35 per cent since that time .

"Only former Goodyear workers are being employed. Men are being taken on in the reverse order from that in which they were laid off, as the most valuable men were kept as long as possible and the family situation was taken into consideration. Where possible, married men with families were kept longer than married men with no children, and married men longer than single men. Virtually all of the men laid off in 1932 and 1931 have been rehired."

Chevrolet Reports Best June Sales Record Since 1929

With dealers reporting the best June retail sales—78,564 units—since 1929, the Chevrolet Motor Co. in the first six months of this year accounted for more than 67 per cent of its domestic quota of 450,000 cars for 1933, H. J. Klinger, vice-president and general sales manager, announces.

Retail deliveries reported by dealers for the first half totaled 304,952 new cars and trucks compared with 253,225 in the same period last year, Klinger said.

Reported June sales were 80 per cent ahead of last June and 20 per cent ahead of May this year, even exceeding the 78,117 units sold in June, 1931, and the 73,700 sold in June of 1930.

Despite a slow start in the first quarter due to bank morotoria and generally unsettled conditions, the Chevrolet executive said that in the second quarter retail sales have shown a constantly growing gain over last year, the greatest margin of increase occurring in June with its 80 per cent jump over June of last year.

Roads to Chicago Fair On New Sinclair Maps

To meet the demand for World's Fair route information, the Sinclair Refining Co. has issued 3,000,000 new road maps showing main highways from coast to coast, with a mileage table giving the distances to Chicago from key cities in all parts of the United States and the distance from any of these cities to any other.

The maps chart approximately 250,000 miles or surface roads all over the United States and show the location of more than 14,000 cities and towns ranging from a population of 100 upwards. Each map has a marginal cross-index and an alphabetical list of the cities and towns in the State, with their population figures, as well as index figures which by reference to the marginal index makes it easy to find the roads to any given point.

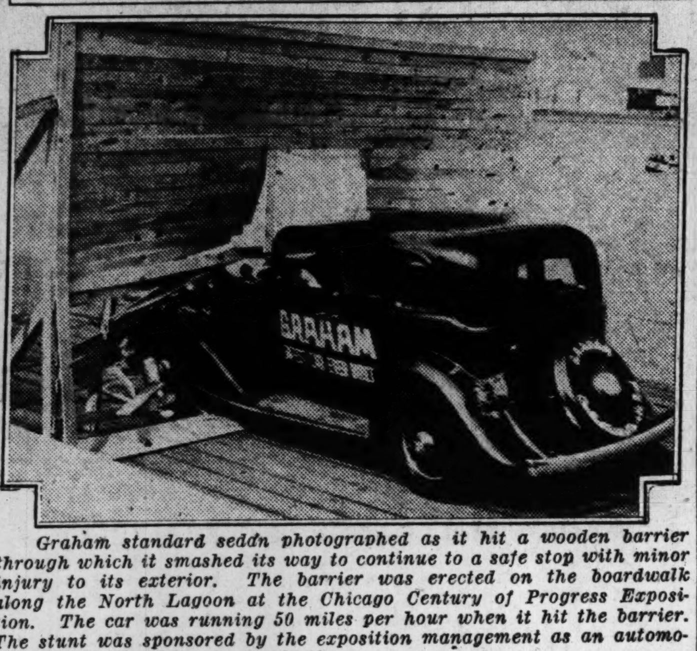
Rams Barrier as Safety "Stunt"



Graham standard sedan photographed as it hit a wooden barrier through which it smashed its way to continue to a safe stop with minor injury to its exterior. The barrier was erected on the boardwalk along the North Lagoon at the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition. The car was running 50 miles per hour when it hit the barrier. The stunt was sponsored by the exposition management as an automobile safe construction demonstration.

Looking Over the Cars

Would an American motor car manufacturer dare use the word "arrogant" as description of the demeanor of his product on the road? A British manufacturer does it—and successfully.

The rear wheel and axle shaft of this year's Chevrolets can be removed as a unit. The flange to which the wheel is bolted is forged integrally with the axle shaft. It also tends to reduce unsprung weight.

Oldsmobile has no coach model, but offers a five-passenger coupe instead. It is proving to be the leader in the line.

Decarbonizers are standard equipment on the two larger eight-cylinder products of the Chrysler corporation. With the special valve seat inserts used, 'tis said that 50,000 miles between grindings is normal performance.

The vertical depth of Graham's novel looking bumper is eight inches. It offers better fender protection.

Three-inch propeller shafts are used in the various Pierce-Arrow products; three inches in diameter, that is.

There's a maroon de luxe Ford V-8 coupe.

Rockne's 70-horsepower engine is five horsepower up over the 1932 model.

Hupp's six-cylinder coupe is another model that merits the word "svelte" as to appearance.

With 119 inches wheelbase for the smallest model, there no longer appears to be any "little" Buick.

La Salles come in two sizes. The smaller series is on a wheelbase of 130 inches; the larger on 136 inches.

Stutz DV-32, the alphabetical symbol meaning "dual valve," not only is a powerful engine, but also is fast. It turns up to 3900 revolutions per minute.

Cadillac-La Salle Sales Show Large Gain Over June, 1932

Four salesmen of the Oliver Cadillac Co.—C. C. Graham, John E. Vollmer, I. G. McNiece and Francis Sam Estaque—who are back from Chicago after attending a three-day convention of the Merit Men, an honorary organization of leading Cadillac-La Salle salesmen, report that Cadillac executives are optimistic over increasing sales in the last two months and definite prospects of a good summer.

Guy W. Oliver, president of the Oliver Cadillac Co., reports Cadillac sales in June were larger than any month since May of last year, being 9 per cent more than in May of this year. He predicts that July sales will be from 20 to 25 per cent greater than for July of last year.

The 114 salesmen who attended the convention had an aggregate retail volume of sales in 1932 amounting to $6,688,300.

John C. Chick, general sales manager for Cadillac, reports that Cadillac and La Salle sales were 58 per cent greater in the last 10 days of June than in the same period last year, and 77 per cent greater than in the second 10 days of this June.

Production schedules have been revised upward for the next three months on definite dealer commitments.

Autos for Road Patrol.

In Pennsylvania, the highway patrol is to try automobiles for its road work instead of motorcycles. First aid kits and fire extinguishers will be carried. The change from motorcycles to cars was made because of the belief that accident hazards will be reduced and better protection afforded the general public.

A 1904 Ford which traveled St. Louis street the past week to demonstrate that an automobile radio receiver can be attached, installed and operated successfully in any motor car, no matter how old or of what peculiarities of design. Running Engine Doesn't Affect Aim

G. F. Petersimes of Detroit firing and scoring ten hits within a 1⅜-inch circle at 100 yards while his rifle was resting on the windshield of a Dodge car whose engine was running. The test was made to demonstrate how the floating power engine mounting nullifies motor vibrations so that virtually none are transmitted to the body of a car. Army officers and rifle club officials who supervised the target practice are shown in the photograph. The engine was run at a speed approximating that necessary to produce 25 miles per hour on the road.

Ten Hits in Bullseye Firing From Dodge Car With Engine Running

Rifleman Uses Windshield as Rest for Consecutive Hits in 'Floating Power' Demonstration.

A demonstration of proving the effect of "Floating Power" engine mounting by checking it against the accuracy of the U. S. Army rifle and the skill of a rifleman, has just been held. "Floating Power," developed by Chrysler Motors engineers, consists of new mountings supporting the engines or Dodge cars in such a way that the power impulses, which are of an explosive nature and recur in rapid succession, are so neutralized and cut off from the rest of the car, that no motor vibration is communicated to the body of the car or to the occupants.

G. F. Petersimes of Detroit, an expert rifleman and, a Chrysler mechanic, fired ten aimed shots with a U. S. Army rifle and service ammunition at a regulation target, at a distance of 100 yards. During aiming and firing the rifle rested on the windshield of the car. Petersimes being seated in the car.

The car from which he shot was a new Dodge Six convertible coupe, the engine of which was running through the firing at the 100x100 target.

Col. E. M. Lubeck, acting as chief observer and judge of the test, said: "If during the test shooting any vibration of the engine had caused the body of the car, and with it the marksman and the muzzle end of the rifle, to move as little as 1-32 inch, the 10 steady, consecutive hits, which in the Petersimes target are grouped within a circle only 1⅜ inch in diameter, could have shown a maximum dispersion of 10 inches. Allowing for inevitable sighting errors, for movement of the rifle due to the firer's heart action, for variations in ammunition and other factors acting on the bullet in its flight, the 10-shot group might not have been closer had it been fired from a solid concrete platform instead of from an automobile with motor running at speeds equivalent to 20 to 25 miles an hour. Aside from the marksmanship displayed by Petersimes, the target proves that the motor operating in the Dodge car from which the shooting was done transmitted no vibration to the chassis or body structure."

First Sleeping Berths On American Planes

The flying sleeping berth has made its advent on the night planes of American Airways between Cleveland, O., and Los Angeles, Cal., on the company's Southern transcontinental line.

The berths, made by folding two of the plane's soft cushioned chairs, forms a horizontal cot. These cots are made up with linen and blankets by the co-pilot. Each of the tri-motored planes accommodates six sleeping passengers.

Sleeping planes are to be in operation on American Airways' transcontinental line within a year. They will be equipped with built-in berths as comfortable as in a Pullman car. Dressing rooms will be provided at the airports and passengers may board planes ready to retire. In the morning they will transfer to a high speed day ship to complete the last leg of their trip.

Chrysler Dealers' Sales Best Since Peak Week in October, 1928

Retail deliveries of Chrysler and Plymouth cars by Chrysler dealers in the week ending July 1 exceeded by 482 cars the previous peak week of Oct. 27, 1928, according to J. W. Frazer, general sales manager of the Chrysler Corporation. This is the best Chrysler week since that of July 28, 1926.

It was the twelfth consecutive week in which Chrysler dealers' deliveries increased. The figures exceed by 15.5 per cent the week ending June 24, which was the largest previous week since Oct. 27, 1928. Forty-seven per cent of this increase was on Chrysler cars and 7½ on Plymouths.

The month of June, including Saturday, July 1, exceeded June, 1932, by 57 per cent. Retail deliveries from Jan. 1 to July 1 were 23 per cent ahead of those in the corresponding period of 1932.

Shimpents of Chrysler cars in June were 93 per cent ahead of those in May, which had been considered a good month. Orders indicate that July will be another bumper month for Chrysler dealers.

Graham Car Driven Through Wooden Barrier at 50 M. P. H.

Demonstration at Chicago Fair to Show Progress in Auto Construction.

A stock Graham standard sedan recently was driven at 50 miles per hour through a wooden barrier erected on the boardwalk along the North Lagoon at the Chicago World's Fair. The stunt was sponsored by the exposition management as a demonstration of progress in automobile construction.

Several thousand persons, in grandstand seats, watched as a racing driver steered the Graham against the barrier at 50 m. p. m., saw the car knock a hole through it and roll on safely to a stop some distance beyond.

When the car was backed in front of the stand, examination showed that it had suffered only slight damage to its exterior. The safety glass in the windshield was cracked, but not shattered. The headlamps were bent back on their supports. There were a few scratches on the body finish.

The car's low center of gravity, air-stream lines, safety glass windshield and general ruggedness made the demonstration even more successful than had been hoped for by its sponsors.

The demonstration marked a visit to the fair by more than 100 Graham distributors and dealers from all parts of the Middle West to take part in an exposition driveaway. Robert C. Graham, executive vice-president of Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, presiding at a dinner held on the grounds, said that the corporation would show a profit for the first six months of the year.

Growing Oldsmobile Sales Are Reported

June sales of Oldsmobile were 235 per cent above those in June last year and topped the May total by 450 cars, reports R. M. W. Shaw, sales manager.

June production and shipments exceeded any June since 1929. Both production and shipments have been controlled in line with retail sales demand. Used car stocks are at a minimum.

So far as July is concerned, present orders indicate a volume of business equal to that of June.

Jay Walking Increasing.

After analyzing automobile accident and casualty figures of New Jersey for the first three months of 1933, the motor vehicle commissioner reports that jay walking is on the increase in the State. Of the 237 fatalities, pedestrians comprised 62 per cent, as compared with 54 per cent last year. Of the 5287 non-fatally injured, 35 per cent were pedestrians, an increase of 3 per cent over last year.

N. A. MacConnel

The appointment of M. A. MacConnel as manager of Royal Tire Service, 3229 Washington avenue, is announced by Matt J. Herold, district manager, United States Rubber Products, tire division.

MacConnel was transferred to the managership of the company's St. Louis store from Saginaw, Mich., where he held a similar position.

He has had wide experience in retail tire merchandising.

Dodge Dealers' Sales Continuing to Gain

Dodge dealers' retail sales in the holiday-shortened week ending July 8 totaled 4506 vehicles, a 293.2 per cent increase over the business in the corresponding week of 1932.

Of the 4506 units sold at retail, 2070 were Dodge passenger cars; 1870 were Dodge dealers' share in the sales of Plymouth sixes and 558 units delivered were Dodge commercial cars and trucks.

The period of Jan. 1 to July 8 this year, as compared to the corresponding period of 1932, showed an increase of 101 per cent in retail deliveries of Dodge passenger cars, of 45.4 per cent of Plymouth cars sold by Dodge dealers and of 26.4 per cent of Dodge trucks.

Studebaker Sales Best Since June, 1930

Studebaker wound up the first six months of 1933 with the highest volume of June business since 1930, according to Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Sales Corporation of America.

"Sales of Studebaker and Rockne passenger and commercial cars in June reached a total of 5050 units," Hoffman said. "This was 8.5 per cent ahead of June, 1931, when 4656 cars were sold, and 5.9 per cent over June, 1932, when 4770 sales were made.

"Although these sales gains are substantial, they would have been even greater had the factory's June production schedule (set two months ago) been able to meet all of the dealers' demands for cars."

Special Showing Of Auburn '8' and '12' New Salon Models

Many Improvements — All Cars in Salon Line Have "Dual Ratio."

The Salon models of the Auburn 160 horsepower "Twelve" and 100 horsepower "Eight" are being displayed in a special showing by the Frampton Sales Co. Numerous major improvements and refinements are embodied in these cars, all of which have "dual ratio," which provides two rear axle ratios, selected as the driver pleases—one for unusually fast get-away acceleration and use on heavy grades, the other for normal driving. This latter enables a car to make the same speed with a third fewer engine revolutions. Wheelbases of the Salon models are 133 inches for the "Twelve" and 127 for the "Eight."

Improvements include a new engine combustion chamber; downdraft intake manifold for the Eight; new type of rubber-aircushion engine mounting; automatic Bijur chassis lubrication; dual oil filtering; silent-constant mesh transmission for quiet shifting; L. G. S. free wheeling in all three forward speeds; hydraulic internal expanding brakes, with a Bendix vacuum booster on the Twelve that can be set for four driving conditions—dry, wet, snowy or icy roads.

A feature is the "X plus A" type of frame. Auburn engineers, who in 1929 pioneered the now generally adopted "X" type of frame, have added an "A" member to the front end. This construction makes the new frame twice as strong as its predecessor, with greater roadability and riding comfort. Its rigidity also prolongs the life of the body.

Every Auburn Salon body is insulated from the frame of the car by composition rubber and fabric pads which will not distort under pressure from body bolts. The entire exhaust system is rubber-mounted. Exhaust murmurs are thus prevented from being transmitted within the body of the car. A half-inch layer of hair felt is placed under the carpets in front and rear compartments.

The inside of the dash is insulated from heat and noise by a three-layer mask of composition board, felt and asbestos.

An innovation in body construction is the airplane type tubular strut bracing in the cowl. Tubular braces extend from the front door pillars to the center of the dash, and two other braces from the front of the dash down to the side rails of the frame on either side of the engine.

Interiors are richly and harmoniously finished.

Rush June Business For Pontiac Factory

June brought a rush of business for Pontiac of unusually large proportions, according to Sales Manager R. K. White.

"There has been a steadily rising tide of Pontiac buying ever since the New York show," said White. "There was a definite culmination of this in the third 10-day period in June, which was well above any other similar period in recent experience. The June sales curve rose steadily from the first. The third 10-day period was nearly 96 per cent above the first 10-day period. It is probable that our July operation may come close to that of June."

You can SEE it's the Style Leader!

We can PROVE it's the Performance Leader!

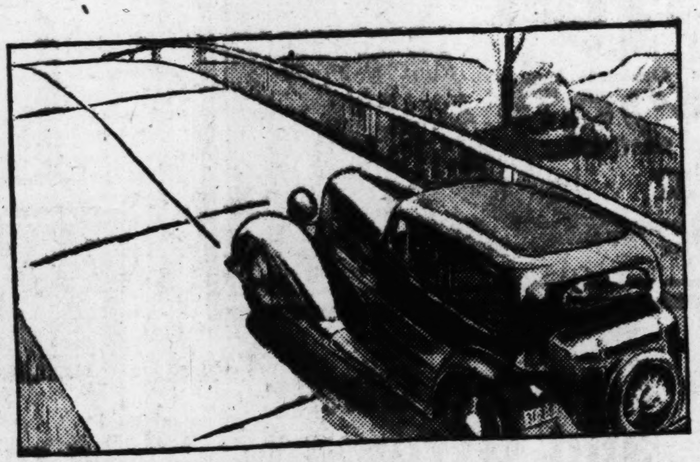
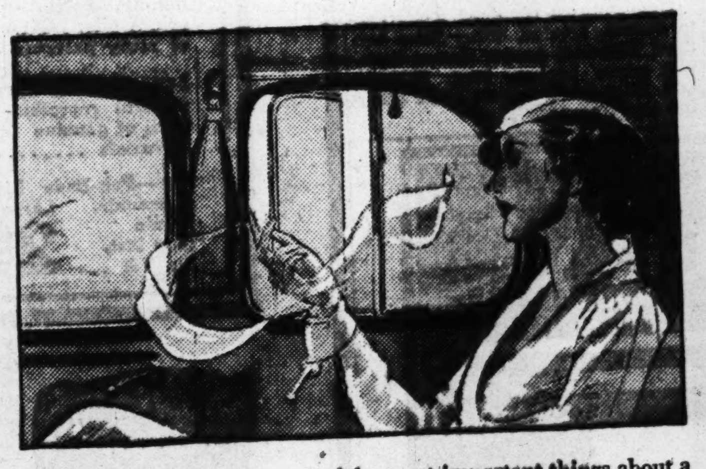
You can see that Oldsmobile is the smartest car on the highway—that its style is a full year ahead of current design. But there is another great value factor about Oldsmobile which you can't see so readily. It's Oldsmobile performance! Many people say that Oldsmobile is the finest performing car they ever drove, regardless of cost. Certainly, in its field, there is nothing to compare.

Illustrated and explained below are some of the outstanding phases of Oldsmobile performance. Study these pictures and read their captions. Then, come in and let us prove that Oldsmobile is also the Performance Leader! Incidentally, a demonstration will help explain why Oldsmobile built and shipped more cars in the first five months of 1933 than during all of 1932!

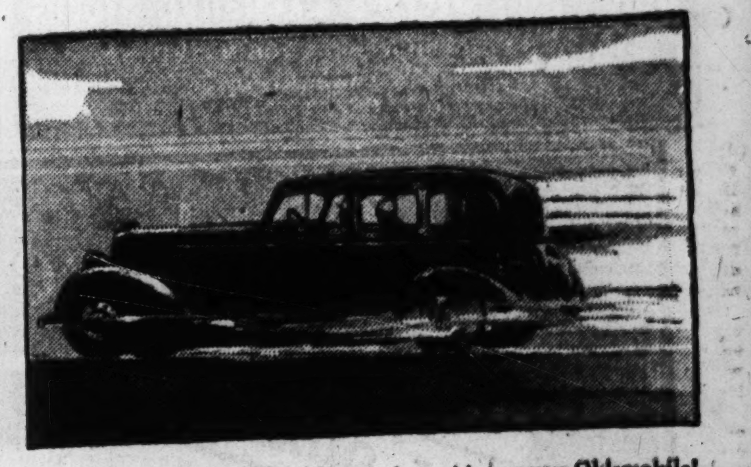
● It adds so much to the zest of driving when you know that your car has swift and easy acceleration. In a new Oldsmobile, you can accelerate at practically any speed you desire. And you can be first at the signal light almost any time you say so.



● You won't need your second gear on even a man-size hill. Owners who have driven thousands of miles say they have never once been compelled to resort to the use of second gear—except when starting. There is power to spare in an Oldsmobile.



● Winter and summer—one of the most important things about a motor car is its ventilation system. Oldsmobile has Fisher ventilation—the finest in the world. In the winter, plenty of fresh air without draft! In the summer, great quantities of air to cool you!



● Do you like to ride fast? If so, take a ride in a new Oldsmobile! The Eight-Cylinder Oldsmobile will do 80-85 miles an hour—actual stop-watch speeds. The Six will do 75-80! And the engines are so smooth and quiet that you can scarcely hear them run!

How DO you judge a car's Performance?

On every hand, you hear claims and counter-claims about performance. How do you sift these claims? How do you find out, for yourself, what car best suits your own driving preferences? With the help of the engineers at the General Motors Proving Ground, Oldsmobile has prepared a new and very helpful booklet—"How to Test the Performance of a Motor Car." This booklet does not advertise Oldsmobile. It is simply a plain exposition of what to look for when you take a demonstration. The things you are told to look for in this book are the things engineers look for when they test a car at the General Motors Proving Ground. Never before has anything like this been published. This booklet is free! Get your copy today—at our showroom.

TRANSIENT'S SKULL FRACTURED

Miami (Fla.) Man Knocked From Box Car Entering Tunnel.

George Timmons, 43 years old, of Miami, Fla., suffered a skull fracture yesterday afternoon when knocked from a box car as a Missouri Pacific freight train entered the Barrett Station tunnel, five miles east of Valley Park.

He was taken to St. Louis County Hospital by Chief of Police Richard James of Valley Park. A companion, Dan Swingler of Hutchinson, Kan., said they were on their way from Cincinnati to Wichita, Kan., seeking work.

ALBANY KIDNAPERS WITHHOLDING REPLY

Prosecutor and O'Connell Brothers Split Over Family's Failure to Co-operate.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—District Attorney John T. Delaney and his political sponsors, Ed and Dan O'Connell, tonight appeared to be at a parting of the ways over the investigation into the kidnaping of the O'Connells' nephew, John J. O'Connell Jr. Delaney said the Democratic leaders had withheld information and the family had refused to co-operate with him.

Dan O'Connell's comment when informed of Delaney's statement was: "Of course, we will not co-operate with the authorities."

The 24-year-old National Guard officer's uncles and his father, John J. Sr., have indicated they could not assist officials because the kidnapers warned that young O'Connell would be killed if they aided in the attempted apprehension of the abductors.

Delaney said he would seek to hold a conference with the O'Connells tomorrow and would ask for all the evidence they have, including four notes from the kidnapers. "Primarily," he declared, "I am determined to perform my duty as District Attorney and at the same time I want to see the boy returned safely."

O'Connell's family believes that the kidnapers are waiting until one of the conspirators, an Albany man, perhaps, is suggested as an intermediary before completing negotiations for the boy's freedom. Following the orders of the abductors, Ed, Dan and the father have offered 34 names of men prominent in Albany night life and sporting circles who could serve as intermediaries. The last group of names appeared in New York City papers yesterday.

It became definitely known today that the O'Connells have had no dealings with the kidnapers other than the brief telephone messages of a week ago today and the letters demanding lists of negotiators. Two of the letters were signed by the young man. O'Connell was abducted early on the morning of July 7. A ransom of $250,000 was demanded.

One investigator today said the abduction in many respects was a "perfect kidnaping."

"The kidnapers snatched the beloved nephew of political leaders, who through their own domination, or because of friendship, can hold up law enforcement agencies to permit unhampered negotiations," the officer said. "It is natural that the family would want nothing to retard the earliest return of the boy, and in this instance the family has the power to keep investigators marking time." And to all intents and purposes the investigators are marking time.

NINA WILCOX PUTNAM GETS DIVORCE; WILL WED AGAIN

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 15.—Nina Wilcox Putnam, novelist and short story writer, left today by airplane for Las Vegas, Nev., where she is to marry Christian Eliot, nephew of the Earl of St. Germains, next week.

Mrs. Putnam obtained a divorce in Juarez, Mexico, today from her third husband, Arthur James Ogle, real estate broker. Mrs. Putnam and Eliot have known each other for eight years.

4-POWER EUROPEAN PEACE PACT SIGNED

Britain, France, Italy, Germany Signatories in Plan Designed as "10-Year Guarantee."

By the Associated Press.

ROME, July 15.—Representatives of Great Britain, France and Germany today signed with Premier Mussolini the latter's four-Power European peace pact designed to guarantee 10 years of peace among European countries. The signing took place in the Premier's office in the Palazzo Venezia. The pact was initialed in the same office June 7.

Ambassador Henry de Jouvenel signed for France, Ambassador von Hasel for Germany and Sir Ronald Graham, Great Britain's Ambassador, for that country.

The pact, based on the Briand-Kellogg pact, the covenant of the League of Nations and last December's agreement at Geneva pledging arms equality to Germany, declares in Article 1 that the high contracting parties will undertake to pursue within the framework of the League of Nations a policy of co-operation with a view to the maintenance of peace.

Cardinals Lose 10-Inning Game to Phillies, 3 to 2

HORNSBY AND FRISCH EACH GET 3 HITS OFF HOLLEY

By J. Roy Stockton.

The haunting specter of Carl bbell and his butterfly screw still lingered on the pitching und at Sportsman's Park yester- afternoon and the Cardinals, pless in the pinches, suffered eat at the hands of Ed Holley the Phillies in the first game the series, 3 to 2, in 10 innings. was the fourth straight defeat Gabby Street's forces.

ess (Pop) Haines, the grand old of the Redbirds' hurling corps, ched seven innings and was good gh to win, if the Cardinals had d as a pennant hunting ball b should. Haines was so good t he might have won with only runs, but he made two wild ches, one sending a runner over plate and the other advancing man to third who later tallied.

Cards Fail in Pinches.

Shotton's sluggers collected 12 s, but these would have netted a defeat for the visitors, if the rdinals had not been so weak at plate at critical times. There 10 St. Louis hits and five Car- s reached bases on passes and when hit by a pitched ball, but n men were in scoring position lley was master and 12 Redbirds e left stranded on the bases.

aines and Holley battled on n terms in the hurling duel for innings, but in the sixth with out Schulmerich singled to ter. Davis fould out, but War- doubled to left, moving Schul- rich to third. Haines then de his first wild pitch, Schul- rich scoring and Warner mov- to third. The next man unded out, so the inning would ve been runless if it had not n for the wild heave.

Watkins Misses Leaping Catch.

Frisch, Hornsby and Collins sin- d with two down in the sixth tie the score, but the Phils went d again in the seventh. Holley ted the rally with a drive to t that was good for two bases en Watkins missed his attempt a leaping catch.

After Fullis flied to Watkins, a cond wild pitch moved Holley to rd and he scored when Bartell's bounder on the third base side short, squirted out of Frisch's ve as he tried to make a diving p.

Redbirds Again Tie Score.

The bats of Frisch and Hornsby omed in the eighth to tie the for a second time. Frankie ed with his third hit, a single center and Hornsby, after foul- on an attempt to sacrifice, lined old-fashioned Hornsby double er Fullis' head, moving Frisch to rd. Frisch scored after Collins' to Klein, but Medwick and Or- tti were retired with Hornsby ll on second base.

In the ninth, Holley lost control th two out and filled the bases walking Martin and Watkins d hitting Frisch with a pitched ll. The stage was set for Horns- to do a Frank Merriwell, but llis was playing deep and easily ndled the Rajah's long fly.

Mooney Charged With Defeat.

Haines retired for a pinch hitter the seventh inning and Jim oney, who finished, was charged th the defeat. Jim pitched neat- rough the eighth and ninth,

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The Chicago Cubs and the Boston Braves played the first game of their series this afternoon in the remarkably fast time of one hour 17 minutes, the Cubs winning, 4 to 0.

Charley Root furthered his claim of having returned to good form by shutting out the Braves and holding them to six hits. The Cubs gathered eight hits off Betts and Starr.

The contest marked the return to the lineup of Riggs Stephenson and Kiki Cuyler and the benching of Jim Mosolf and Babe Herman. Cuyler figured in the scoring of two of the Cubs' four tallies.

VISITING Lions, attending the baseball games at Sportsman's Park, took home to the bushes ome deflated ideas about major ague baseball.

"You don't mean to tell me that hese Giants are leading the National League, do you?" inquired ne Pueblo Lion. "How can a ig league club make four errors n one inning, and let the other eam score two runs without aking a hit? Why, they'd lose franchise for that in any of ur Western minor leagues."

He was assured that Mr. Ter- y's team in person was performng, however weakly, down there n the broiling sun.

"And say," he complained a moent later. "How do you tell whether that play was a hit or an rror? There's nothing on the coreboard to tell you about it." The fact that our score board ried no such information and that there existed no public address system to tell spectators about rulings was relayed to him.

"I never believed that all the rubes were in the city before—I'm converted, now. Our country fans won't stand for that sort of treatment," roared the Lion.

Twenty Years of Progress.

THE mills of the gods grind slowly; but they fairly whizz by, when compared with the snail-like operation of baseball's machinery.

In 20 years of trying to sell baseball to the public, several major league clubs can boast of little advance, unless we want to except a free gate on certain oc-

KILLEFER QUOTED AS SAYING HE WILL AND WON'T LEAVE BROWNS

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Emphatic denial of reports that he intended quitting his post as pilot of the Browns or that he was contemplating seeking another managerial job for next year was made today by Bill Killefer. Seen in the visitors' locker room after the first game of the doubleheader with the Senators here this afternoon and apprised of the fact that a yarn originating in New York represented him as about to quit St. Louis and intimating that he was angling for the job of leading the Red Sox in 1934, Killefer asserted:

"There is nothing in it, nothing at all. I don't know how such a story could have started."

Killefer's denial made in Washington relates to a report from New York, printed in Saturday's newspapers, quoting Killefer to the effect that he was through as manager of the Browns and that he was considering an offer to manage the Boston Red Sox next year.

President Phil Ball of the Browns when told of Killefer's admission said:

"If Bill wants to make that statement, that's up to him. As far as signing players or formulating plans for the Browns is concerned Killefer is through."

When it was called to Ball's attention that Killefer's name had been suggested in connection with the Red Sox management, Ball replied:

Knows Nothing of Boston Deal.

"There's a rule in the league that prohibits one club from dickering with men belonging to another club. I have not been asked by Boston for permission to deal with Killefer. I know nothing about any Boston arrangements."

Ball would not admit that he was planning to put in a new manager for Killefer for the remainder of the season, as has been suggested.

Ball expressed the opinion that the Browns' club has not done as well as it might have done, the inference being that he thinks Killefer has not got all there was out of the team.

Collins Tired Denying Rumors...

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, July 15.—"I'm tired of denying rumors of who is going to manage the Red Sox next year," said General Manager Eddie Collins today when asked concerning the report that Bill Killefer, manager of the St. Louis Browns, would succeed Marty McManus as manager next season.

Collins said that "there was no foundation for the story."

Seattle Golfer Wins Canadian Amateur Title

By the Associated Press.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 15.—A 19-year-old Seattle sharpshooter, Albert (Scotty) Campbell, avenged Ross Somerville's feat last year of taking the United States amateur golf title north across the border, by winning the Canadian amateur title today, outbattling Ken Black, Vancouver youngster, 3 and 2, in the finals.

Brilliant all day, after "warming up" with a dazzling card of 69, three under par, over difficult Shaughnessy Heights course, the Seattle youth became the second American to hold the title in the last 38 years. Eddie Held, formerly of St. Louis, won it in 1929 for the only other American victory.

At the end of the 18-hole morning round, Campbell was three up, after finishing the first nine holes two up.

GRANT WINS SOUTHERN TENNIS TITLE FIFTH TIME

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, July 15.—Outsteadying his opponent and worrying him continually with drop shots, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, today defeated John McDiarmid of Fort Worth, Tex., to win his fifth Southern tennis singles championship. The scores were 4—6, 6—2, 6—1, 6—3.

Grant's triumph, his fifth in the last seven years, marked him as the only player ever to win the crown more than four times. Carlton Smith of Atlanta also held the title four times, winning his last crown in 1921. Grant won four straight championships, starting in 1927.

Miss Beatrice Bryan of Memphis won the women's singles by whipping last year's champion, Miss Anna Koll of New Orleans, 6—4, 1—6, 6—1.

Lovelock of Oxford Sets World Mile Mark; Americans Win Meet

By Alan Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 15.—In the picturesque setting of Old Nassau, soon after teatime for one of the most colorful of international athletic rivalries, two college youths, Jack Lovelock of Oxford, and Bill Bonthron of Princeton, raced the greatest mile of all time this afternoon.

Lovelock, a curly-haired, 23-year-old medical student from far off Dunedin, New Zealand, raced past a border of elm trees as he caught and passed Bonthron, then flashed down the stretch toward the end of the big horseshoe of Palmer Stadium, to break the tape in the dazzling time of 4 minutes 7.6 seconds.

PAUL ABT.

Beaten off by by seven yards but still fighting every step of the way as he found his famous "kick" more than matched for the first time this year, Bonthron came home in 4 minutes 8.7 seconds, thereby completing the stop watch story of the "mile of the ages," as these two collegians surpassed anything ever achieved before at the classic distance by the world's greatest foot racers.

The fastest mile ever run by an American wasn't good enough this afternoon to win and Lovelock, with a last quarter in the remarkable time of 58.9 seconds and a finish that was simply astounding, wiped out the world record of 4:02.2, made by Jules Ladoumegue of France in 1929, with plenty to spare.

Bonthron not only was inside this record himself, as he proved himself as great a middle distance runner as the United States ever has produced, but he came back nearly two hours later with a killing sprint in the stretch of the 880-yard run to whip "Pen" Hallowell, the former Harvard ace running for Oxford and clinch the meet for the combined Cornell-Princeton team over the Oxford-Cambridge forces.

Instead of showing the least trace of strain from his terrific mile duel, Bonthron pulled himself together with a remarkable stretch drive to overcome Hallowell's 10-yard advantage and break the tape in the brilliant time of 1 minute 53 seconds, a new meet record.

The final score, based on first places, was 8 to 4 in favor of the American collegians, who came with a rush at the finish to capture the last three events after a nip and tuck team battle. Meet records were smashed in eight of the 12 events in the most sensational contest these friendly rivals have ever waged.

Scarcely 5000 spectators risked threatening weather to be swallowed up in the big Princeton football stadium but they were on their feet roaring most of the afternoon. They went away thanking their good fortune and talking about the thrill of witnessing a mile that was matchless for its speed and thrills, unprecedented in running annals and noteworthy for the courage of winner and loser alike.

Bonthron, intercollegiate champion at 800 and 1500 meters, had not found the runner this year who could match strides with him at the finish. His admirers believed him unbeatable, but Lovelock had the speed today not only to match "Bonny's" famous "kick" but to pull away from the Tiger star with almost effortless ease in the home stretch.

After three laps and a half, with Lovelock never more than a stride behind the bronzed, black-haired Bonthron, the whole issue was staked on their sprinting ability. Lovelock was at the American's shoulder rounding the last turn. He was in front in a few strides and he steadily lengthened his margin to a full seven yards, as Bonthron, chin down and arms churning, tried desperately to check the widening gap.

The comparative times for each runner, for each quarter mile, tell the story of this pulse-stirring duel:

	Bonthron.	Lovelock.
First Quarter	61.2 seconds	61.4 seconds
Second Quarter	62.3 (2:03:5)	62.2 (2:03.6)
Third Quarter	65.1 (3:08.6)	65.1 (3:08.7)
Fourth Quarter	60.1 (4:08.7)	58.9 (4:07.6)

Paul Abt, East St. Louis boy who attends Princeton, was winner in the board jump with a mark of 22 feet 10¾ inches, beating K. S. Dunton, Oxford, by three-quarters of an inch.

Parker Defeats Shields for Title

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., July 15.—Shackling his lanky opponent's speed with soft, but remarkably well-aimed returns, Frankie Parker, 17-year-old Milwaukee boy, sent Frank Shields, of New York, fifth ranking player of the country, crashing down to straight-set defeat here this afternoon in the final round of the Bathing and Tennis Club's second annual invitation tennis tournament.

The scores—6—4, 6—4, 6—2—reflect exactly thet difference between the two players. Parker was that much better than Shields all the way. After the opening game, when the Milwaukee boy forced the first of his many breaks through his rival's service, there wasn't the slightest doubt as to the ultimate winner.

Parker failed in his bid for the doubles title, losing with Herbert L. Bowman of New York to Shields and Dr. Eugene McCauliff in the semifinals, 6—1, 6—1. Berkeley Bell and J. Gilbert Hall gained the other final bracket, defeating the Cuban Davis cup team of Lorenzo Nodarse and Arturo Randin, 2—6, 6—0, 6—2. The final will be played tomorrow.

Inlander kept forwardly under clever handling improved position when finding room at the far turn and responding gamely in the stretch wore down Golden Way to draw out handily. Golden Way in trouble soon after the start worked way up steadily under good handling, took a brief lead midway of the stretch only to weaken when put to a hard drive. War Glory broke from out of the stalls with Head Play, assumed early command held a comfortable lead all through back stretch but racing in deepest, footing through stretch faltered badly after being headed. Kerry Patch responded well to urging when clear in final quarter and would have been third in a few more strides. Okapi was allowed to drop back when tiring after his stable mate was moving forward with increasing strides. Sarada gained steadily to the final furlong then began tiring. Gold Basis was pinched back going to the first turn and could not reach contention again. Edelweiss closed good ground. Pomponius would not extend himself early. Head Play was done after going four furlongs.

By Charles Dunkley
Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, July 15.—A mud-running streak of black, named Inlander, galloped to a surprise victory in the $35,000 added Arlington Classic today, conquering a son of old Man o' War in a thrilling stretch drive to the accompaniment of cheers from 30,000 spectators.

When War Glory, old Man O' War's boy, faltered in the stretch, after setting a blistering pace most of the way, Inlander, owned by Mrs. Dodge Sloan of New York City, and ridden by Bobby Jones, a swarthy Mexican youngster, charged out of fourth place to win by a length and a half, with Golden Way second and the tired War Glory third.

Inlander ran the mile and a quarter over a heavy, sticky track in 2:12.

Kerry Patch finished fourth in the field of 13, with Okapi, which had been coupled with Inlander, as an entry, fifth, and the heavily-played Sarada, favorite, sixth. Gold Basis, another favorite, and winner of the Latonia Derby two weeks ago, was seventh. Head Play, which finished second in the Kentucky Derby and later won the Preakness, finished next to last, winding up in twelfth position, beating only Red Roamer, a field horse.

A Board of Good Prices.

With the favorites scattered out of the money, Inlander, coupled with Okapi, paid $21.52 to win, $9.18 to place and $5.96 to show. Golden Way, another long shot, paid $12.32 to place and $7.58 to show, while War Glory paid $7.44 to show.

The race had a gross value of $42,775, of which $32,775 went to Mrs. Sloan, owner of the triumphant thoroughbred. The sum of $6000 went to J. E. Widener of Philadelphia, owner of Golden Way, while the Glen Riddle Farm, owner of War Glory, received $2000, and Lee Rosenberg of New York, owner of Kerry Patch, received $1000 when his entry finished fourth.

The classic, scheduled to settle the three-year-old supremacy of the American turf for 1933, left the situation fairly well scrambled, due to the withdrawal of Mr. Khayyam, regarded as the most consistent three-year-old in the country. Mr. Khayyam, Col. E. R. Bradley's Barn Swallow, the sensational filly, and three others were scratched, reducing the original starting field of 18 to 13.

Inlander probably would have been a 100-to-1 shot, but for the fact that he was coupled with Okapi. He wasn't even considered a likely starter until the drenching rain of last night soaked the track, making the going heavy and sticky. The Brookmeade Stable had intended relying upon Okapi as its color bearer, and then decided to send Inlander, a three-year-old son of Infinite-Geisha Girl, along after the rich turf prize.

After the race, Mrs. Sloan climbed the stairs leading to the stewards' stand, where Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight boxing champion of the world, presented the winning trophy to her.

LOS ANGELES A.C. TAKES LEAD IN SWIM TITLE RACE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 15.—A rousing victory in the 880-yard relay sent the Los Angeles Athletic Club out in front in the race for team honors in the National Amateur Outdoor Swims today.

Led by Herbert Barthels, who left his sick bed only a few days ago to train for the championship tussle, the fast team from the Pacific Coast scored an easy triumph in the event to send its total for the national meet to 14 points, two more than that of the New York Athletic Club, second place winner in the relay. The championships end tomorrow.

Two star members of swimming's freshmen ranks, Jack Medica, 19-year-old yearling from the University of Washington, and 17-year-old Danny Zehr of the Fort Wayne, Ind., Y. M. C. A., stroked their way to national championships today as a crowd of 3,000 cheered them on.

Medica, defeated yesterday in the mile swim by his great rival, Ralph Flanagan, of Miami, Fla., came back today to win the 440-yard free style in the fast time of 4:52.8, only eight-tenths of a second off the world's record held by Johnny Weissmuller. Flanagan, competing in the event, gave the young pacific northwestern star a great battle until the final lap when Medica pulled away to win by six feet. Johnny Macionis of the Big Brothers' Club, Philadelphia, was a surprise third, beating James Gilhula of the Detroit A. C. with a great finish.

Gilhula was caught flat-footed by the starter's gun and never had a chance to catch the leaders. He won the 100-meter free-style title yesterday.

Zehr also came back with a great finish to win his championship in the 220-yard backstroke in 2:39, only 3.6 off the world's mark, held by Walter Kojak. Bob Kerber of the Shawnee Club, Chicago, wounded up second, while Johnny Kaye, Los Angeles A. C., finished third.

Other team point totals at the end of today's competition: Greater Miami Club, Miami, Fla., 8; Washington A. A., Seattle, 8; Illinois Athletic Club, Chicago, Detroit Athletic Club and Fort Wayne (Ind.) Y. M. C. A., 5 each; Miami Biltmore Club and

(By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Held scoreless for 18 consecutive innings by a pair of Washington southpaws, the Browns became more firmly mired in last place as the league leaders boosted their margin over the Yankees to half a game by taking the opener of a doubleheader 1 to 0, and grabbing the nightcap, 2 to 0.

Ed Wells, who hurled the first game, allowed only six hits, but his mates neglected effectively to group the nine hits made off the equally left-handed Stewart.

In the second game Rolland Stiles duplicated Wells' performance in limiting the Senators to six hits, but in this affair it was Stiles who suffered from the lack of supporting punch, the fork-handed Bob Burke allowing Killefer's outfit only five hits.

Both games were studded with brilliant work afield, Reynolds, West, Cronin and Myer particularly shining in this respect.

The Senators lost not time getting down to the business at hand, chasing over the lone tally of the pastime in the first round of the first game through the medium of a trio of taps at the expense of Wells.

Myer got the opening bingle, a line single to right, but was forced by Manush. Cronin lofted harmlessly, but Harris got a life on a dinky little roller to Scharein which he beat out for a safety and this proved the deciding factor of the battle, for it put Manush on second, from where he tallied when Schulte rammed a safety between Scharein and Levey.

Thereafter, Wells hurled in masterful fashion and although threatened on several occasions, always came through in the most approved style.

The Browns had numerous opportunities for scoring, but never could quite make the grade. Their best opportunity came in the ninth. Reynolds tripled with one gone in the ninth. Campbell followed with his third hit, an infield affair, but all Burns and Melillo could do was hit into force plays.

It was not until the seventh inning of the second game that the Senators were able to score a run, so effectively did Stiles perform. As a matter of fact, a flukish sort of a two-bagger by Burke which dropped untouched between West, Levey and Melillo in short center in the third inning was the only safety up to the seventh. After the upward of 7000 cash customers had taken their customary stretch in the so-called lucky inning, Cronin singled over second. Schulte advanced him to third with a neat bunt and he scored on Kuhel's line single to center.

With three hits in the eighth the Senators added another tally to their lead. Berg paved the way with a single to left, went to second on Burke's sacrifice and scored on Myer's single to center.

As in the first affray, the Browns had numerous chances to get somewhere, but couldn't muster a hit in a pinch against Burke.

Indians' Park; Stars Who Say It's Terrible

Here's a graphic reason why the Lake Front Stadium isn't popular with big league sluggers: Other parks may be longer at the foul lines, but most of them cut in at right angles, like the old Cleveland park, whose dimensions are shown in outline. The egg-shaped Cleveland bowl is the hardest field in the league for long-distance sluggers. Dimensions of other parks are shown inside the Stadium bounds. Left to right at top are Lou Gehrig, Marty McManus, Babe Ruth and Al Simmons, all of whom agree that the Cleveland Stadium is hard on hitters.

Recognition of Bonthron's Time as Record to Be Sought.

Breaking precedent, application will be filed for an American mile record on behalf of Bill Bonthron of Princeton, who trailed the world-record-smashing Jack Lovelock of Oxford today, but was timed off in 4:08.7 for the distance.

Daniel J. Ferris of New York, national secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, told the Princeton track coach, Matt Geis, tonight that the performance would be given record consideration, because two timers caught Bonthron in the time given, while a third clocked him in 4:08.4.

Three timepieces caught Lovelock in 4:08.6, the new record time, while a fourth got him in 4:07.3.

The fastest previous American mile was Glenn Cunningham's 4:09.8, made by the Kansas star in the national collegiate championship at Chicago this year.

The six fastest miles ever run, indoors or out, now comprise Lovelock's 4:07.6, Bonthron's 4:08.7, Jules Doumegue's 4:09.2, the listed world mark; Cunningham's 4:09.8, Gene Venzke's 4:10, made last year in Madison Square Garden, and Paavo Nurmi's 4:10.4, which stood as the world mark from 1923 to 1931.

Murphy Victor in Longwood Final

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 15.—Dick Murphy of Utica, N. Y., served notice on the tennis world that he was going places this season by registering a straight-set victory over Martin Buxby of Miami today in the forty-first competition for the famous Longwood Bowl trophy. The scores were 8—6, 6—4, 6—2.

In the doubles final, a gruelling five-set battle, Joe Coughlin of San Francisco, and Henry Culley of Santa Barbara, Cal., scored a 5-7, 6-2, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3 decision over Malcolm Hill, Newton, and Sam Fitch of Brookline. The Massachusetts pair appeared to have the match in their grasp during the fourth set, where they relaxed.

Alice Marble of San Francisco, outplayed the top-seeded Carolyn Babcock of Los Angeles, by a wide margin to win the women's invitation singles final by 6-3, 6-4.

Both of these singles finalists appeared in the title team play and the tables were turned for Miss Babcock, paired with Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn of Orange, N. J., overhauled Miss Marble and Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, Cal., and won by scores of 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

LOS ANGELES A. C. TAKES LEAD IN SWIM CHAMPIONSHIP RACE

Shawnee Club, Chicago, 3 each; and one point each for the University of Michigan, Ohio State University and the Big Brothers' Club of Philadelphia. The Detroit A. C. rated as first in team totals yesterday with 10 points, lost five of them today when Dick Degener, former University of Michigan star and new national springboard diving champion, advised officials he was competing unattached and had no connection with the club.

Finals will be decided tomorrow in the 880-yard free style, high platform diving and 300-meter medley relay.

The Illinois Athletic Club defeated the Jewish People's Institute by the score of 5 to 1 in their water polo match and will play the New York A. C. tomorrow.

IMPORTANT GAME IN EMPIRE LEAGUE TODAY

The Golubs and the Rosenblooms meet this afternoon on Ground No. 12 in Forest Park in an important game in the Empire League of the Municipal Baseball Association. The Golubs are in fourth place, one game behind the Rosenblooms, who are first. A defeat probably will knock the Rosenblooms from the lead, as the teams tied for second are but a half game behind and they play relatively weak teams today.

CARDINALS LOSE 10-INNING GAME TO PHILLIES, 3-2

but Hurst opened the tenth with a double that hit the speeding Orsatti on the shin and Schulmerich singled to center to score Hurst with the winning run.

Because of Holley's wild spell in the ninth, Manager Shotton called on Phil Collins to pitch the tenth, and the fidgety right-hander disposed of the Cardinals without serious trouble. Medwick singled with one out, but Orsatti sent a long fly to Schulmerich and Wilson struck out to end the game and send the Ladies' day crowd home in no mood to enjoy the Saturday night kalter aufschnitt.

Redbird Notes

HALLAHAN and Carleton probably will be the starting pitchers for the Redbirds in the doubleheader this afternoon. Burt Shotton said Elliott and Hansen were likely to be his selections.

A ladies' day crowd of 9800, including 6800 women, 400 girls and 2600 cash customers, attended the series opener.

Hornsby still retained a good measure of speed. He beat out a grounder to Bartell in the second inning.

"I'm going to take a chance on sacrificing some of my defensive strength to improve my punch," Manager Street said, announcing that he was benching Durocher, shifting Frisch to short and using Hornsby at second.

After Fullis singled with two out in the fifth, the hit and run drew Hornsby out of position and Bartell singled through the vacated sector, sending Fullis to third. Klein ended the inning with a high fly to Watkins.

When Haines made a wild pitch in the sixth inning, scoring Schulmerich and moving Warner to third, Bartell ran from the Philadelphia dug out and contended that Jimmy Wilson had thrown his mask at the ball as he chased it to the backstop, and that some penalty should be imposed.

HEAVY HITTERS CONDEMN PARK AT CLEVELAND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, July 15.—Having changed managers in an effort to find what was wrong with the 1933 Cleveland Indians, without favorable result, critics and fans of this city are now trying to fasten responsibility for the team's showing on the Municipal Stadium.

Failure not only of the Cleveland swat stars to hammer out their usual percentages, but the downfall of visiting sluggers has also been pointed out and laid at the door of the great egg-shaped field.

There isn't much doubt that the hitting of many players has been below par at the big stadium. Blaming it on the park is one of the current fads, whether it rightly deserves the blame or not.

Thus far President Alva Bradley of the Indians has refused to give credit to complaints against the park. He declared that the wide reaches of the ball field had anything to do with the weak hitting of the home players. But when asked if the club would renew its contract with the city for the use of the park next year he said he did not know.

Visiting Players Complain.

But whatever Bradley may think about it, players not members of the Cleveland team have fared very badly in their hitting at Cleveland Stadium this year. They are not keeping silent about it.

Ruth declares the stadium is to blame for the Indians' showing.

Jimmy Foxx made only four hits there in 35 times at bat.

Lou Gehrig says: "Anyone who plays 77 games here will wind up in the asylum, trying to hit."

Al Simmons declares Cleveland park "stopped" him.

"It's impossible to hit in the stadium," said Marty McManus—and so on down the line.

Neither Ruth nor Gehrig has made a home run yet in the Tribe's commodious plant. Neither has Jimmy Foxx, the Athletics' powerful swatter and neither has Al Simmons.

"The first time I played in the Stadium with the Athletics last year, I found that I couldn't hit in the park, and I haven't been able to yet," he continued.

"The place simply has me down. There's something about it that defeats the batter. Maybe it's the size and the lack of background. I suppose you'd call the reasons psychological, but whatever they are, there are definite reasons."

Marty McManus, manager of the Boston Red Sox, asserted the following upon being questioned about the stadium:

McManus Can't Hit There.

"As far as I am concerned they can give the Stadium back to the Indians and I don't mean the Cleveland Tribe. It so happened that I didn't get a hit during our last series there, but that doesn't enter into my opinion. The Stadium simply is impossible to hit in and my whole ball club feels the same way about it.

"Did you ever see a major league ball club trying to play a game in an open prairie? It's the same idea in that Municipal Stadium in Cleveland. The park is so big that there's no background. Yes, they have bleachers and walls in center field, but they're so far away that they might as well not be there at all.

"When the batter is at the plate the ball seems to be on top of him before he knows it, particularly those pitches down around the waist.

"In fact the entire layout seems unnatural to the player and makes him feel awkward at the plate. On top of the fact that it is difficult to time and see the ball, the immensity of the place defeats him. He wants something to shoot at, something to look at. But he has neither."

PLAY CONTINUES TODAY IN UNIVERSITY CITY OPEN TENNIS TOURNEY

Play, which started yesterday, will continue today in the first round of the University City Open tennis tournament at Heman, Lewis and Flynn parks. Participants are asked to report to tournament headquarters at Lewis Park for court assignments.

Three Springfiled, Ill., entrants were among those who fell by the wayside in the first round. Robert Fowler lost to Elmer Koster by default, William Spence was defeated by Louis Sharp, 10—8, 8—6, and J. W. Curtis by Vernon Tietjen, 6—0, 6—3.

Other results: Bud Fischer defeated Dave Biggs, 7—5, 6—3; Clark Clifford defeated Hobart Cale, 6—0, 6—2; William Krueger defeated J. C. Gilbert, 8—6, 6—3; Robert Smith defeated H. E. Mueller, 4—6, 6—3 6—1, and Joyce Portnoy defeated Edwin Ernst, 3—6, 6—3, 6—0.

SUNDAY SCHOOL STAR ALLOWS ONLY ONE HIT

Martin Young, pitching his second season with the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church, limited the Wagoner Place nine to one hit and no runs as his team won, 18 to 0, yesterday afternoon. The first batter singled for Wagoner Place and after that no other player got a hit off Young.

Hamilton is the defending champion of the Sunday School seniors, having won the title the last three years. In its latest victory, Hamilton used 17 hits and a Wagoner Place error in scoring its 18 runs.

M'MILLIN AND HERB WEINSTOCK ARE ELIMINATED IN SEMIFINALS

By Davison Obear.

Ted Drewes, defending champion, will meet Karl Hodge, seeded No. 3, in the final of the nineteenth annual St. Louis County men's singles tennis tournament this afternoon on the courts at the Woodlawn Country Club.

Playing at the top of a well-rounded game, Hodge defeated Herbert Weinstock, No. 2 seeded player, 6—4, 6—1, 0—6, 6—2, and Drewes advanced at the expense of Charles McMillin, seeded fourth, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4, in semi-final matches yesterday afternoon.

In eliminating Weinstock, a player with a higher ranking, Hodge demonstrated that he will give Drewes a hard battle for the championship when they meet this afternoon. Hodge started his semi-final match with a whirlwind attack, holding his opponent to four points in the first five games. Weinstock finally found his bearings, but lost the first set, 4—6.

Hodge bore down throughout the second set, and won, 6—1. Weinstock took the first two games of the third set, and Hodge, finding himself in need of a rest, resorted to strategy. He let Weinstock run himself around the court and win the third set, 6—0. Fresh from the rest in the third set, Hodge came back with a bang in the fourth set to win, 6—2.

Drewes, the defending champion, has two legs on the three-time trophy which goes to the winner, and if victorious this afternoon will gain permanent possession of the trophy.

Drewes and Dick Rosebrough defeated Wayne Smith and Warran Davis, 6—4, 6—4 and 7—5, and Herbert Weinstock and McMillin were extended more than they cared to be extended in winning from Frank Thompson and Robert Weinstock, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2, 4—6 and 8—6, in semifinals doubles matches.

Free to the public, the singles final will start at 2 o'clock, followed by the doubles final between Drewes and Rosebrough and Herbert Weinstock and McMillin.

Favorites Advance as Women's Tourney Opens

Mrs. Violet Furlong, one of the district's ranking women tennis players, is in the second round of the annual women's municipal championships, after a brisk battle in the opening round yesterday afternoon on the Jefferson Memorial courts, in Forest Park.

Mrs. Furlong, unseeded in the present tournament, advanced at the expense of Miss Lillian Boening, 6-2, 6-1. The score would indicate a one-sided match, but it did not appear so to spectators.

Opening with a driving game, Mrs. Furlong got away to a slow start and came out on the wrong end of several close rallies. She changed her game to the chop variety, coming in to the net often, and this type of play proved more effective.

Lottie Hagemeyer, seeded No. 4 in the tournament, eliminated Georgia Dexheimer in their first-round engagement, 6-1, 6-0. For years one of the best women tennis players in the city, Miss Hagemeyer had little difficulty in her first match and indicated that she will be a difficult opponent to eliminate.

Ruth Bailey, seeded No. 1, will see action today for the first time. She drew a bye in the opening round.

The first round of singles play will be completed today. Some second round singles matches will also be played, as will some first-round engagements in the doubles. The semifinals and finals of both singles and doubles are scheduled for the next Saturday and Sunday.

Opening of the tournament yesterday was delayed about an hour on account of wet courts.

WRAY'S COLUMN

casions to ladies, boys and girls.

It has been nearly 20 years since this writer offered in the Post-Dispatch a platform of suggestions for improving baseball in the interest of the spectator. Here are the features suggested:

An adequate announcing system.

A score board that would show "hits," "errors" and official rulings.

Free score cards.

Ground rules prohibiting spectators on the field at any time.

Numbered players.

As It Is Today.

TODAY—our announcing system is primitive. The scoreboard shows exactly what it did 20 years ago. And it's yes, we have no free score cards, although clubs make a profit on the advertising.

More than 45,000 persons were crowded into Sportsman's Park for a doubleheader with the Cubs—about 10,000 of them were on the field, almost wrecking the afternoon.

After several false starts, the players were finally numbered; unfortunately the numbers still do not synchronize with the scoreboard numbers.

The covered bleachers have not arrived, although the number of sun seats has been greatly reduced—to make room for higher-priced ones.

If times were normal this could easily and cheaply be remedied, and would help fans appreciate baseball and to understand and enjoy in comfort the happenings transpiring on the field. It is a fact that a listener at his home radio gets more information about a baseball game than the fans who pay a dollar to view it!

Nothing has been done about it. This isn't merely due to the depression, which excuses recent inaction. But the opportunity has existed for two decades. About the only expansion made in that time has been in the size of parks and the number of grandstand reservations.

Extra Hazardous Risk.

IF unemployment insurance ever gets a toe-hold in this country, one class of risks will be labeled "extra hazardous." Managing clubs come under that head.

If you doubt it, scan the list of major league leaders who are likely to feel the ax this fall—or sooner. Fully half the clubs in the majors are planning a change in leadership in the hope of making a winning team out of an inferior one.

Better proof still is found in scanning the names and records of the leaders now in the saddle. You'd be surprised to learn, perhaps, that there is only one leader in either league who has earned a permanency—Connie Mack, who has been in the saddle for 32 years.

Of the other 15 leaders one has lasted seven years, Burt Shotton, of the Phillies.

Heavy, Heavy, What Hangs Over?

BILL McKECHNIE of the Braves has lasted five years under contract; Killefer of the Browns, four; Street, four, and Bucky Harris of the Tigers, three. For the rest several are in their second season, three are serving their first year, and one, Walter Johnson, has been active about one month.

Of the three and four-year men named above, not one is sure of his 1934 job and it is known definitely that at least two of the quartet will not be back with the same club.

Aside from Connie Mack, therefore, the average term for a major league manager, as indicated in the records of the present personnel, is only 1.9 years.

Great Britain Dangerous.

GREAT BRITAIN'S Davis Cup team, which once before in recent times, pulled a mean surprise by beating our American team in the challenge round, threatens to repeat the feat, this year—although this time it would be no surprise.

Since the British victory over Australia in the European zone final it has become apparent that the United States players are going to have a real struggle to "make" the challenge round with France.

The Britons have developed, in the last two years, and Perry and Austin now are powerful singles reliances, although Crawford did defeat Austin in singles, after a hard match.

Vines will have real trouble against both British players and it is a question if Allison can defeat either of his British rivals.

Great Britain also is strong in doubles. It can easily happen that the Davis Cup map of next year will see America invading England, instead of France, in an effort to regain the cup.

THE team that reaches the challenge round ought to beat France, unless Borotra is able to muster strength to make one more bid in the singles. Even then, it looks dubious for France.

In that case, the Davis Cup will go to either England or America for a pretty long stay. Both the British and American teams are made up of young players; instead of going downgrade the winner of the 1933 Davis Cup has a reasonable expectation of improving, for several years to come.

"FATS" AND "LEANS" OF CARONDELET TOWNSHIP WILL CLASH TODAY

The "Fats" and the "Leans" are at it again. The ninth annual game between the Fats and the Leans of Carondelet Township for chartiy will be played this afternoon on the Checkers' grounds, Little Broadway and Lemay Ferry road, preceded by a wrestling exhibition and a battle royal between five Negro boxers from the Pine Street Negro Y. M. C. A.

Johnny Tobin, who patroled right field with great distinction for the Browns for many years, will be in action with the Leans.

Fats—Ed Meine, manager; J. Lohse, Joe Smith, C. Rathman, F. Schmidt, B. Compton, B. Harder, G. Gerlach, J. Pfeiffer, N. Ems, "Porky" Von Der Haar, W. Siebert, A. Harder, E. Earley, C. Wiethup, B. Poslosky, W. Julian, A. J. Fassler, Dr. W. L. Kincaid, George Sandusky, Leo Fuchs, A. Hof, H. Boehr, P. Allen.

Leans—F. Albers, manager; F. Byrne, J. Hoernschemeyer, W. Freund, A. Winheim, E. S. Campbell, R. Rohlfing, W. Hartman, J. L. Doran, T. Fendler, J. Butyenek, M. Zimmerman, G. Boenecke, C. Meine, P. Miller, R. Manley, C. Theurer, W. Fassler, A. Weber, A. H. Weber, Johnny Tobin, V. P. Gutgesell, John Hertel, A. Walck, C. A. Anderson, J. Hohman.

Second Place at Stake.

The Weckermeyers and Hunters, tied for second place, play in the feature game in the East Side Municipal Baseball League at Jones' Park this afternoon. In the other game, the Schnieders face the Pennsylvania nine. Pennsylvania is leading the second half race.

Ghnouly Here, Would Box Ross Or Canzoneri

Joe Ghnouly, lightweight boxer, has returned to St. Louis from his recent stay at Gus Wilson's Orangeburg (N. Y.) camp, looking for a fight. Joe, in company with Tony Palazzolo, trainer for Jack Sharkey, challenges any lightweight in the world—a large order.

"We don't bar anybody," declared Palazzolo yesterday. "I'm taking Gus Wilson's place as Joe's manager for the present and will take charge of his training. We want to box a good boy in St. Louis. If either Tony Canzoneri or Barney Ross wants a tune-up fight for their championship match at the Polo Grounds, New York, which is to be held on Sept. 13, we will give it to him in St. Louis."

Joe's last appearance here was against Ross, to whom he lost a decision at the Arena, and that was Joe's most recent bout. He spent his time in Wilson's camp in training and watching Sharkey work for his match with Carnera.

Palazzolo, incidentally, stated that the match between Sharkey and King Levinsky for September, to be held in Chicago, had been arranged and he expects to return to Boston about Aug. 15 when Sharkey will begin work for the bout. Sharkey hopes to fight and win several contests between now and next June, to get another crack at Carnera, and is eager for a chance to box Max Baer in the fall.

Ghnouly and Lou Terry are the fighters Jack Tippett, matchmaker for the Walter J. Hatzfeld American Legion Post, is dickering with as an opponent for Davey Abad, Panama, for the feature match on the next professional boxing card, which will take place Wednesday night, July 26, at the Battery A.

BRITONS TO PLAY U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM FOR RIGHT TO MEET FRENCH

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 15.—By the deft process of guile overcoming brawn, Great Britain conquered Australia's tennis forces today and headed for France and battle with the United States in the inter-zone finals next week-end for the right to challenge the French for the historic Davis Cup.

The mother country won the European zone final three matches to two as Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, a cool, cagey fellow, trounced 17-year-old Vivian McGrath, 10 years his junior, in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3, for the third and deciding victory before a pleased and expectant crowd of about 9000.

Crawford Wins.

Jack Crawford, the brilliant Anzac who conquered Ellsworth Vines in the Wimbledon singles final last week to become the uncrowned ruler of the men's tennis world, followed McGrath and Austin to the famous center court and walloped H. G. N. Lee, English veteran, 8-6, 7-5, 6-4, for Australia's final victory, but the match was an anti-climax and served only to run out the string.

Lee was substituted for Fred Perry, top ranked Englishman, who was withdrawn as soon as Austin clinched the series. Perry, with a slightly strained shoulder, will stay behind for treatment when Austin, George Patrick Hughes, and Lee start for Paris tomorrow to practice for the series with the United States that starts in the Roland Garros Stadium Friday. Perry will join them in Paris Tuesday. Daniel Maskell, British professional champion, will help them practice.

Great Britain went into today's final play with a commanding lead of 2 to 1 in matches, the edge having been attained yesterday when Perry and the veteran Hughes raced through the young Australian doubles team of Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull in four sets. In the singles play Thursday, Crawford beat Austin for Australia's first point, but Perry swept over McGrath to even the score.

McGrath Shows Promise.

Though he lost in straights sets, young McGrath gave a splendid account of himself and demonstrated that he is able to get pace on a ball with his "two-fisted" backhand, the only stroke of its kind in tennis, that probably cannot be equalled by any other player. Had he been able to control his vicious two-handed sweep and twist of his racquet with a more completely developed forehand, McGrath's natural tennis ability, and physique probably would have set the stage for the Perry-Crawford battle to which all England's tennis fandom was looking forward.

But McGrath made too many errors and Australia's bold bid to regain its former place in the closing rounds had collapsed by the time the invincible Crawford got to the courts.

Vines Sorry He Won't Meet Crawford Again.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 15.—The United States Davis Cup team, with the exception of Ellsworth Vines, today expressed satisfaction with Great Britain's victory over Australia in the European zone final.

Vines, who was defeated by Jack Crawford in the Wimbledon finals, was eager to get another shot at the Australian ace.

George Lott and John Van Ryn, the prospective American doubles combination, worked out against the South African, Nat Farquharson, and Marcel Bernard of France, but after the Americans had won the first two games with the loss of only one point rain forced the postponement of the match.

HELLRUNGS PLAY BURKES, KNAPPS MEET WOLFFS IN U. CITY LEAGUE

With the four teams in the U. City Muny League tied for first place, predicting the winners when Knapps meet the Wolffs and Hellrung tangles with the Burkes today in Heman Park, is a difficult matter.

Winners of the second half title will meet Hellrung & Grimm, first half winner, for the right to represent the University City League in the National Municipal Baseball Association tournament.

The two games today will start at 2:30 o'clock, with Willie Foley and "Ribby" Murphy the umpires.

AL SIMMONS has the queerest stance,
That we have seen to date;
The critics at him look askance
When he is at the plate.
But on the pellet he can land
And make it safely fall,
So it makes no difference how you stand,
It's how you hit the ball.

The Passing of Tommy.

The body of Tommy Dowd, known to the Brown rooters of several decades ago as "Pink Coat," was found several days ago in the Connecticut River. Tommy was a great little ballplayer and acquired his nickname because one day he left the ball game flat and went across to the Fairgrounds Track to see Pink Coat win the Derby of that year.

The California Boxing Commission has taken the kick out of wrestling. Kicking, biting, tossing one another out of the ring, tripping the referee or wrestling in the aisles is verboten. Indicating that the boys will have to take up wrestling.

A Steady Worker.

A school teacher in South Carolina hasn't been absent or tardy for 53 years. He believes in setting an example for punctuality.

NOT only does this old-time teacher tute,
For many years he hasn't missed a day.
To teach the young idea how to shoot,
By precept he will always lead the way.

Five years ago, Primo Carnera saw a boxing glove for the first time. He was so intrigued with the bloomin' thing that five years later he was the world's champion boxer. Just goes to show how quick the Beeg Boy is on the uptake.

When first asked if he could fight, Primo said he didn't know, as he had never tried. He's that kind of a guy. He may be the world's best fiddler and doesn't know it.

The Senators are trying to make it as easy as possible for the President. He may pitch the first ball in the world series right in the old home town.

Mr. Ripley informs us that the Declaration of Independence was signed on July 2, not July 4. Well, as we always start celebrating on or about June 30, it really doesn't make much difference.

But when he further states that Richard Henry Lee, not Thomas Jefferson, was the author of the famous document that is something else again. We always thought it was Joseph Jefferson.

Belleville and Vess Battle in Trolley Feature

Two important games are scheduled in the Missouri Illinois Trolley League this afternoon. The St. Louis Dairys face the Vess club, winner of the first half at North End Park, Belleville, while Edgemont mixes with the Kirkwood A. C. at Edgemont.

Edgemont and St. Louis are tied for first place in the second half with two victories and one defeat, while Vess is trailing by one full game.

Jess Doyle, the Dairys mainstay, is down to pitch against the Vess club, while Glen Barthleme, ace of the visitors, with a record of eight victories and four defeats, will oppose the former Brownie.

Edgemont will send Johnny Harshany, the lanky curve ball artist, against the Kirkwood squad. Johnny Dubernic, Mount Olive coal miner, who held Bly-Moss to four hits last week, is down to pitch for the Missourians.

NEW JERSEY HOLDS FIRST HORSE RACING MEET IN 35 YEARS

By the Associated Press.

ABSECON, N. J., July 15.—New Jersey was host today to the first horse-racing meet since the sport was legislated out of existence 35 years ago. Betting was prohibited, and there were no purses, but programs were circulated bearing "odds."

Count Doright, with "odds" listed at 10 to 1, won the first of four races. The other winners: Second race, Icy Blast, 3 to 1; third, The Widow, 7 to 5; fourth, Cold Cash, 2 to 1.

There was question as to whether today's races were legal. The New Jersey Legislature two months ago passed a law permitting horse racing under supervision of a State racing commission. No such commission has yet been named by Gov. A. Harry Moore.

INLANDER, 9 TO 1 SHOT, WINS CLASSIC

post, due to the Wild West actions of War Glory and Head Play, which refused to go into their stalls, these two fractious three-year-olds were placed on the outside of the starting gate, and the field charged away. War Glory, with Johnny Gilbert on his back breaking from the extreme outside, cut across and soon assumed the lead. He had a comfortable margin at the first turn with Head Play trailing him. War Glory continued to set the pace as the field thundered down the back stretch but he was racing in the deepest footing and faltered badly after reaching the head of the stretch.

Meanwhile Inlander, back in fourth place under the clever horsemanship of Jockey Jones, was in a spot to bound into the lead when War Glory displayed signs of weakening. Golden Way, under a vigorous ride by the veteran Mack Garner, moved up with Inlander, and while he moved on past War Glory, he had no chance of catching Inlander. Sarada gained steadily in the last furlong, but began tiring.

ST. LOUIS SEEKS WESTERN GOLF TOURNAMENT FOR NEXT YEAR

By W. J. McGoogan.

St. Louis may get one of the major tournaments of the Western Golf Association next year—that is, either the Western Amateur or the Western Open.

R. Arthur Wood, president of the association, was here for the final of the Western Junior at Normandie Golf Club Friday and Ben Lahrman, president of the St. Louis District Association, extended an invitation to hold one or the other of the Western events here in 1934.

The awards of the tournaments are made at the December meeting of the organization, Wood told Lahrman, but thus far no other invitation has been received, so that St. Louis' bid will be the first in, at any rate.

The Western Association embraces all the territory in the country west of the Allegheny Mountains and has a membership of some 350 golf clubs. Its tournaments are next in importance to the national events, and St. Louis has had both the Western Amateur and the Western Open in years past.

Tourney Here in 1919.

Harry Legg defeated Dick Bockenkamp in the Western Amateur final at Sunset Hill Country Club in 1919, the last time the tournament was here. Clarence Wolff went to the final of the Western in Memphis and lost to Chick Evans in 1920.

This year the Western Amateur is to be held at the Memphis Golf Club, Memphis, Tenn., July 25 to 28. Entries close tomorrow, but Wood said that any of the good St. Louis golfers whose entries were received a little later would be allowed to play. The Western Open is to be held in Chicago late in August.

The Western Association is a strong, well-financed body. Its amateur and open tourneys each year show a profit to help out its treasury, in addition to membership fees.

Part of its surplus is used to support six scholarships for caddies at Northwestern University. This fund had its origin in the "Chick Evans Fund." When Chick was very much in the limelight he made a series of phonograph records for a sum aggregating more than $5000. This he turned over to the Western Association. The sum grew with the addition of interest and later it was invested.

Sending Caddies to College.

As was the case with most investments, its value shrank until it was necessary for the Western Association to supplement the fund in order to maintain its scholarships.

Each year member clubs are invited to nominate a caddy, graduate of a high school who seems to have the qualifications necessary for entrance into college. The five or six best are then called to Chicago for an interview with a dean of Northwestern and the best selected as vacancies occur. At present there are six boys receiving a college education at the expense of the Western Association and there will be one added for next year.

In discussing the possibility of St. Louis getting one of the big tournaments next year, Wood looked over the course of the St. Louis Country Club and naturally saw its excellence as a tournament course. It is there that it is hoped to hold the tournament if it is awarded to St. Louis.

The July handicap tournament of the District Association will be held at St. Louis Country Club, Friday.

Bill Schwartz, professional who is operating the Cotton-Sid driving tee on Clayton Road, tells a story of a prospective golfer who recently approached him with a view to taking lessons. The man was equipped with an expensive set of clubs and said he was tired of being kidded by his friends for his inability to play golf.

Bill tried to show him the rudiments of hitting a golf ball. But after the man heard about keeping the left arm straight, pivoting, etc., he remarked if you had to do all that he wouldn't care to play.

Bill talked him into trying a few swings and in desperation the student wound up in the best baseball style, swung his driver over his shoulder, pulled his left foot up in the air to take one good sock at the ball.

He hit the ground behind the ball on the down swing and broke a wrist.

ANGELICA STAR LEADS HORSESHOE TOSSERS

In the closing of the second round of the Municipal Horseshoe League, Gene Wors of the Angelicas is leading all players in games won and lost, and ringer averages, with 33 victories against three losses, and a ringer average of 384. "Lefty" Steinman of the Sunsets is second with 33 victories and four losses and a ringer average of 382.

This morning's schedule at Fairground Park has the leading Angelicas meeting the Kuhlmanns, while the Sunsets and Pleggas battle for second place. The Gray's Grove team draws the bye.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Held scoreless for 18 consecutive innings by a pair of Washington southpaws, the Browns became more firmly mired in last place as the league leaders boosted their margin over the Yankees to half a game by taking the opener of a doubleheader 1 to 0, and grabbing the nightcap, 2 to 0.

Ed Wells, who hurled the first game, allowed only six hits, but his mates neglected effectively to group the nine hits made off the equally left-handed Stewart.

In the second game Rolland Stiles duplicated Wells' performance in limiting the Senators to six hits, but in this affair it was Stiles who suffered from the lack of supporting punch, the fork-handed Bob Burke allowing Killefer's outfit only five hits.

Both games were studded with brilliant work afield, Reynolds, West, Cronin and Myer particularly shining in this respect.

The Senators lost not time getting down to the business at hand, chasing over the lone tally of the pastime in the first round of the first game through the medium of a trio of taps at the expense of Wells.

Myer got the opening bingle, a line single to right, but was forced by Manush. Cronin lofted harmlessly, but Harris got a life on a dinky little roller to Scharein which he beat out for a safety and this proved the deciding factor of the battle, for it put Manush on second, from where he tallied when Schulte rammed a safety between Scharein and Levey.

Thereafter, Wells hurled in masterful fashion and although threatened on several occasions, always came through in the most approved style.

The Browns had numerous opportunities for scoring, but never [illegible] quite make the grade. Their [illegible] opportunity came in the ninth. [illegible] tripled with one gone in [illegible]. Indians' Park; Stars Who Say It's Terrible

Here's a graphic reason why the Lake Front Stadium isn't popular with big league sluggers: Other parks may be longer at the foul lines, but most of them cut in at right angles, like the old Cleveland park, whose dimensions are shown in outline. The egg-shaped Cleveland bowl is the hardest field in the league for long-distance sluggers. Dimensions of other parks are shown inside the Stadium bounds. Left to right at top are Lou Gehrig, Marty McManus, Babe Ruth and Al Simmons, all of whom agree that the Cleveland Stadium is hard on hitters.

Recognition of Bonthron's Time as Record to Be Sought.

Breaking precedent, application will be filed for an American mile record on behalf of Bill Bonthron of Princeton, who trailed the world-record-smashing Jack Lovelock of Oxford today, but was timed off in 4:08.7 for the distance.

Daniel J. Ferris of New York, national secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, told the Princeton track coach, Matt Geis, tonight that the performance would be given record consideration, because two timers caught Bonthron in the time given, while a third clocked him in 4:08.4.

Three timepieces caught Lovelock in 4:08.6, the new record time, while a fourth got him in 4:07.3.

The fastest previous American mile was Glenn Cunningham's 4:09.8, made by the Kansas star in the national collegiate championship at Chicago this year.

The six fastest miles ever run, indoors or out, now comprise Lovelock's 4:07.6, Bonthron's 4:08.7, Jules Doumegue's 4:09.2, the listed world mark; Cunningham's 4:09.8, Gene Venzke's 4:10, made last year in Madison Square Garden, and Paavo Nurmi's 4:10.4, which stood as the world mark from 1923 to 1931.

Murphy Victor in Longwood Final

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 15.—Dick Murphy of Utica, N. Y., served notice on the tennis world that he was going places this season by registering a straight-set victory over Martin Buxby of Miami today in the forty-first competition for the famous Longwood Bowl trophy. The scores were 8—6, 6—4, 6—2.

In the doubles final, a gruelling five-set battle, Joe Coughlin of San Francisco, and Henry Culley of Santa Barbara, Cal., scored a 5-7, 6-2, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3 decision over Malcolm Hill, Newton, and Sam Fitch of Brookline. The Massachusetts pair appeared to have the match in their grasp during the fourth set, where they relaxed.

Alice Marble of San Francisco, outplayed the top-seeded Carolyn Babcock of Los Angeles, by a wide margin to win the women's invitation singles final by 6-3, 6-4.

Both of these singles finalists appeared in the title team play and the tables were turned for Miss Babcock, paired with Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn of Orange, N. J., overhauled Miss Marble and Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, Cal., and won by scores of 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

C. rated as first in team totals yesterday with 10 points, lost five of them today when Dick Degener, former University of Michigan star and new national springboard diving champion, advised officials he was competing unattached and had no connection with the club.

Finals will be decided tomorrow in the 880-yard free style, high platform diving and 300-meter medley relay.

The Illinois Athletic Club defeated the Jewish People's Institute by the score of 5 to 1 in their water polo match and will play the New York A. C. tomorrow.

IMPORTANT GAME IN EMPIRE LEAGUE TODAY

The Golubs and the Rosenblooms meet this afternoon on Ground No. 12 in Forest Park in an important game in the Empire League of the Municipal Baseball Association. The Golubs are in fourth place, one game behind the Rosenblooms, who are first. A defeat probably will knock the Rosenblooms from the lead, as the teams tied for second are but a half game behind and they play relatively weak teams today.

but Hurst opened the tenth with a double that hit the speeding Orsatti on the shin and Schulmerich singled to center to score Hurst with the winning run.

Because of Holley's wild spell in the ninth, Manager Shotton called on Phil Collins to pitch the tenth, and the fidgety right-hander disposed of the Cardinals without serious trouble. Medwick singled with one out, but Orsatti sent a long fly to Schulmerich and Wilson struck out to end the game and send the Ladies' day crowd home in no mood to enjoy the Saturday night kalter aufschnitt.

Redbird Notes

HALLAHAN and Carleton probably will be the starting pitchers for the Redbirds in the doubleheader this afternoon. Burt Shotton said Elliott and Hansen were likely to be his selections.

A ladies' day crowd of 9800, including 6800 women, 400 girls and 2600 cash customers, attended the series opener.

Hornsby still retained a good measure of speed. He beat out a grounder to Bartell in the second inning.

"I'm going to take a chance on sacrificing some of my defensive strength to improve my punch," Manager Street said, announcing that he was benching Durocher, shifting Frisch to short and using Hornsby at second.

After Fullis singled with two out in the fifth, the hit and run drew Hornsby out of position and Bartell singled through the vacated sector, sending Fullis to third. Klein ended the inning with a high fly to Watkins.

When Haines made a wild pitch in the sixth inning, scoring Schulmerich and moving Warner to third, Bartell ran from the Philadelphia dug out and contended that Jimmy Wilson had thrown his mask at the ball as he chased it to the backstop, and that some penalty should be imposed.

HEAVY HITTERS CONDEMN PARK AT CLEVELAND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, July 15.—Having changed managers in an effort to find what was wrong with the 1933 Cleveland Indians, without favorable result, critics and fans of this city are now trying to fasten responsibility for the team's showing on the Municipal Stadium.

Failure not only of the Cleveland swat stars to hammer out their usual percentages, but the downfall of visiting sluggers has also been pointed out and laid at the door of the great egg-shaped field.

There isn't much doubt that the hitting of many players has been below par at the big stadium. Blaming it on the park is one of the current fads, whether it rightly deserves the blame or not.

Thus far President Alva Bradley of the Indians has refused to give credit to complaints against the park. He declared that the wide reaches of the ball field had anything to do with the weak hitting of the home players. But when asked if the club would renew its contract with the city for the use of the park next year he said he did not know.

Visiting Players Complain.

But whatever Bradley may think about it, players not members of the Cleveland team have fared very badly in their hitting at Cleveland Stadium this year. They are not keeping silent about it.

Ruth declares the stadium is to blame for the Indians' showing.

Jimmy Foxx made only four hits there in 35 times at bat.

Lou Gehrig says: "Anyone who plays 77 games here will wind up in the asylum, trying to hit."

Al Simmons declares Cleveland park "stopped" him.

"It's impossible to hit in the stadium," said Marty McManus—and so on down the line.

Neither Ruth nor Gehrig has made a home run yet in the Tribe's commodious plant. Neither has Jimmy Foxx, the Athletics' powerful swatter and neither has Al Simmons.

"The first time I played in the Stadium with the Athletics last year, I found that I couldn't hit in the park, and I haven't been able to yet," he continued.

"The place simply has me down. There's something about it that defeats the batter. Maybe it's the size and the lack of background. I suppose you'd call the reasons psychological, but whatever they are, there are definite reasons."

McManus Can't Hit There.

"As far as I am concerned they can give the Stadium back to the Indians and I don't mean the Cleveland Tribe. It so happened that I didn't get a hit during our last series there, but that doesn't enter into my opinion. The Stadium simply is impossible to hit in and my whole ball club feels the same way about it.

"Did you ever see a major league ball club trying to play a game in an open prairie? It's the same idea in that Municipal Stadium in Cleveland. The park is so big that there's no background. Yes, they have bleachers and walls in center field, but they're so far away that they might as well not be there at all.

"When the batter is at the plate the ball seems to be on top of him before he knows it, particularly those pitches down around the waist.

"In fact the entire layout seems unnatural to the player and makes him feel awkward at the plate. On top of the fact that it is difficult to time and see the ball, the immensity of the place defeats him. He wants something to shoot at, something to look at. But he has neither."

PLAY CONTINUES TODAY IN UNIVERSITY CITY OPEN TENNIS TOURNEY

Play, which started yesterday, will continue today in the first round of the University City Open tennis tournament at Heman, Lewis and Flynn parks. Participants are asked to report to tournament headquarters at Lewis Park for court assignments.

Three Springfiled, Ill., entrants were among those who fell by the wayside in the first round. Robert Fowler lost to Elmer Koster by default, William Spence was defeated by Louis Sharp, 10—8, 8—6, and J. W. Curtis by Vernon Tietjen, 6—0, 6—3.

Other results: Bud Fischer defeated Dave Biggs, 7—5, 6—3; Clark Clifford defeated Hobart Cale, 6—0, 6—2; William Krueger defeated J. C. Gilbert, 8—6, 6—3; Robert Smith defeated H. E. Mueller, 4—6, 6—3 6—1, and Joyce Portnoy defeated Edwin Ernst, 3—6, 6—3, 6—0.

SUNDAY SCHOOL STAR ALLOWS ONLY ONE HIT

Martin Young, pitching his second season with the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church, limited the Wagoner Place nine to one hit and no runs as his team won, 18 to 0, yesterday afternoon. The first batter singled for Wagoner Place and after that no other player got a hit off Young.

Hamilton is the defending champion of the Sunday School seniors, having won the title the last three years. In its latest victory, Hamilton used 17 hits and a Wagoner Place error in scoring its 18 runs.

M'MILLIN AND HERB WEINSTOCK ARE ELIMINATED IN SEMIFINALS

By Davison Obear.

Ted Drewes, defending champion, will meet Karl Hodge, seeded No. 3, in the final of the nineteenth annual St. Louis County men's singles tennis tournament this afternoon on the courts at the Woodlawn Country Club.

Playing at the top of a well-rounded game, Hodge defeated Herbert Weinstock, No. 2 seeded player, 6—4, 6—1, 0—6, 6—2, and Drewes advanced at the expense of Charles McMillin, seeded fourth, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4, in semi-final matches yesterday afternoon.

In eliminating Weinstock, a player with a higher ranking, Hodge demonstrated that he will give Drewes a hard battle for the championship when they meet this afternoon. Hodge started his semi-final match with a whirlwind attack, holding his opponent to four points in the first five games. Weinstock finally found his bearings, but lost the first set, 4—6.

Hodge bore down throughout the second set, and won, 6—1. Weinstock took the first two games of the third set, and Hodge, finding himself in need of a rest, resorted to strategy. He let Weinstock run himself around the court and win the third set, 6—0. Fresh from the rest in the third set, Hodge came back with a bang in the fourth set to win, 6—2.

Drewes, the defending champion, has two legs on the three-time trophy which goes to the winner, and if victorious this afternoon will gain permanent possession of the trophy.

Drewes and Dick Rosebrough defeated Wayne Smith and Warran Davis, 6—4, 6—4 and 7—5, and Herbert Weinstock and McMillin were extended more than they cared to be extended in winning from Frank Thompson and Robert Weinstock, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2, 4—6 and 8—6, in semifinals doubles matches.

Free to the public, the singles final will start at 2 o'clock, followed by the doubles final between Drewes and Rosebrough and Herbert Weinstock and McMillin.

Favorites Advance as Women's Tourney Opens

Mrs. Violet Furlong, one of the district's ranking women tennis players, is in the second round of the annual women's municipal championships, after a brisk battle in the opening round yesterday afternoon on the Jefferson Memorial courts, in Forest Park.

Mrs. Furlong, unseeded in the present tournament, advanced at the expense of Miss Lillian Boening, 6-2, 6-1. The score would indicate a one-sided match, but it did not appear so to spectators.

Opening with a driving game, Mrs. Furlong got away to a slow start and came out on the wrong end of several close rallies. She changed her game to the chop variety, coming in to the net often, and this type of play proved more effective.

Lottie Hagemeyer, seeded No. 4 in the tournament, eliminated Georgia Dexheimer in their first-round engagement, 6-1, 6-0. For years one of the best women tennis players in the city, Miss Hagemeyer had little difficulty in her first match and indicated that she will be a difficult opponent to eliminate.

Ruth Bailey, seeded No. 1, will see action today for the first time. She drew a bye in the opening round.

The first round of singles play will be completed today. Some second round singles matches will also be played, as will some first-round engagements in the doubles. The semifinals and finals of both singles and doubles are scheduled for the next Saturday and Sunday.

Opening of the tournament yesterday was delayed about an hour on account of wet courts.

By Davison Obear.

Ted Drewes, defending champion, will meet Karl Hodge, seeded No. 3, in the final of the nineteenth annual St. Louis County men's singles tennis tournament this afternoon on the courts at the Woodlawn Country Club.

Playing at the top of a well-rounded game, Hodge defeated Herbert Weinstock, No. 2 seeded player, 6—4, 6—1, 0—6, 6—2, and Drewes advanced at the expense of Charles McMillin, seeded fourth, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4, in semi-final matches yesterday afternoon.

In eliminating Weinstock, a player with a higher ranking, Hodge demonstrated that he will give Drewes a hard battle for the championship when they meet this afternoon. Hodge started his semi-final match with a whirlwind attack, holding his opponent to four points in the first five games. Weinstock finally found his bearings, but lost the first set, 4—6.

Hodge bore down throughout the second set, and won, 6—1. Weinstock took the first two games of the third set, and Hodge, finding himself in need of a rest, resorted to strategy. He let Weinstock run himself around the court and win the third set, 6—0. Fresh from the rest in the third set, Hodge came back with a bang in the fourth set to win, 6—2.

Drewes, the defending champion, has two legs on the three-time trophy which goes to the winner, and if victorious this afternoon will gain permanent possession of the trophy.

Drewes and Dick Rosebrough defeated Wayne Smith and Warran Davis, 6—4, 6—4 and 7—5, and Herbert Weinstock and McMillin were extended more than they cared to be extended in winning from Frank Thompson and Robert Weinstock, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2, 4—6 and 8—6, in semifinals doubles matches.

Free to the public, the singles final will start at 2 o'clock, followed by the doubles final between Drewes and Rosebrough and Herbert Weinstock and McMillin.

Favorites Advance as Women's Tourney Opens

Mrs. Violet Furlong, one of the district's ranking women tennis players, is in the second round of the annual women's municipal championships, after a brisk battle in the opening round yesterday afternoon on the Jefferson Memorial courts, in Forest Park.

Mrs. Furlong, unseeded in the present tournament, advanced at the expense of Miss Lillian Boening, 6-2, 6-1. The score would indicate a one-sided match, but it did not appear so to spectators.

Opening with a driving game, Mrs. Furlong got away to a slow start and came out on the wrong end of several close rallies. She changed her game to the chop variety, coming in to the net often, and this type of play proved more effective.

Lottie Hagemeyer, seeded No. 4 in the tournament, eliminated Georgia Dexheimer in their first-round engagement, 6-1, 6-0. For years one of the best women tennis players in the city, Miss Hagemeyer had little difficulty in her first match and indicated that she will be a difficult opponent to eliminate.

Ruth Bailey, seeded No. 1, will see action today for the first time. She drew a bye in the opening round.

The first round of singles play will be completed today. Some second round singles matches will also be played, as will some first-round engagements in the doubles. The semifinals and finals of both singles and doubles are scheduled for the next Saturday and Sunday.

Opening of the tournament yesterday was delayed about an hour on account of wet courts.

casions to ladies, boys and girls.

It has been nearly 20 years since this writer offered in the Post-Dispatch a platform of suggestions for improving baseball in the interest of the spectator. Here are the features suggested:

An adequate announcing system.

A score board that would show "hits," "errors" and official rulings.

Free score cards.

Ground rules prohibiting spectators on the field at any time.

Numbered players.

Covered bleachers.

As It Is Today.

TODAY—our announcing system is primitive. The scoreboard shows exactly what it did 20 years ago. And it's yes, we have no free score cards, although clubs make a profit on the advertising.

More than 45,000 persons were crowded into Sportsman's Park for a doubleheader with the Cubs—about 10,000 of them were on the field, almost wrecking the afternoon.

After several false starts, the players were finally numbered; unfortunately the numbers still do not synchronize with the scoreboard numbers.

The covered bleachers have not arrived, although the number of sun seats has been greatly reduced—to make room for higher-priced ones.

If times were normal this could easily and cheaply be remedied, and would help fans appreciate baseball and to understand and enjoy in comfort the happenings transpiring on the field. It is a fact that a listener at his home radio gets more information about a baseball game than the fans who pay a dollar to view it!

Nothing has been done about it. This isn't merely due to the depression, which excuses recent inaction. But the opportunity has existed for two decades. About the only expansion made in that time has been in the size of parks and the number of grandstand reservations.

Extra Hazardous Risk.

IF unemployment insurance ever gets a toe-hold in this country, one class of risks will be labeled "extra hazardous." Managing clubs come under that head.

If you doubt it, scan the list of major league leaders who are likely to feel the ax this fall—or sooner. Fully half the clubs in the majors are planning a change in leadership in the hope of making a winning team out of an inferior one.

Better proof still is found in scanning the names and records of the leaders now in the saddle. You'd be surprised to learn, perhaps, that there is only one leader in either league who has earned a permanency—Connie Mack, who has been in the saddle for 32 years.

Of the other 15 leaders one has lasted seven years, Burt Shotton, of the Phillies.

Heavy, Heavy, What Hangs Over?

BILL McKECHNIE of the Braves has lasted five years under contract; Killefer of the Browns, four; Street, four, and Bucky Harris of the Tigers, three. For the rest several are in their second season, three are serving their first year, and one, Walter Johnson, has been active about one month.

Of the three and four-year men named above, not one is sure of his 1934 job and it is known definitely that at least two of the quartet will not be back with the same club.

Aside from Connie Mack, therefore, the average term for a major league manager, as indicated in the records of the present personnel, is only 1.9 years.

Great Britain Dangerous.

GREAT BRITAIN'S Davis Cup team, which once before in recent times, pulled a mean surprise by beating our American team in the challenge round, threatens to repeat the feat, this year—although this time it would be no surprise.

Since the British victory over Australia in the European zone final it has become apparent that the United States players are going to have a real struggle to "make" the challenge round with France.

The Britons have developed, in the last two years, and Perry and Austin now are powerful singles reliances, although Crawford did defeat Austin in singles, after a hard match.

Vines will have real trouble against both British players and it is a question if Allison can defeat either of his British rivals.

Great Britain also is strong in doubles. It can easily happen that the Davis Cup map of next year will see America invading England, instead of France, in an effort to regain the cup.

THE team that reaches the challenge round ought to beat France, unless Borotra is able to muster strength to make one more bid in the singles. Even then, it looks dubious for France.

In that case, the Davis Cup will go to either England or America for a pretty long stay. Both the British and American teams are made up of young players; instead of going downgrade the winner of the 1933 Davis Cup has a reasonable expectation of improving, for several years to come.

"FATS" AND "LEANS" OF CARONDELET TOWNSHIP WILL CLASH TODAY

The "Fats" and the "Leans" are at it again. The ninth annual game between the Fats and the Leans of Carondelet Township for charity will be played this afternoon on the Checkers' grounds, Little Broadway and Lemay Ferry road, preceded by a wrestling exhibition and a battle royal between five Negro boxers from the Pine Street Negro Y. M. C. A.

Johnny Tobin, who patroled right field with great distinction for the Browns for many years, will be in action with the Leans.

Leans—F. Albers, manager; F. Byrne, J. Hoernschemeyer, W. Freund, A. Winheim, E. S. Campbell, R. Rohlfing, W. Hartman, J. L. Doran, T. Fendler, J. Butyenek, M. Zimmerman, G. Boenecke, C. Meine, P. Miller, R. Manley, C. Theurer, W. Fassler, A. Weber, A. H. Weber, Johnny Tobin, V. P. Gutgesell, John Hertel, A. Walck, C. A. Anderson, J. Hohman.

Second Place at Stake.

The Weckermeyers and Hunters, tied for second place, play in the feature game in the East Side Municipal Baseball League at Jones' Park this afternoon. In the other game, the Schnieders face the Pennsylvania nine. Pennsylvania is leading the second half race.

Ghnouly Here, Would Box Ross Or Canzoneri

Joe Ghnouly, lightweight boxer, has returned to St. Louis from his recent stay at Gus Wilson's Orangeburg (N. Y.) camp, looking for a fight. Joe, in company with Tony Palazzolo, trainer for Jack Sharkey, challenges any lightweight in the world—a large order.

"We don't bar anybody," declared Palazzolo yesterday. "I'm taking Gus Wilson's place as Joe's manager for the present and will take charge of his training. We want to box a good boy in St. Louis. If either Tony Canzoneri or Barney Ross wants a tune-up fight for their championship match at the Polo Grounds, New York, which is to be held on Sept. 13, we will give it to him in St. Louis."

Joe's last appearance here was against Ross, to whom he lost a decision at the Arena, and that was Joe's most recent bout. He spent his time in Wilson's camp in training and watching Sharkey work for his match with Carnera.

Palazzolo, incidentally, stated that the match between Sharkey and King Levinsky for September, to be held in Chicago, had been arranged and he expects to return to Boston about Aug. 15 when Sharkey will begin work for the bout. Sharkey hopes to fight and win several contests between now and next June, to get another crack at Carnera, and is eager for a chance to box Max Baer in the fall.

Ghnouly and Lou Terry are the fighters Jack Tippett, matchmaker for the Walter J. Hatzfeld American Legion Post, is dickering with as an opponent for Davey Abad, Panama, for the feature match on the next professional boxing card, which will take place Wednesday night, July 26, at the Battery A.

BRITONS TO PLAY U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM FOR RIGHT TO MEET FRENCH

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 15.—By the deft process of guile overcoming brawn, Great Britain conquered Australia's tennis forces today and headed for France and battle with the United States in the inter-zone finals next week-end for the right to challenge the French for the historic Davis Cup.

The mother country won the European zone final three matches to two as Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, a cool, cagey fellow, trounced 17-year-old Vivian McGrath, 10 years his junior, in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3, for the third and deciding victory before a pleased and expectant crowd of about 9000.

Crawford Wins.

Jack Crawford, the brilliant Anzac who conquered Ellsworth Vines in the Wimbledon singles final last week to become the uncrowned ruler of the men's tennis world, followed McGrath and Austin to the famous center court and walloped H. G. N. Lee, English veteran, 8-6, 7-5, 6-4, for Australia's final victory, but the match was an anti-climax and served only to run out the string.

Lee was substituted for Fred Perry, top ranked Englishman, who was withdrawn as soon as Austin clinched the series. Perry, with a slightly strained shoulder, will stay behind for treatment when Austin, George Patrick Hughes, and Lee start for Paris tomorrow to practice for the series with the United States that starts in the Roland Garros Stadium Friday. Perry will join them in Paris Tuesday. Daniel Maskell, British professional champion, will help them practice.

Great Britain went into today's final play with a commanding lead of 2 to 1 in matches, the edge having been attained yesterday when Perry and the veteran Hughes raced through the young Australian doubles team of Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull in four sets. In the singles play Thursday, Crawford beat Austin for Australia's first point, but Perry swept over McGrath to even the score.

McGrath Shows Promise.

Though he lost in straights sets, young McGrath gave a splendid account of himself and demonstrated that he is able to get pace on a ball with his "two-fisted" backhand, the only stroke of its kind in tennis, that probably cannot be equalled by any other player. Had he been able to control his vicious two-handed sweep and twist of his racquet with a more completely developed forehand, McGrath's natural tennis ability, and physique probably would have set the stage for the Perry-Crawford battle to which all England's tennis fandom was looking forward.

But McGrath made too many errors and Australia's bold bid to regain its former place in the closing rounds had collapsed by the time the invincible Crawford got to the courts.

Vines Sorry He Won't Meet Crawford Again.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 15.—The United States Davis Cup team, with the exception of Ellsworth Vines, today expressed satisfaction with Great Britain's victory over Australia in the European zone final.

Vines, who was defeated by Jack Crawford in the Wimbledon finals, was eager to get another shot at the Australian ace.

George Lott and John Van Ryn, the prospective American doubles combination, worked out against the South African, Nat Farquharson, and Marcel Bernard of France, but after the Americans had won the first two games with the loss of only one point rain forced the postponement of the match.

HELLRUNGS PLAY BURKES, KNAPPS MEET WOLFFS IN U. CITY LEAGUE

With the four teams in the U. City Muny League tied for first place, predicting the winners when Knapps meet the Wolffs and Hellrung tangles with the Burkes today in Heman Park, is a difficult matter.

Winners of the second half title will meet Hellrung & Grimm, first half winner, for the right to represent the University City League in the National Municipal Baseball Association tournament.

The two games today will start at 2:30 o'clock, with Willie Foley and "Ribby" Murphy the umpires.

The Passing of Tommy.

The body of Tommy Dowd, known to the Brown rooters of several decades ago as "Pink Coat," was found several days ago in the Connecticut River. Tommy was a great little ballplayer and acquired his nickname because one day he left the ball game flat and went across to the Fairgrounds Track to see Pink Coat win the Derby of that year.

Belleville and Vess Battle in Trolley Feature

Two important games are scheduled in the Missouri Illinois Trolley League this afternoon. The St. Louis Dairys face the Vess club, winner of the first half at North End Park, Belleville, while Edgemont mixes with the Kirkwood A. C. at Edgemont.

Edgemont and St. Louis are tied for first place in the second half with two victories and one defeat, while Vess is trailing by one full game.

Jess Doyle, the Dairys mainstay, is down to pitch against the Vess club, while Glen Barthleme, ace of the visitors, with a record of eight victories and four defeats, will oppose the former Brownie.

Edgemont will send Johnny Harshany, the lanky curve ball artist, against the Kirkwood squad. Johnny Dubernic, Mount Olive coal miner, who held Bly-Moss to four hits last week, is down to pitch for the Missourians.

NEW JERSEY HOLDS FIRST HORSE RACING MEET IN 35 YEARS

By the Associated Press.

ABSECON, N. J., July 15.—New Jersey was host today to the first horse-racing meet since the sport was legislated out of existence 35 years ago. Betting was prohibited, and there were no purses, but programs were circulated bearing "odds."

Count Doright, with "odds" listed at 10 to 1, won the first of four races. The other winners: Second race, Icy Blast, 3 to 1; third, The Widow, 7 to 5; fourth, Cold Cash, 2 to 1.

There was question as to whether today's races were legal. The New Jersey Legislature two months ago passed a law permitting horse racing under supervision of a State racing commission. No such commission has yet been named by Gov. A. Harry Moore.

post, due to the Wild West actions of War Glory and Head Play, which refused to go into their stalls, these two fractious three-year-olds were placed on the outside of the starting gate, and the field charged away. War Glory, with Johnny Gilbert on his back breaking from the extreme outside, cut across and soon assumed the lead. He had a comfortable margin at the first turn with Head Play trailing him. War Glory continued to set the pace as the field thundered down the back stretch but he was racing in the deepest footing and faltered badly after reaching the head of the stretch.

Meanwhile Inlander, back in fourth place under the clever horsemanship of Jockey Jones, was in a spot to bound into the lead when War Glory displayed signs of weakening. Golden Way, under a vigorous ride by the veteran Mack Garner, moved up with Inlander, and while he moved on past War Glory, he had no chance of catching Inlander. Sarada gained steadily in the last furlong, but began tiring.

ST. LOUIS SEEKS WESTERN GOLF TOURNAMENT FOR NEXT YEAR

By W. J. McGoogan.

St. Louis may get one of the major tournaments of the Western Golf Association next year—that is, either the Western Amateur or the Western Open.

R. Arthur Wood, president of the association, was here for the final of the Western Junior at Normandie Golf Club Friday, and Ben Lahrman, president of the St. Louis District Association, extended an invitation to hold one or the other of the Western events here in 1934.

The awards of the tournaments are made at the December meeting of the organization, Wood told Lahrman, but thus far no other invitation has been received, so that St. Louis' bid will be the first in, at any rate.

The Western Association embraces all the territory in the country west of the Alleghany Mountains and has a membership of some 350 golf clubs. Its tournaments are next in importance to the national events, and St. Louis has had both the Western Amateur and the Western Open in years past.

Tourney Here in 1919.

Harry Legg defeated Dick Bockenkamp in the Western Amateur final at Sunset Hill Country Club in 1919, the last time the tournament was here. Clarence Wolff went to the final of the Western in Memphis and lost to Chick Evans in 1920.

This year the Western Amateur is to be held at the Memphis Golf Club, Memphis, Tenn., July 25 to 28. Entries close tomorrow, but Wood said that any of the good St. Louis golfers whose entries were received a little later would be allowed to play. The Western Open is to be held in Chicago late in August.

The Western Association is a strong, well-financed body. Its amateur and open tourneys each year show a profit to help out its treasury, in addition to membership fees.

Part of its surplus is used to support six scholarships for caddies at Northwestern University. This fund had its origin in the "Chick Evans Fund." When Chick was very much in the limelight he made a series of phonograph records for a sum aggregating more than $5000. This he turned over to the Western Association. The sum grew with the addition of interest and later it was invested.

Sending Caddies to College.

As was the case with most investments, its value shrank until it was necessary for the Western Association to supplement the fund in order to maintain its scholarships.

Each year member clubs are invited to nominate a caddy, graduate of a high school who seems to have the qualifications necessary for entrance into college. The five or six best are then called to Chicago for an interview with a dean of Northwestern and the best selected as vacancies occur. At present there are six boys receiving a college education at the expense of the Western Association and there will be one added for next year.

In discussing the possibility of St. Louis getting one of the big tournaments next year, Wood looked over the course of the St. Louis Country Club and naturally saw its excellence as a tournament course. It is there that it is hoped to hold the tournament if it is awarded to St. Louis.

The July handicap tournament of the District Association will be held at St. Louis Country Club, Friday.

Bill Schwartz, professional who is operating the Cotton-Sid driving tee on Clayton Road, tells a story of a prospective golfer who recently approached him with a view to taking lessons. The man was equipped with an expensive set of clubs and said he was tired of being kidded by his friends for his inability to play golf.

Bill tried to show him the rudiments of hitting a golf ball. But after the man heard about keeping the left arm straight, pivoting, etc., he remarked if you had to do all that he wouldn't care to play.

Bill talked him into trying a few swings and in desperation the student wound up in the best baseball style, swung his driver over his shoulder, pulled his left foot up in the air to take one good sock at the ball.

He hit the ground behind the ball on the down swing and broke a wrist.

ANGELICA STAR LEADS HORSESHOE TOSSERS

In the closing of the second round of the Municipal Horseshoe League, Gene Wors of the Angelicas is leading all players in games won and lost, and ringer averages, with 33 victories against three losses, and a ringer average of .584. "Lefty" Steinman of the Sunsets is second with 32 victories and four losses and a ringer average of .582.

This morning's schedule at Fairground Park has the leading Angelicas meeting the Kuhlmanns, while the Sunsets and Plegges battle for second place. The Gray's Grove team draws the bye.

DING BIN WINS LATONIA RACE FOR TWO-YEAR-OLDS

PAYS $17.10 FOR BEATING TREY, CLOUD D'OR AND NINE OTHERS

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, Ky., July 15.—Assuming command when ready, the F. B. Stable's consistent two-year-old Ding Bin scored a handy victory over the best juveniles in training here to account for the thirty-second running of the $2500 added Cincinnati Trophy, which event featured today's half holiday program.

At the finish of the six-furlong dash, the son of Upset and Pigeon Wing enjoyed a two-length advantage over Trey, coupled in the betting with Cloud d'Or as the Audley Farm entry, and a lukewarm favorite. The latter in turn beat A. B. Gallaher's Swift Sport a comfortable margin for the place.

Twelve accepted the issue and the field was away in fine alignment. Trey showed the most early speed and after a quarter of a mile was leading Ding Bin by two lengths, with Swift Sport in third position. This order was maintained to the stretch, where Trey began to tire and Ding Bin, taking command with a rush, galloped on to win with something in reserve. Trey held on stubbornly to outstay Swift Sport.

Ding Bin was somewhat overlooked by the big week-end crowd and paid $17.10 for a $2 mutuel ticket. The Upset colt covered the three-quarters of a mile in 1:13 3-5, rather slow time.

WILBUR TO BOX MEYER WEDNESDAY

Walter Wilbur's opponent in one of the eight special bouts on the Mississippi Valley Amateur Association Wednesday night at the Battery A open-air arena will be Al Meyer of Coach Joe Weber's South Broadway Athletic Club team.

Wilbur, a nephew of Eddie "Kid Bandy" Vandeventer, wore the Western A. A. U. crown two years ago. He was a ring success from the start and won nine consecutive victories before he won the district mitt honors.

Matchmaker Elmer Koehler already had Ocie Merritt, former junior featherweight champion, and Wayne Lightenfelter, brother of Morgan, signed to meet in one of the specials. This bout brings together two clever boys.

BALIOS EASILY BEST OF THREE IN EMPIRE DERBY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Balios, a three-year-old from the Wheatley Stable, quoted at the prohibitive odds of 1 to 4, today scored a hollow victory in the seventeenth running of the Empire City Derby, defeating two others of his age before a crowd of 8000.

The son of Chicle, ridden by Charlie Landolt, just cantered home finishing the one and one-quarter miles a half dozen lengths in front of Mrs. M. Weinter's Espinetta, with James Butler's Village Sport third and last. The Wheatley representative was offered practically no contention despite the slow time of 2:09 2-5.

Village Sport tried to make it look like a contest for about three-eighths of a mile, but Landolt was just biding his time. The Butler colt had enough midway up the back stretch and Balios drew away. Espinetta also passed Village Sport in the stretch.

Amateur Soccer Tourney Planned By German Club

Picking up where the twilight leagues drop off, the German Sport Club is laying plans for an amateur soccer tournament which probably will extend through the next two months. It is proposed that all games be played on the German club's grounds, on Lemay Ferry road near the Meramec River. All games probably will be played on Sunday afternoons.

Nick Jost, heading the committee in charge, is receiving team entries. He may be reached at 4000 Schiller place or by phone at Riverside 1176J. A unique feature of the competition, according to Jost, is the awarding of prizes to the team which plays the most scientific soccer, regardless of its standing at the conclusion of the tournament. A committee of experts will select the winner of this trophy.

Law Fixes Length Of Game Fish.

The only game and fish law to survive the last legislature and receive the approval of Governor Park was the Hixson bill which fixes new length limits on game fish. It will become a law July 24. The limits in the new law are: Bass, 8 inches; Crappie, 6 inches; Channel Cat, 12 inches; Rock Bass or Google-eye, 5 inches; Drum, 9 inches; Trout, 8 inches; Jack Salmon, 12 inches. Measurements will be from the end of the nose to the tip of the tail. Violations of the law are made a misdemeanor. A part of the fisherman's kit in the future should include a twelve-inch gauge.

Bass are taking flies now and both jacks and bass are striking plugs and live bait.

Game and Fish Commissioner Wilbur Buford, who long has been familiar with the Current River country where he was reared, last week tried out a stream new to him—the Niangua—with pleasing results. His fishing partner, Foster McHenry, shared his excellent fishing luck. Each caught the limit of bass and also landed many jack salmon.

"The biggest bass weighed about three and a half pounds, while the biggest jack taken weighed about four pounds," Buford said. "Fishing certainly was good. Everyone we saw on the Niangua had a good string of bass and jacks."

June bug spinners and a rainbow hued minnow turned the trick.

Other lures which helped to round up fish during the week included red and white plugs, deep running minnows, black gnats, silver doctor spinner flies, spent wing hair dragon dry flies, brown bodied and white winged spinner flies.

Game fish stomachs examined during the week showed the following contents:

Bass—Crayfish, minnows.

Black perch: Crawfish, minnows, grasshoppers, greenish gold water beetles.

Willow gnats are putting in their appearance on Ozark streams and lakes now. Down on Lake Taneycomo the natives have a theory (and they plan their fishing accordingly with results) that the "flies" appear in great numbers over a four-day period then virtually disappear for 10 days only to reappear. They say that during the period of the flies' appearance fish glut on the gnats and can be caught on artificial flies but that fishing is little worth during the 10-day period.

Kerosene oil and mutton tallow, much used by northwoods fishermen and hunters as a black fly repellant, also is effectively used by Missouri fishermen on late afternoons when gnats and punkies become active.

Save Squirrel Tails.

Squirrel hunters can do a favor to their fishing friends who have a weakness for trying flies if they will save the tails of their kill. Both red and grey squirrels can be utilized for making flies. The gray squirrel tail, with its white tipped hairs, makes a desirable "buck tail" for use with a spinner fly rod lure.

Wayne Brasier, who lives south of Poplar Bluff, is rearing 15 quail hatched from eggs he found in a nest from which the parent bird had been driven when a hay field was being mowed. Within 50 yards of where Brasier's bantam hen hatched the eggs a quail has been setting on 20 eggs.

Members of the Federal Conservation Relief Corps working in the timber lands on Sam A. Baker State Park in Wayne County have saved the lives of five deer within the last week.

Wood ticks have been attacking, and in many instances killing, fawns in large numbers in the wooded areas of the deer range. Whenever the conservation workers find these small animals they bring them into camp for treatment. The ticks are picked from the animals by the boys. When the fawns have sufficiently recovered they are permitted to return to the woods.

More than a pint cup of wood ticks was removed from one small fawn recently rescued.

G. E. Crosby of Eldon recently caught a 5½-pound large-mouth bass in the Lake of the Ozarks. This is one of the largest bass taken in the lake this season.

St. Louis News Of Cape Cod Colonies and The North Shore

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant Entertaining on Their Yacht at Woods Hole—Other Activities.

FALMOUTH, Mass., July 15.—SOCIAL life in the summer colony at the southern end of Cape Cod, especially at Falmouth and Woods Hole, is in full swing. The season has opened at the Old Silver Beach playhouse in Falmouth and yachting and golfing occupy much of the time of the summer residents.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant of St. Louis, who own the Sayonara, one of the two largest yachts at Woods Hole, have given several parties on board. They have been at their summer home in Woods Hole for some weeks now. Their daughter, Mrs. Leicester B. Faust, joined them early this month, and their nephew, Dr. George Horton, Research Fellow at Princeton, was a recent week-end guest.

One of the parties aboard the Sayonara was a co-operative picnic, but it turned into a fog party instead of a sail. The guests went aboard at 11 o'clock in the morning, planning to sail to Tarpaulin Cove on Naushon Island, which is the summer home of former United States Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes. Even then fog was coming in, so Mr. Plant and Capt. Gelland decided to wait for it to lift. At the end of two hours, with the fog thicker than ever, luncheon was served on the boat.

The guests included Mrs. George C. Moore and Miss Mary Moore, Mrs. Boyle Rodes and Miss Harriet and Boyle Jr., Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe and Thomas Ratcliffe Jr., Miss Marguerite Holbrook, Mrs. John Elmendorf and Miss Joanie and Miss Virginia and others of the summer colony at Woods Hole.

Mr. and Mrs. Plant also gave a yachting party on the Fourth of July in honor of their two house guests, the Miss Martha and Miss Victoire Conley of Frederick, Md., who were visiting them over the holiday. There was no fog that day, but it began to blow and rain, and the Sayonara was forced to make port at Great Harbor in Woods Hole.

Recent arrivals at Woods Hole are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims of St. Louis, who motored East in their car, arriving July 8. They stayed at the Golf Club over night while their home on Nobska Point was being put in readiness.

Mrs. Norman H. Davis of New York, wife of the United States Ambassador-at-large, was a visitor over the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Nims; and their niece, Mrs. Baxter Jackson of New York, also was with them for the week-end. Mrs. Davis came to Massachusetts the week before for the wedding of her son, John Paschal Davis, to Miss Evelyn Ames of North Easton, one of the most prominent nuptial events of the summer.

Dr. George T. Moore, head of the Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis, and Mrs. Moore are established for the summer at their home on Juniper Point, Woods Hole. They plan to stay until well into September. With them are their daughter, Mrs. Boyle Rodes, Miss Harriet Rodes and Boyle Jr., and Mrs. George C. Moore with Miss Mary and Miss Alice Moore. Dr. Moore is interested in the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole. Mrs. Rodes has become a season subscribed at the Old Silver Beach playhouse.

Also interested in the amateur theater movement is Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe of St. Louis, whose son, Thomas Jr., a Harvard student, has joined a recently organized group at Woods Hole called the Penzance Players. Tryouts were held recently for Shaw's "You Never Can Tell," presented last night. Mr. Ratcliffe played Valentine.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Blythe of St. Louis are newcomers. They have taken a house at Sippewisset on the Buzzards Bay side of Falmouth.

Many visitors from St. Louis have arrived at the Marine Biological Laboratory. Miss Marguerite Holbrook, who was graduated last month from Smith College in Northampton, Mass., was at the laboratory for a brief stay during her recent visit at the home of Dr. Robert Chambers in Woods Hole. Miss Holbrook now has sailed to attend the School of International Studies at Geneva. Herbert L. Eastlick and Paul A. Nicoll of Washington University have arrived for the summer and Dr. Farris Woods of the University of Missouri is coming Aug. 1. They will do research work at the laboratory.

Mrs. Jason Rogers, remembered in St. Louis as a pianist, has settled permanently in North Falmouth. Her son, Walter Rogers, is with her. They have as a guest Job Negeim, an Arabian tenor, who has done much concert work in New York.

St. Louis News Of Cape Cod Colonies and The North Shore

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant Entertaining on Their Yacht at Woods Hole—Other Activities.

FALMOUTH, Mass., July 15.

SOCIAL life in the summer colony at the southern end of Cape Cod, especially at Falmouth and Woods Hole, is in full swing. The season has opened at the Old Silver Beach playhouse in Falmouth and yachting and golfing occupy much of the time of the summer residents.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant of St. Louis, who own the Sayonara, one of the two largest yachts at Woods Hole, have given several parties on board. They have been at their summer home in Woods Hole for some weeks now. Their daughter, Mrs. Leicester B. Faust, joined them early this month, and their nephew, Dr. George Horton, Research Fellow at Princeton, was a recent week-end guest.

One of the parties aboard the Sayonara was a co-operative picnic, but it turned into a fog party instead of a sail. The guests went aboard at 11 o'clock in the morning, planning to sail to Tarpaulin Cove on Naushon Island, which is the summer home of former United States Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes. Even then fog was coming in, so Mr. Plant and Capt. Gelland decided to wait for it to lift. At the end of two hours, with the fog thicker than ever, luncheon was served on the boat.

The guests included Mrs. George C. Moore and Miss Mary Moore, Mrs. Boyle Rodes and Miss Harriet and Boyle Jr., Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe and Thomas Ratcliffe Jr., Miss Marguerite Holbrook, Mrs. John Elmendorf and Miss Joanie and Miss Virginia and others of the summer colony at Woods Hole.

Mr. and Mrs. Plant also gave a yachting party on the Fourth of July in honor of their two house guests, the Miss Martha and Miss Victoire Conley of Frederick, Md., who were visiting them over the holiday. There was no fog that day, but it began to blow and rain, and the Sayonara was forced to make port at Great Harbor in Woods Hole.

Recent arrivals at Woods Hole are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims of St. Louis, who motored East in their car, arriving July 8. They stayed at the Golf Club over night while their home on Nobska Point was being put in readiness.

Mrs. Norman H. Davis of New York, wife of the United States Ambassador-at-large, was a visitor over the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Nims; and their niece, Mrs. Baxter Jackson of New York, also was with them for the week-end. Mrs. Davis came to Massachusetts the week before for the wedding of her son, John Paschal Davis, to Miss Evelyn Ames of North Easton, one of the most prominent nuptial events of the summer.

Dr. George T. Moore, head of the Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis, and Mrs. Moore are established for the summer at their home on Juniper Point, Woods Hole. They plan to stay until well into September. With them are their daughter, Mrs. Boyle Rodes, Miss Harriet Rodes and Boyle Jr., and Mrs. George C. Moore with Miss Mary and Miss Alice Moore. Dr. Moore is interested in the arine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole. Mrs. Rodes has become a season subscribed at the Old Silver Beach playhouse.

Also interested in the amateur theater movement is Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe of St. Louis, whose son, Thomas Jr., a Harvard student, has joined a recently organized group at Woods Hole called the Penzance Players. Tryouts were held recently for Shaw's "You Never Can Tell," presented last night. Mr. Ratcliffe played Valentine.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Blythe of St. Louis are newcomers. They have taken a house at Sippewisset on the Buzzards Bay side of Falmouth.

Many visitors from St. Louis have arrived at the Marine Biological Laboratory. Miss Marguerite Holbrook, who was graduated last month from Smith College in Northampton, Mass., was at the laboratory for a brief stay during her recent visit at the home of Dr. Robert Chambers in Woods Hole. Miss Holbrook now has sailed to attend the School of International Studies at Geneva. Herbert L. Eastlick and Paul A. Nicoll of Washington University have arrived for the summer and Dr. Farris Woods of the University of Missouri is coming Aug. 1. They will do research work at the laboratory.

Mrs. Jason Rogers, remembered in St. Louis as a pianist, has settled permanently in North Falmouth. Her son, Walter Rogers, is with her. They have as a guest Job Negeim, an Arabian tenor, who has done much concert work in New York.

Farther along the south side of the cape, at Cotuit, Judge and Mrs. George C. Hitchcock of Waterman avenue, St. Louis, have opened their summer home and have their younger sons and daughters with them. The Hitchcock house, a pleasant, old-fashioned home hidden from view by a row of lovely old trees, is situated on Little River road in Cotuit, with a view of the ocean on three sides. The young people spend much time on the tennis courts which adjoin it.

The colony at Hyannisport has been saddened by the recent death of Bernard S. Horne, who had come from Princeton, N. J., for the season. His son, Bernard Horne Jr., of Pittsburgh, who is staying in Hyannisport with Mrs. Horne and her mother, Mrs. Stephen B. Sheldon of St. Louis, accompanied the body back to Princeton. Mrs. Horne Jr. was Miss Kathleen Sheldon.

William E. Reyburn, at Hyannisport as usual with his stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Sparks of St. Louis, has joined the staff of the New Bedford Standard-Times.

Mrs. Henry Stuart Butler of St. Louis, whose son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Foster Bixby, are occupying her place at Hyannisport this month, is to arrive Aug. 1 with her granddaughter, Miss Jane Butler. Another son-in-law and daughter of Mrs. Butler,

ONLY ONE ACQUITTAL IN U. S. COURT IN YEAR

Of 1034 Convictions, 1020 Were Obtained on Pleas of Guilty.

The often repeated counsel of criminal lawyers that the best defense in Federal Court is a plea of guilty is supported by the annual report of District Attorney Louis H. Breuer which shows that only one acquittal was obtained during the year ending June 30.

That the advice mentioned is followed closely, is indicated also by the report which shows that of 1034 convictions, 1020 were on pleas of guilty. The remainder of the 1134 cases disposed of were nolle prossed or dismissed.

At the beginning of the year there were 283 cases on the criminal docket. There were 1092 new suits instituted and 241 remain on the docket.

Fines totaling $191,842 were imposed, $129,587 being in prohibition cases. Only $46,980 has been collected, however.

On the civil docket, 227 cases were terminated, 185 resulting in judgments for the Government and 18 against it. There were only 13 jury trials. There were 285 cases pending and 159 were filed during the year, 217 remaining on the present docket.

Breuer reported that $113,607 was collected for the treasury without suit, mostly in income and estate tax controversies.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

140 MORE SCOUTS GOING TO IRONDALE

Indian Pageant Feature of Third Two-Week Section at Camp.

More than 140 Boy Scouts will leave for the scout reservation at Irondale by bus and train tomorrow morning to begin the third two-week section of the annual summer camp. Stayovers from the first sections will swell the number at camp to 200.

The group which leaves tomorrow will be the largest to go at one time during the entire summer. The special attraction is the Indian pageant held during this section. The pageant will be held on Sunday, July 30, the last day of the section, but scouts will prepare for it during their entire stay there.

Parents of many of the scouts usually visit the camp to see the pageant. Ralph Hubbard, when here last spring, taught the scouts new Indian dances.

Twenty-four of the Scouts will live in the six tepees of the Indian camp, which is set apart from the main grounds. Here they will dress like Indians and prepare their meals without the aid of any modern cooking devices.

Scout headquarters has been notified that the St. Louis world jamboree troop arrived safely in England and began its sight-seeing tour preparatory to going to Godollo. The troop's itinerary says that the Scouts will be in Armsterdam today, following a channel crossing from England Friday night. Tomorrow morning they will leave for Cologne.

During the remainder of the week they will proceed, by way of leisurely one-day stops at Mayence and Heidelberg to Lucerne. They will then have another week in Switzerland and Italy before going to Godollo on Aug. 1.

TROOP NOTES

Twelve Scouts were initiated into Troop No. 207, St. James Evangelical Church, at the annual ceremony held July 5. Scoutmaster Clifford J. Hoffmann gave a talk on stencil-craft. Twenty-three Scouts and friends attended the meeting.

At a parents' night held last week by Troop No. 20, Holy Family parish, Gerald Boyle was presented with a silver loving cup as the winner in the troop's individual contest which had been in progress since February. Scout Boyle finished with 222 points, ahead of John Wachter with 220¾. Wachter also was given a loving cup. Joe Brockelmann received honorable mention in the contest with 220 points.

The contest included all the first and second-class tests and general scouting ability. It closed with an overnight hike held the last weekend in June at the scoutmasters' lodge. The contest was under the direction of Scoutmaster Emil Hegwood, assisted by members of the troop committee.

Twenty-three Scouts of Kirkwood Troop No. 3, St. Peter's Catholic Church, went on a hike last weekend to the farm of Con P. Curran, near Pacific, Mo. The Scouts left Friday under the leadership of John S. Gillespie and John Niehaus, troop committeemen, taking their equipment in a new auto trailer. The Scouts passed 20 tests in cooking, pace, fire building, compass, knife and ax, and swimming.

The troop has recently chosen August Pey as senior patrol leader and Wilbur Haley, Eugene Overhoff and Vincent Niehaus as patrol leaders. Frances Gillespie has been named scribe and Harry Price bugler. The new junior assistant scoutmasters are William Scharf, Charles Nieters and Robert Chisholm.

BUILDING LEASED AT 608 OLIVE FOR CLOTHING STORE

RIVER FRONT PLAN IS FACTOR IN DEAL

Interest Shown Also in Business Quarters on Pine and Washington in Downtown District.

Leases made for Olive and Pine streets and Washington avenue quarters in the downtown district were noteworthy developments of the week.

The five-story building at 608 Olive has been acquired under a long lease by Drane and Jack Wilkinson and John Fritsch. The entire five floors will be occupied by men's clothing and furnishing store. A large outlay is to be made for interior and exterior work. The basement will be remodeled and a new show front window installed.

The lease was negotiated by Martin and Breitt in connection with Edward Burns of the real estate department of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. The rent was not announced. The building is owned by clients of the Mercantile-Commerce.

The lease was acquired on the theory that this part of the city would witness a revived demand for quarters with the execution of the river front project, notably the widening of Third street.

Lease of Store Room.

The store room at the northwest corner of Sixth and Pine has been taken under a long lease by the Deluxe Motor Stage Corporation, which will use it for a bus terminal.

The bus line operates both East and West and the Sixth street corner was acquired because of the strategic position. The building is owned by the Simon Loler & Sheehan Real Estate Improvement Co., a holding corporation of which John Sheehan is president. This lease was handled by George Streiff, manager of the real estate department of Mercantile-Commerce.

Mercantile-Commerce has had numerous inquiries recently for quarters in this part of the city, where many modern buildings are available at attractive rentals.

A one-story building at 1335 Washington has been leased by Weitzan Brothers, jobbers in clothing, furnishing goods and sundries. The lease was negotiated by Mullin-Walters, representing the lessee, and in connection with Martin & Breitt, acting for the lessor, Robert . Morrison Jr.

At Seventh and Market.

It was stated yesterday negotiations were still pending for the five-story building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Market streets, sought by Union-May-Stern Co. for use as an exchange store. The building virtually adjoins the cut-off from Market to Sixth and Walnut streets. It is the only building in this block. Forty feet were cut off the front of the building to make way for the widening of Market. The building formerly was occupied as an exchange store by the Union-May-Stern Co. which vacated it to permit reconstruction.

The American Rug & Carpet Co. of Chicago has acquired show room space on the eighth floor of the shops section of the Arcade Building, under a long lease, through aac T. Cook Co. The concern has been appointed exclusive distributers in the West for the cut carpet lines by the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., one of the largest concerns of its kind, with mills at Amsterdam, N. Y., and branches in most principal cities. The American company also is distributer of the products of the Magee Carpet Co. and also sole selling agent for Barry Staines Linoleum, Inc., New York. The American Rug & Car- t Co. has branch offices in Minneapolis and Milwaukee, with executive offices in Chicago.

Office Space Leases.

The Isaac T. Cook Co. reports increasing activity in the leasing of office building space. This activity, according to the Cook Co., is being brought about by three factors: The expansion of present tenants, the formation of new local concerns, and the establishment of branch offices by out-of-town firms. Of the latter type the Arcade Building has negotiated two recent leases with the Kellogg Corset Co. of Jackson, Mich., and E. V. Price Co. of Chicago.

The Kellogg Co. is manufacturer of foundation garments and has 3 established branch offices. S. F. Dupree has been appointed manager of the St. Louis branch.

Price & Co., a men's tailoring concern, has re-established the St. Louis branch and is being repre-

Gerald and Ralph L. Stanley, Sons, and Mrs. Mary Rose Bracken, Daughter, Heirs.

The $225,000 trust estate of the late Charles P. Stanley, cigar manufacturer, was terminated yesterday by order of Circuit Judge Hogan. The action was taken in a will construction suit filed by the trustees, Gerald Stanley, a son, and Marion B. Bracken, his brother-in-law.

Stanley, his brother, Ralph L. Stanley, and their sister, Mrs. Mary Rose Bracken, said they desired that the trust estate be distributed.

According to the decree each beneficiary will receive one-third of the principal, less sums owing to the estate by them. Mrs. Bracken, the court found, had been advanced $27,473, while her mother, the late Mrs. Mary Stanley, was one of the trustees, and Ralph Stanley had been advanced $42,943.

The firm of Leahy, Saunders & Walther, counsel for the trustees, was allowed a fee of $12,500; Thomas E. Mulvihill, attorney for Ralph Stanley, $4730, and William O'Herin, representing Gerald Stanley, $1000.

Charles P. Stanley died in May, 1920.

ADMINISTRATOR CITED TO SHOW RECORDS OF ESTATE

Albert Aegerter Accused by Widow of Late Partner, A. B. Groves, of Concealing Records.

A citation was issued by Probate Judge Holtcamp yesterday against Albert A. Aegerter, an architect, in connection with his administration of the partnership estate of Albert B. Groves, also an architect, who died seven years ago. Aegerter is required to show cause next Friday why an attachment should not be issued against him for alleged failure to comply with a court order for an inspection of books and records of the estate, as well as an audit by a certified public accountant.

The citation was at the request of Groves' widow, Mrs. Clara B. Groves, 5419 Maple avenue, who said she employed an account to examine the records but that Aegerter failed to permit such action, although ordered by Court on June 23 to do so.

Mrs. Groves said Aegerter filed a report purporting to show the condition of the partnership estate but it was impossible for her to determine the exact condition. A financial report filed by him last March showed total cash collected amounting to $32,320, with a balance of $19,993 after deducting $12,327 for expenses.

According to the report there are outstanding claims on bond fees amounting to $12,000, some of which are included in suits, while other suits for the remainder have been threatened. Other claims, also totaling $12,000, exist, the report set forth. The administrator said he was endeavoring to effect a compromise of the latter.

The law firm of Taylor, Mayer & Shifrin represents Mrs. Groves.

CHAIN STORE PAY AVERAGE BELOW THAT OF INDEPENDENTS

Small Difference in Weekly Wage Between March, 1929, and January, 1931.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Figures showing that chain store employes received about the same average weekly wage in January, 1931, as in March, 1929, but less that the average paid by independent dealers today were reported to the Senate by the Federal Trade Commission. The report showed also that chain stores employing the largest number of women paid the lowest wages. It added:

"Reporting chains in the East South Central States pay relatively lower average wages to their store employees and store managers than do those in any of the other divisions. Division chains in the Pacific Coast States pay, on the whole, the highest wages."

Taking available data for similar lines of business, the commission found independent merchants paying a $28.10 average weekly wage as against $23.82 for corresponding chains.

The report showed that 26 kinds of chains paid an average weekly wage of $20.60 to 292,173 store employes during the week ended March 30, 1929, two years later, during the week ended Jan. 10, 1931, the average weekly wage paid by chains to employes was $20.48. This average was received by 279,746 employes.

LONG-TERM LEASES CLOSED FOR LACLEDE AVE. PROPERTY

Building Glass Firm Rents 28,000 Square Feet —Sign Company Takes Quarters on Same Street.

Negotiations were concluded last week for long-term leases on Laclede avenue, west of Vandeventer avenue.

The Nurre Companies, manufacturers and jobbers of glass for building and fixture purposes, and of wainscoting material, has leased the one-story building at 3813-19 Laclede.

The building now occupied by the Nurre Companies, on Michigan avenue, will be used by the Falstaff Corporation. The Laclede avenue building has 28,000 square feet of floor space.

The lease was made for the account of Mrs. Mary Katharine Uhri, and both the owner and the Nurre Companies were represented by Martin & Breitt.

Atkinson-Duren-Gaines, Inc., has taken a long lease on the one-story building at 3929-31 Laclede. The building has about 11,000 square feet of space. The lessee which represents the Artkraft Sign Co. of Lima, O., in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Northern Texas, will conduct a general sign business locally. The Artkraft Co. produces neon and porcelain enamel signs.

W. J. Atkinson, president of the local corporation and C. H. Gaines, secretary-treasurer, have been associated with the sign industry in the East and South; and G. M. Duren, vice-president, has been with the electrical industry. The firm will move its offices from the Kinloch Building to the new plant.

Arthur H. Fuldner of Oreon E. & R. G. Scott represented all parties in the transaction.

The Ideal Furniture Co. has leased a storeroom at 5955-57 Easton avenue. The premises consist of basement, two floors and balcony.

The lease was made for Henry Scherrer by the Edward Gilk Co.

GARRICK THEATER LEASE IS SOLD AT FORECLOSURE

Real Estate Concern Pays $10,000 for Building Company's Interest.

The leasehold interest held by the Garrick Building Co. in the Garrick Theater, 513 Chestnut street, last of the city's burlesque houses, was sold at foreclosure yesterday at Civil Courts Building. Miss Virginia M. Fitzgerald, stenographer for a law farm, was the only bidder, at the price of $10,000. She acted for representatives of the George T. Riddle Estate Co., owner of the land on which the theater stands, and title will be transferred to the company.

The foreclosure was on account of a balance of $35,000 due to the Riddle company for a loan advanced to finance the erection of the theater in 1904, as security for which a mortgage on the leasehold was given. The lease was to cover a period of 99 years. The Riddle Co. now becomes the owner of the building lease as well as the land.

The lease originally was held by the Shubert interests, for whom the theater was constructed. Oscar Dane has been president of the Garrick Building Co. about 14 years. Alfred C. Wilson, representing the owners, said arrangements were being made for a reorganization. He was trustee under the mortgage, and as such officiated at the sale.

SALESMEN WANTED

ATTENTION: MEN WHO ARE UNEMPLOYED!

In and around St. Louis are men that are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, or want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men who are looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families, we can present a splendid opportunity.

In our previous announcements we have repeatedly made the statement that we are not interested in men who are merely concerned with the limitations of a small income. However, we will go a long way in helping men to a lucrative and permanent future if that man is big enough and willing enough to realize that he must pay the price and prove his work to us by actual and conscientious hard work.

In order to assure that no man will remain in a rut because of a stipulated income used as a harness over him, we pay our men commissions weekly, giving them a chance to receive in dollars and cents what they actually earn. This business is modern and it is mutual in nature. No investment is required from any man. We finance everything.

Our requirements are: Good references, willingness to work hard, neat appearance.

Such men will be personally interviewed and shown the complete plan of merchandising our unique mechanical specialty. This plan has been and is now very successful; this year already promises to be well ahead of 1932, our biggest year for our entire national organization.

This ad gives no honest, industrious man an excuse for being out of work. Apply in person Monday morning, July 17th, from 9:15 to 1:15, at 561-564 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive Streets.

This is a special interview, and if you can qualify for a position with us, may mean the turning point in your life, regardless of your present occupation.

This is not an ordinary ad, but this is not an ordinary selling job. We firmly believe this represents one of the outstanding opportunities of the decade in specialty sales work.

Distinguished German London Failure Rings D On International

Dr. Julius Curtius Declares Ready for Planned Econom Delay in Arms F

By DR. JULIUS CURT
Former Foreign Minister of
By Special Cable.

THE greatest German music drama, Ric the Nibelungen," begins with the theft of after the curse of the gold has been lo of the Gods."

By Wagner's music drama the picture gods has been spread throughout the entire endlessly as an analogy for the destruction and conceptions of mankind.

After what has happened in London and with the postponement of the disarmament conference, one may safely speak of the twilight of international conferences. Not even he who believes the positive effects of international conference to be unexhausted can pass by these two events indifferently.

A new orientation is indispensable for the organization of international relations. It cannot go on this way any longer. That these relations are actually being endangered and even destroyed through international conferences which were supposed to improve and strengthen them is a fact which certainly must not be continued.

The Kinds of Conferences.

I am speaking, naturally, only of international conferences as they meet in London and Geneva; not of the conferences of another sort, like world power conferences, world postal, telegraph and radio and similar conferences.

Neither am I speaking of international conferences with a limited number of participants and a limited program, like the Washington naval disarmament conference, the Lausanne reparations conference, or the conference of Powers for the Mussolini pact.

The boundary will not be easily determined, but I shall presently try to make clear what is the main issue.

First of all, let me examine two events: the failure of the London world economic conference and the postponement of the world disarmament conference.

I hate dogmatic pessimists and political depressionists whose activities in part are always responsible for the prophesied failure desired by them. But I must admit that the gloomiest forecast for the London conference has been fulfilled.

To be sure, it is still in session as this is written and probably it won't have experienced its apotheosis when this article appears. Further, it is possible the conference will draw up and promulgate an entire system of rules for international intercourse.

But does anybody anywhere still believe that the nations put any trust in this system, that any help will come from London for the governments of nations now fighting the plight of their own economy?

Chief Problem Put Aside.

World indebtedness, international, national, private and political, which represents the chief problem of the economic crisis, was pushed to one side from the very beginning.

President of the Reichsbank Schacht, who announced fulfillment of private obligations to the utmost, and therefore, was justified in raising a claim for co-operative help in the transfer of future interest and amortization installments, was not able to reach an agreement.

With co-operative measures not arrived at, the Reichsbank had to make its own decisions independently.

Furthermore, the confusion surrounding exchanges, instead of stabilizing them, has brought further exchange depreciations. Even if common declarations of the gold standard countries, the sterling bloc and the United States should come about, it is safe to say that it will be so elastic that world

Distinguished German Says London Failure Rings Down Curtain On International Conferences

Dr. Julius Curtius Declares World Is Not Ready for Planned Economy—Discusses Delay in Arms Parley.

By DR. JULIUS CURTIUS,
Former Foreign Minister of Germany.
By Special Cable.

BERLIN, July 15.

THE greatest German music drama, Richard Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelungen," begins with the theft of the Rhinegold and ends, after the curse of the gold has been loosed, with "The twilight of the Gods."

By Wagner's music drama the picture of the twilight of the gods has been spread throughout the entire world. It has been used endlessly as an analogy for the destruction of other values, systems and conceptions of mankind.

After what has happened in London and with the postponement of the disarmament conference, one may safely speak of the twilight of international conferences. Not even he who believes the positive effects of international conference to be unexhausted can pass by these two events indifferently.

A new orientation is indispensable for the organization of international relations. It cannot go on this way any longer. That these relations are actually being endangered and even destroyed through international conferences which were supposed to improve and strengthen them is a fact which certainly must not be continued.

The Kinds of Conferences.

I am speaking, naturally, only of international conferences as they meet in London and Geneva; not of the conferences of another sort, like world power conferences, world postal, telegraph and radio and similar conferences.

Neither am I speaking of international conferences with a limited number of participants and a limited program, like the Washington naval disarmament conference, the Lausanne reparations conference, or the conference of Powers for the Mussolini pact.

The boundary will not be easily determined, but I shall presently try to make clear what is the main issue.

First of all, let me examine two events: the failure of the London world economic conference and the postponement of the world disarmament conference.

I hate dogmatic pessimists and political depressionists whose activities in part are always responsible for the prophesied failure desired by them. But I must admit that the gloomiest forecast for the London conference has been fulfilled.

To be sure, it is still in session as this is written and probably it won't have experienced its apotheosis when this article appears. Further, it is possible the conference will draw up and promulgate an entire system of rules for international intercourse.

But does anybody anywhere still believe that the nations put any trust in this system, that any help will come from London for the governments of nations now fighting the plight of their own economy?

Chief Problem Put Aside.

World indebtedness, international, national, private and political, which represents the chief problem of the economic crisis, was pushed to one side from the very beginning.

President of the Reichsbank Schacht, who announced fulfillment of private obligations to the utmost, and therefore, was justified in raising a claim for co-operative help in the transfer of future interest and amortization installments, was not able to reach an agreement.

With co-operative measures not arrived at, the Reichsbank had to make its own decisions independently.

Furthermore, the confusion surrounding exchanges, instead of stabilizing them, has brought further exchange depreciations. Even if common declarations of the gold standard countries, the sterling bloc and the United States should come about, it is safe to say that it will be so elastic that world trade will not find a safe foundation on it.

Favors Private Conference.

For such a foundation and probably for more and better things, the given organization should have been a private conference of the presidents of authoritative currency banks.

I shall remain silent over the magic formulas for international raising of prices and expansion of credit which have already turned to vapor or will go up in smoke.

The real economic conference, which has gone about its work with a great and earnest will, may perhaps proclaim a few rules and schemes for the arrangement of international cartels. This would represent nothing new. These forms of production grow organically. They cannot be dictated.

For the present, the tariff armistice exists only on paper. An agreement on general tariff reduction is impossible. No unity of will is possible on exceptions to be made from the most favored clauses that would correspond with European conditions.

A proclamation concerning international trade naturally will be drawn up. But one will be able to supplement it as similar ones before have been with the malicious epigram: "Free trade in theory, but a protective tariff in practice."

The Arms Conference.

The postponement of the world disarmament conference for three and a half months is an event which has not been appreciated nearly enough by the world because of the crisis in the world economic conference.

The president of the disarmament conference, Arthur Henderson, during the postponement has agreed to sound out the governments of leading Powers as to how far a compromise is possible on the differences as established at the end of the first reading of the MacDonald plan.

In universally circulated articles, Henderson is seeking to create the impression that an agreement is possible and that the disarmament convention will come about after the conference reassembles. But the nations and governments do not believe it. The attitude of the world press shows that clearly. Declarations of representatives of the French Government concerning the postponement especially disclose that.

The situation that arises is extraordinarily critical. In my pessimistic opinion, either the disarmament conference will not remeet at all, or differences arising if it does are likely to prove insurmountable.

Germany and the other disarmed nations cannot tolerate their remaining disarmed in the midst of highly armed countries. Disarmament of the victorious is the moral, internationally legal, and just claim of the disarmed defeated.

The disarmament conference was the only world conference whose convening was an international duty that had been overdue for years. Certainly it had been a due obligation since Germany's entrance into the League of Nations.

Delay a Serious Mistake.

It was a serious mistake that, after it had convened, it was not carried through without interruptions. Instead, it was thought nec-

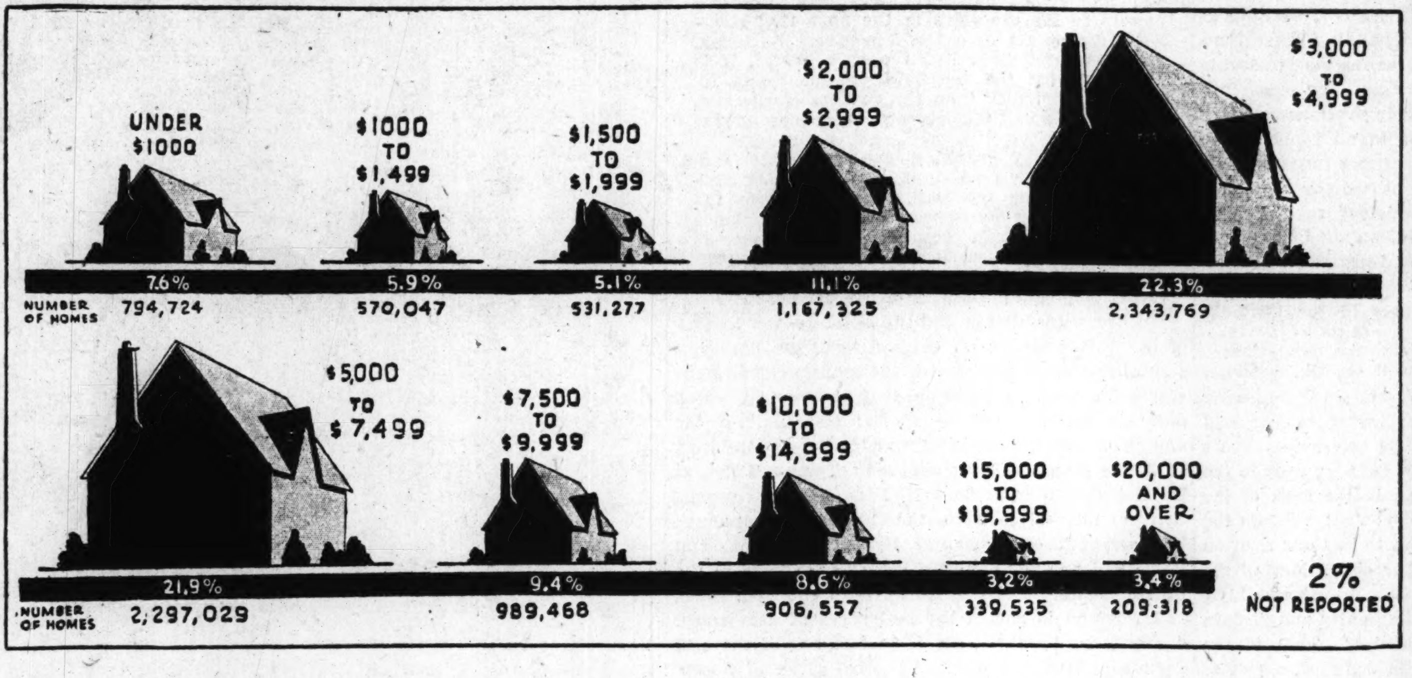
How New Federal Loan Agency Plans to Give Relief to Harassed Owners of Mortgaged Homes



The vast majority of all non-farm homes in the United States will come under the terms of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, which will include homes up to $20,000 in value. The above illustration, based on Bureau of Census data, shows that more than 44 per cent of urban homes are valued between $300 and $7499. Only 3.4 per cent, or 354,337, are valued at $20,000 or more.

—From the United States News.

Agreement of Lender to Accept 4 Per Cent Bonds With Only Interest Guaranteed in Exchange for Security Paying Higher Rate Must Be Obtained—Borrowers to Have From 15 to 18 Years to Pay—Cash Advances Up to 40 Per Cent to Be Made Only in Exceptional Cases—Several Thousand New Government Jobs.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
Of the Post-Dispatch Washington Bureau.

WASHINGTON, July 15.

ABOUT half of the 10,500,000 urban homes in the United States are mortgaged for a total slightly more than $20,000,000,000. Of this amount, it is estimated 25 per cent is in default, principally because of the depression. To meet this distressing situation where hundreds of thousands of home-buying citizens are losing their homes and material parts of their savings, the special session of Congress, as an emergency measure, authorized the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to create the $2,000,000,000 Home Owners' Loan Corporation of an initial capital of $200,000,000 to be advanced by the Treasury.

The Home Loan Bank Board, established during the Hoover administration, found that its original authorization did not permit sufficient latitude to meet even the most pressing emergency calls. Conceived as a permanent Federal institution to make home financing easier, it was unable to reach out directly to help the individual home owners. The original plan was that the Federal Home Loan banks should discount the mortgage paper held by local building and loan associations, and although the Washington bank was authorized to make direct loans to individuals, the red tape was such that no direct loans were made.

The original board expected to receive help from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which lent billions of dollars to banks, insurance companies, mortgage companies and loan associations in the hope of restoring normal business. The beneficiaries took the Government funds, became more liquid—and continued to foreclose mortgages. The Government funds did not percolate down to the families that were being dispossessed.

The new Home Owners' Loan Corporation is an emergency institution which will deal directly with mortgage borrowers and mortgage holders. Chairman William F. Stevenson, the new chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, has announced that "it appears within the bounds of possibility that this corporation can save 500,000 American homes."

Machinery of the new corporation is being set up in Washington and throughout the country. There will be a general manager for each state who will supervise the work of agents in cities and counties. The Missouri manager, who has headquarters in St. Louis, is G. C. Vandover of Farmington. The Arkansas manager is Frank Milwee, whose headquarters are in Little Rock. New managers are being appointed as rapidly as possible.

Many Applications.

The Washington offices, in the Commerce Building, have been swamped with applications for direct loans. Many of the applicants have been completely misinformed about the purposes of the new legislation.

Chairman Stevenson and other officials of the board have emphasized that persons who merely wish to refinance their mortgage indebtedness and are not in danger of foreclosure should not apply for relief. While the board is authorized to deal in mortgages up to $2,000,000,000, this enormous sum is less than 10 per cent of the total home mortgages outstanding. The emergency legislation was designed to help those who have lost their homes or who are in danger of losing them through foreclosures or tax sales.

Help for Three Classses.

The major part of the new law deals specifically with individual home mortgages. Only three classes of mortgage borrowers in dire straits can be directly helped by the Government agency.

The first class is that large group whose homes were mortgaged before June 13, 1933—the date of the President's approval of the act—who were not able to pay or who cannot now pay the interest on their mortgages. To the holder of one of these mortgages the corporation will give a 4 per cent tax-exempt corporation bond, the interest but not the principal guaranteed by the Government—in exchange for the original mortgage which may carry interest rates as high as 8 per cent. If the holder agrees to this exchange, the corporation takes a new mortgage on the property for the same amount with 5 per cent interest. No home appraised at more than $20,000 is eligible under any of the mortgage exchange sections of the act and the corporation will accept no mortgage for more than $14,000. In general, mortgages under this particular section can be as high as 80 per cent of the appraisal value of the property. The mortgage given to the corporation will run for 15 years, with payments either monthly, quarterly, semi-annually or annually. Payments on principal will amount to an additional 4.6 per cent. Any time during the 15 years, the borrower has the right to ask for three years relief from principal payment. Thus the entire life of the loan could be 18 years.

How Section Works.

Here, according to Chairman Stevenson, is how this section of the act would work in a specific case:

Mr. A owns and lives in a home worth $10,000, which is mortgaged to his neighbor, Mr. B, for $7500. Mr A cannot meet the payments and Mr. M, although he needs cash, doesn't want to sell him out. Mr. A, with the consent of Mr. B, applies to the state manager of the corporation for blanks to refinance the loan. The state manager or his agent gets the facts and helps fill out the application. Mr. B agrees that he will take $7500 of the 4 per cent corporation bonds, guaranteed as to interest by the Government, and assigns his mortgage without recourse to the corporation. The corporation finds that Mr. A owes $475 in taxes which he is unable to pay. The corporation pays these taxes. It also pays expenses of registration and investigation of title amounting to $25. Mr. A now owes the corporation $8000, or 80 per cent of the value of his home. He makes a new mortgage for this amount to the corporation, which cancels the old mortgage held by Mr. B. Mr. A has 15 to 18 years to pay off the indebtedness.

Home Already Lost.

Former owners of homes lost by foreclosure, sale under trust deed or power of attorney, or by voluntary surrender to the mortgage holder can get relief under this section of the act provided the mortgage holder has retained possession of the property and is willing to return it to the original owner for a corporation bond equal in amount to the original mortgage. In this instance the property must have been lost within two years prior to approval of the law, or after June 13, 1931. If the mortgagee refuses to agree to the refinancing, or if the property has passed into other hands, the original owner will be unable to obtain relief under the law.

The first hypothetical case assumes that Mr. B, whether an individual, a bank mortgage company or loan association, will be willing to accept a 4 per cent corporation bond in place of a 6 to 8 per cent mortgage. It also assumes that the mortgage holder does not want to foreclose. Horace Russell, general counsel for the board and corporation, says on this point:

"It is thought that in cases of real distress the present holder of the mortgage will prefer to have a 4 per cent, tax free bond, with interest guaranteed by the United States, rather than have to foreclose on somebody's home and take a piece of property upon which he will have to pay taxes, and which will rapidly deteriorate., and which at this time is not highly marketable."

The corporation expects to keep its bonds at par by accepting them for any indebtedness owed the corporation.

The bonds have not been printed and corporation officials have not yet determined their denominations, which may range from $50 to $1000. The first bonds will be for 18 years, the limit set by the law. Whether shorter term bonds will be issued has not been decided.

The primary assets back of these bonds will be the 15 to 18 years individual first mortgages held by the corporation. Secondary assets will be whatever remains of the $200,000,000 Treasury advance after cash outlays have been made and the yearly payments on principal by the individual mortgagors. An unpredictable asset will be the sum to be accumulated by the 1 per cent difference between the 5 per cent interest payment by the mortgagor and the 4 per cent interest payment by the corporation. Administration expenses may virtually wipe out this item.

Retiring of Bonds.

Logically the payments on principal by the mortgage borrower will gradually build up a cash reserve with which to pay off the bonds in full. The law directs the home loan bank board to retire and cancel the bonds and stock of the corporation as rapidly as the resources of the corporation will permit. Under this provision the board is expected eventually to repay the $200,000,000 Treasury advance. Corporation officials say this

Public Education Falling Into Serious Plight in Missouri Through Woeful Lack of Funds

By S. R. McCULLOCH,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THREATENED with the disruption of Missouri's educational facilities because of straitened finances, leaders of the public school system of the State are seeking a way to preserve its standards at any cost.

Dr. Theodore W. H. Irion, president of the Missouri State Teachers' Association and dean of the School of Education of the University of Missouri, estimates that only $3,000,000 of an anticipated State apportionment of about $12,000,000 will be forthcoming to finance the schools during the coming school year.

With State aid more essential than ever before, particularly in small communities because of the reduction in local property assessments and tax rates, it appears now that it will be even less than last year when the State was unable to meet 55 per cent of its educational obligations to local communities.

Back to Red Schoolhouse Days.

So serious is the situation—even when viewed in teaching efficiency and service to pupils alone—that Dr. Irion, who discussed the matter with the writer, feels that when the doors of the schools open in September they may lead to facilities "about like those furnished by 'the little red schoolhouse' of 1903 when Missouri ranked thirtieth among the States in educational standards."

The school apportionment fund, created in 1931 through which is termed generally the "New School Law," Dr. Irion says, contains now only about $1,772,000. Yet this represents virtually all the revenue it may receive before time to make the first semi-annual distribution of funds in September.

It includes also its share of the income tax receipts, regarded as a major source of school revenue. Dean Irion points out that no more income tax revenue will be available during the year and that the property tax, depended on to furnish most of the second payment in March, probably will be less than $1,200,000. Property assessments, he found, were reduced by almost half a billion dollars last year.

Unpaid Teachers.

Figures compiled by Charles A. Lee, State Superintendent of Schools, indicate that many rural schools ended the last term in debt and that about 3000 districts will not have more than $35 a month to meet all expenses necessary for an eight-month school term beginning in September. Last year one teacher in four, he said, taught for from one to four months without pay.

In 24 per cent of the high schools, Lee continues, teachers and janitors worked a month without pay; in 20 per cent they worked two months; and in 15 per cent of the schools generally they worked three or more months without pay. Many high schools were forced to cut short their school terms, he reports, thereby forfeiting their first class rating. Such ratings represent recognition of the educational efficiency of modern school systems.

Detailed statistics prepared by the Superintendent show a consistent expansion of the school system during the last 20 years yet such a decline in revenue since 1930 that in 1931 the percentage of aid furnished by the State was less than in 1910.

Gloomy Outlook.

Delinquent school taxes totaled $7,000,000 last March 1, he pointed out, adding that it would be necessary to place an 87-cent levy on the entire 1932 State valuation to raise in a year the amount of the taxes in arrears.

So the educational future of the State appears gloomy, indeed, to those who have assisted in its development and marked with anxiety the increasing inability of local and State revenues to meet the minimum funds regarded as essential for the efficient operation of the schools.

A preliminary survey by Dr. Irion of conditions threatening to handicap the schools this fall indicates the inevitability of what he regards as "the distressing retrogression of educational standards unless heroic measures are taken."

His observations, renewed constantly through his contacts with the 21,000 members of the teachers' association, will be supplemented by the work of a fact-finding committee which will detail the effects of the financial stringency of the schools and try to find a way out.

Seven Steps Backward.

"It has ceased to be a question of planning ahead or of continuing to progress," Dr. Irion points out, "or of even merely marking time. Even marking time would be a victory just now. But we are faced instead with the collapse of our school system at a crucial time when the demands upon it are greater and of more importance than ever before."

But worse than the imminence of "financial collapse," he asserts, is the resultant occurrence of "professional deterioration" with a consequent return to teaching facilities of the "days of the horse and buggy, mud roads, and isolated schoolhouses."

Tangible evidence of seven major handicaps affecting the approaching session have been observed by Dr. Irion.

They are shortening of school terms; reduction of teachers' salaries to a low general level; elimination of school activities of proved worth; increasing enrollments with decreasing facilities; over-development of mass educational methods; reduction of necessary equipment, including library facilities, and a halt in building programs and needed repairs and replacements.

Educators of the State view with concern the steady decrease in the salaries of teachers, not merely from the viewpoint of diminished incomes but because a tendency has manifested itself for former teachers who have failed in business to turn to teaching again, even at a small salary, although they have failed to keep abreast of educational developments.

'Sliding Back to 1903.'

"This situation has become one of the most destructive forces of the depression," Dr. Irion observes, "and is one of the reasons we are sliding back to conditions of 1903. Some of those who obtain teaching jobs today are mere job-hunters, with no aptitude for teaching as a career, who underbid trained teachers for the positions."

Contracts already prepared for next term, Dr. Irion finds, indicate that many monthly high school salaries in small towns will be cut from about $100 to $75. In some cases, rural school contracts call for $25 or $30 a month, compared with $60 a few years ago.

Dire as is the plight of the rural schools, the situation confronting towns up to about 2500 population is even more serious, it has been discovered, because many of them have struggled to provide high school facilities and are at the end of their resources.

Terms generally may be shortened this year by two months, Dr. Irion has learned, so that some schools will run but five or six months.

Courses to Be Dropped.

Both Dr. Irion and Superintendent Lee are of the opinion that classifying activities apart

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Tragedy of the Industrial Age.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE provisions being inserted in the industrial codes for the abolition of child labor, and the general public enthusiasm with which this emancipation is being received, are most gratifying. The codes remain incomplete, however, in that they make no provision for a maximum age of employment, as well as a minimum.

One of the most heart-rending tragedies of this industrial age is the sight of aged people who, after a life of toil, have reached the place where labor is irksome and burdensome, and still find it necessary to struggle on. Aged workers have nothing to gain for the Recovery Act. Employers everywhere, struggling to make profits while paying maximum wages for minimum hours, will force the pace of the worker, and the veteran will fall by the wayside. The overwhelming sentiment of our people is in favor of old-age pensions.

Now to return to the matter of child labor. To take the child out of industry is only half doing the job. The other half is to get him back into school. Bright children graduate from the grade schools at the age of 13. Are we going to be satisfied merely to prevent them from following some gainful occupation and leave them to loaf away these precious years in mere idleness, or worse still, to increase the ever-swelling army of young hoodlums bred in the pool halls and other favorite haunts of crime?

I live in a mining town in a state that does not permit boys under 16 to work in the mines. During the depression, young men over that age have been unable to get jobs, and I know men over 21 years of age who have not yet started to work. My observation proves to me that the majority of these young men are inferior morally and in intelligence to the boys they were when they left grade school.

Children between 13 years and 16 live life with mouth, ears and eyes wide open. Let's fill them with wholesome food.

There is no greater travesty, no greater censure on society, no surer proof that we lack vision, intelligence, courage, real civilization than here. We raise our children in wanton idleness and ignorance and chain our aged to the plow.

Consumer Co-operation.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOU are doing a fine job in sending Mr. Childs over to Sweden to get that consumer co-operation story.

It's too bad that consumer co-operation has not been talked about in this country as the next step beyond controlled corporatism which we are in now, instead of communism. E. R. BOWEN.

A Visitor for the Chancellor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SCENE: The Chancellor's palace in Berlin.

Attendant: "A Person to see Your Excellency."

Chancellor: "A Person? I see no anonymous person. How dare you?"

Attendant: "Your Excellency, never man spake as this one. I beseech you to see him."

Chancellor: "Ha! He must be of noble blood. Let him enter for the moment."

The Person: "I am Jesus, the Son of Mary, a Jew. Hitler, Hitler, why persecutest thou Me? Has the soul of Saul arisen in thee to stone My brethren like unto Stephen? It will be hard for thee to defy the verities."

The Chancellor's knees trembled; a sudden dizziness overcame him, and when he recovered, the Person had vanished.

It is savagery to persecute any people, but for those who profess Christ to persecute the brethren of Christ, the people from whose blood Jesus himself issued, reveals nothing less than a mental insanity, a hopeless perversion of the precept of that gentle Spirit which came to tell man that love is the greatest thing on earth. For a Moratorium on Criticism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ONE of your correspondents does not believe in the divine right of kings, and would give unbounded freedom to the press. That statement might win applause under ordinary conditions, but circumstances alter cases. If ever there was a time when this country needed a ruler with divine rights, that time is right now. The "conservative" government that used up so much of Mr. Hoover's mental and physical powers has left a state of affairs in this country that only the most strenuous activity and unlimited privileges can straighten out. President Roosevelt deserves—and has demanded—that every co-operation possible be given his efforts by the American nation.

The obligation to aid recovery does not exclude the press, the freedom of which will be in no wise hampered by withholding unnecessary and untimely criticism.

It is gratifying to note that the wiser editors of the great and worth-while newspapers have evinced little desire to exploit any tactics on the part of President Roosevelt, generously aware that if mistakes must be made, they are made by a whole-hearted American in behalf of the American people. J. M. B.

Democracy and the New Deal

Apprehensions that the extraordinary powers granted President Roosevelt by the recent special session of Congress mean the passing of democracy in the United States deserve consideration.

To the exultations of other nations which have passed under dictatorships in the post-war era we need not respond; but the fears of our own people are important. Democracy has in the United States one of its chief exponents, as it has become through us an inspiration to much of the world. Nothing could be more disastrous historically than that this supposedly great political boon should fail.

Robert Herrick, the author, who surveys the scene from the thoughtful coign of the novelist and commentator, defends democracy in the United States against the charge of failure. He says it is the economic feudalism which fastened itself upon the body politic that has failed. Not the tree, but the parasite, is dying. In his judgment, we have at the moment the semblance of something other than democracy because the people have resorted to heroic means of rescuing themselves from the mess into which they were plunged by their overlords. As to the authors of that mess, he is in no doubt at all. He says they are the big bankers and industrialists, the same people recently identified by Josephus Daniels as those who came perilously near making the great Republic into a feudal state. In a public address at Mexico, D. F., July 4, Ambassador Daniels said:

> The growth of semi-feudalism in the United States has made us largely a nation of feudal lords without the responsibilities and obligations assumed by the feudal system of the Old World.

Through a long series of revelations, beginning with the oil scandals of the Harding regime and coming down to recent admissions before the Senate Banking Committee, of what low cunning does to the public exchequer, there has been in the back of the people's minds a pertinent inquiry: Just what do the more powerful among us conceive to be their relation to society? Are wealth and power obligations of the most solemn nature, as civilization presupposes? Or do they merely stand for social immunity and disdain of even the conventional moralities? That is the greatest of all public questions in America, a test of patriotism transcending all flag-waving and more meaningful than the roar of 10,000 drum corps. The public life of a nation can never be better than its private morals.

According to Mr. Herrick, what has happened will be salutary. It has taught us the folly of vesting leadership in anyone but ourselves. He says the whole testimony of our history from the birth of the Republic has been that the instinct of the people is better than the judgments of the few. The whole theory of democracy rests, of course, upon the infallibility of the masses. Its weakness is that the judgments of the masses are slow. Says Mr. Herrick in a communication to the Nation, a liberal weekly:

> The reason that many of us prefer the risks of "mob psychology" is quite simple. Our so-called "best people," those whose social and educational advantages are superior to the herd, so often guess wrong on vital human questions, especially where their own interests are involved!
> Without tediously reciting the many instances of this truth in our own history from the Revolution to the Civil War, instances in which the verdict of time has proved the "mob" to have been right against the judgments of timid tories and selfish industrialists and rugged individualists, it is sufficient to mention the Great War and the fantastic peace. This most lamentable of all human mistakes was neither designed, initiated nor engineered by the common people of any nation.
> Here in America, it was the House of Morgan, aided by our socially best people, which first ardently espoused the cause of the Allies and ultimately worked the country into the war—which many of them now ruefully regret. It was these influences, not the "mob," that committed the stupendous stupidities at Versailles. It was not the "mob" that made the Treaty of Versailles, the Dawes subterfuge and the Young compromise, but the foremost statesmen and financiers of the world.
> To come nearer home, it has not been "mob psychology" that has wrecked 10,000 of our banks in a few years, but gross incompetency and dishonesty among our leading and most trusted citizens. It has not been the pressure of the "mob" that has compelled the Congress to confess moral and intellectual impotency and hand over its powers to the executive in the hope that somehow he may get us out of the mess. So today, as it has ever been in an obscure world, it is safer to trust the collective judgment and instinct of humanity than the wisdom of the few, however able and well equipped they may appear to be.
> The mass of mankind can be easily confused, as our sly masters of finance and big business know only too well, since they hire the experts to befog the issues. But when the choice involves the simple moralities of existence, as most political and social choices ultimately must, one can trust the reactions of common men rather than the prejudices of the privileged few.

We are witnessing a turning point in the history of the United States. If the motive of the Roosevelt administration is democratic, the country can be made secure for the only philosophy of government which does not justify itself by special pleading. If the motive of the Roosevelt administration is less than that, the people will repudiate it. They will not, as the Romans did after the fall of the Roman Republic, deliver themselves into the hands of autocrats. The strength of democracy lies in education, and Rome had no such educated mass as we have in the United States. The English have an educated mass, and England is one of the mainstays of democracy. A monarchy by name, she is in fact one of the best demonstrations any people has ever given of its entire capacity to govern itself.

The great virtue of democracy is that it alone, of all political philosophies, places within the hands of the people the remedies for their own wrongs. Not by bloodshed do they finally rise against and destroy their oppressors, but by resort to the ballot. We must not be impatient of their slowness to wrath. They are not political scientists. Government is far from their daily concern. But when they find themselves despoiled, whether of their livelihood or their liberties, they act with emphasis. Jefferson, who understood democracy, said the people should revolt every 20 years. Lincoln, who understood it, said their right to revolt is inalienable. It is for education to divert revolution into peaceful channels.

We have no apprehensions as to democracy in the United States. Not so long as there is a schoolhouse in every village, at every fork of the road. Not so long as the press is free and the people can read. Not so long as we can have revolution at the polls, as we did last November. We agree with Mr. Herrick that the security of the people is in their own judgment. Some terrible blunders have been made in their name, but we can recover from those.

The Monte Alban Jewels

On exhibition at Chicago, the Monte Alban archeological collection, unearthed in Oaxaca, Mexico, in January, 1932, is exciting the interest of scientists from all parts of the United States. Many of them, familiar with similar discoveries in Egypt, agree with Dr. Alfonso Caso, who found the Monte Alban tomb, that no relation exists between the culture of ancient American civilization and that of Egypt or the Orient.

The collection was taken from a tomb containing the mummies of 10 caciques, or chieftains, of the Mixtec tribe of Mexican Indians, whose origin is unknown. It contains the most dazzling array of exquisitely worked gold and precious stones, whose intrinsic value alone is very great, in addition to their priceless historical value. There are crowns of pure gold, rings of gold, copper, silver and jade; necklaces of turquoise, jade, pearls, coral and amber; delicately engraved bones presumably telling the stories of the caciques; a tiny head of the god Xipetotec, 10 centimeters tall and of solid gold; a human skull adorned with a turquoise mosaic; vessels of alabaster engraved with hieroglyphics; and so on.

In many respects, though differing in technique, the Monte Alban treasures argue for old Mexico as brilliant and highly advanced a civilization as ancient Egypt. In some details, such as the perfection of the gold filigree work, the Mexican discoveries are said to be superior to their Egyptian counterparts. Long before Columbus discovered America, indeed, lost in the mists of time, Mexican Indian civilizations rose to grandeur and fell.

Mexico, from an archeological standpoint, has hardly been scratched. It will continue to reveal the most astounding additions to our knowledge of the human race's prehistoric past.

No More Poison for Profit

The Roosevelt administration, having already provided for the protection of the small investor through the new Securities Act, now plans to bring the consumer more securely within the sheltering arm of the Federal Government. Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and member of the Brain Trust, has prepared the draft of a law which will expand the scope and increase the effectiveness of the Food and Drug Act.

Since this measure was first enacted, in 1906, there have been changes in the composition, in the production and in the marketing of the commodities which it covers which have made the weaknesses of the regulation, the procedure and the penalties which it provides increasingly apparent. The law gives the Department of Agriculture no authority to establish legal standards for food products except in the limited field of canned foods. It prohibits false labeling, but does not positively compel informative labeling. Its prohibition of misrepresentation applies only to statements printed on the label itself; not to claims made in the accompanying advertising propaganda. It gives the Government no power to supervise the manufacturing processes of products which might endanger public health. It does not prohibit the sale of medicines containing harmful drugs if they are truthfully labeled. It does not cover cosmetics or mechanical devices which are sold for the treatment of disease or the alteration of other bodily conditions.

The present law places upon the Government the burden of proof that the standards by which it judges the purity of foods are actually sound; that preparations which it considers harmful actually lack curative powers; that manufacturers who misrepresent their products were actually guilty of fraudulent intent. It imposes for a first offense the ridiculously low penalty of a $200 fine; for the second a fine of $300 and imprisonment not exceeding one year.

The consequences of these shortcomings are serious. According to W. G. Campbell, chief of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, thousands of persons have been poisoned by improperly prepared food products. Others have fallen unwittingly into the use of habit-forming drugs. Others have been induced to purchase mechanical devices for the correction of conditions for which there is no mechanical cure. Still others have suffered serious injury through the use of cosmetics containing dangerous ingredients. These are the conditions which Mr. Tugwell's revision of the Food and Drug Act aims to correct.

The Tugwell draft authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to promulgate legal standards for all foods. It provides for the establishment of tolerances for substances, such as preservatives, considered injurious. It outlaws drugs which may be dangerous to health under the conditions of use prescribed in their labeling. It calls for the operation of factories under Federal license and supervision where the public health requires it. It brings cosmetics and mechanical devices within the control of the law, increases the severity of penalties, and improves procedure by defining a drug as misbranded whose label bears any representation which is contrary to the general agreement of medical opinion.

The proposed law does not stop at the prohibition of false statements on the labels of drug products but requires, as well, the disclosure of all essential facts. If ingredients are habit-forming, the label must say so. This requirement of truth-telling is extended also to the advertisements by which such products are sold. False promises of cure of incurable disorders are prohibited, and manufacturers, distributors or dealers who make them are made liable to prosecution in the Federal courts. Like the Securities Act, the food and drug bill writes the new warning, "Let the seller beware," in place of the older, "Let the buyer beware."

The new draft was introduced in the Senate June 12 by Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, but was lost in the rush of business which preceded adjournment. It will be presented again to the regular session of Congress which convenes in January. The food, drug and cosmetics manufacturers who are affected by its provisions will have six months in which to examine the measure and plan their opposition.

A stiff fight is in prospect. Those consumers who believe in the policies embodied in the administration's bill would be wise, therefore, to organize in its support.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

A Naive Classic

THE NEW PROSPERITY. By Bernard London. (Published at 21 East Fortieth Street, New York City.)

REVIEWERS are confidentially informed that the author of this essay is a "successful business man" and that he is therefore qualified to speak with authority on the means whereby prosperity may not only be restored but rendered perpetual. This is reassuring, for there are entirely too many impractical people talking Utopian nonsense these days, and what we need is practical men of substance who can give us good sound business advice.

Was it the impractical dreamers, the hare-brained theorists, who produced our last period of unprecedented prosperity? No, indeed! And when a great treaty is to be formulated, like that of Versailles, for instance, or when an economic world conference is to be held, do we depend principally for our momentous decisions upon men with shrewd business minds, or don't we? We do! Well, then, let us listen humbly to this successful business man, and get understanding.

Turning to the prefatory note, we read: "It would be regrettable if dependence on makeshift remedies were to make the (present) rally purely ephemeral. Mere psychological gestures are not enough." (Prolonged applause from the proletariat.) "Economic rehabilitation must be builded on a foundation of granite." (Cries of "Bravo!", "Bring on your granite!" all over the place.)

Whereupon the "new economic policy" is expounded, the essential idea being substantially as follows:

First, we are informed, upon the authority of Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City Bank of New York, that this is a "stupid depression." The apparently harsh saying is explained to us. Is it not stupid that millions upon millions should be in want because they have produced too much, because "the granaries and warehouses of the world are overstuffed with surplus supplies, which have so broken the price level as to make new production unattractive and unprofitable"?

(At this point some rude, ignorant fellow in the gallery cries out: "What's to hinder them from using the surplus? Was it made to use, or wasn't it? And if it wasn't, why was it made at all?" But clearly, the poor fellow is simple-minded. He may even be a Russian, who knows?)

Now, pursuing our rich vein of granite, why can't these needy millions get at that surplus and make use of it? Because they have no purchasing power. And how come? Because they have no jobs; that is to say, they are not now busily engaged in heaping up an ever greater and greater surplus!

It is at this point that the shrewd business mentality sees right through the problem and hits upon a very simple solution.

The trouble with the world, we learn, is that "people everywhere are today disobeying the law of obsolescence." That's why we have a surplus of everything and millions upon millions in need. People use everything too long. Take a pair of shoes. How are we going to keep our shoe factories going steadily if we persist in wearing our shoes longer than it is economically sound to wear them? Same way with wheat! How can we keep our farmers at work and prosperous if we try to eat up all the farmers can raise? Impossible! Well, then, isn't it clear what should be done about the matter of surplus?

It is clear to the shrewd business mind of our author. We must, he insists, have a law that renders deliberate waste obligatory. Every product at the moment of its marketing must be given an official economic life, and if the purchaser persists in using or holding a given article beyond the time set by law for replacement, a tax shall be paid to the Government for such use.

One buys a pair of shoes, the official economic "life" of which is two months. At the end of two months, the shoes should be taken by the dutiful citizen to the proper Government agency and turned in, a rebate slip being received for application upon the price of a new pair of shoes, the technically "dead" pair of shoes being destroyed. Just so with everything else.

Thus everybody (excepting, of course, the owning class) will be kept working "at full capacity"; for, if it should be noted that a surplus is beginning to accumulate in any industry, the official economic life of the product involved may be shortened!

Another excellent feature of the plan, we learn, is the revenue accruing from the obsolescence tax, which would go far toward paying the expenses of government. Isn't this admirably shrewd and far-seeing? No more unbalanced budgets!

"In the new prosperity," observes the author, "good business will become identical with good sociology."

Good business, indeed! Every factory and producing agency of any sort going at full blast, with nothing whatever (so the author in his shrewdness infers) to check the steady and enormous flow of profit to the owning minority. Nothing, indeed, but the discrepancy between the purchasing power of wages and the profit-plus price of the aggregate product to be consumed!

But why bring that up and spoil a pretty picture? The whole population furiously and constantly engaged in production, to the greater power and glory of the owning minority! No longer the old appeal to vanity and envy of the Joneses! No high-pressure sales methods! Nothing left to a "planless economy" and the whim of the individual! The law not only compels the people to buy all they produce, but it compels them to produce constantly "up to capacity."

The ignorant chap in the gallery is heard again; and he is saying something to the effect that it is plainly idiotic, as he sees it, to make vastly more bread than we need in order that the hired baker and his family may not starve; vastly more shoes than we need that the hired shoemaker and his family may not go barefooted. And at the moment when he is being hustled out for disturbing the peace, he is saying something to the effect that if such a scheme be wise and sane, then may God send us fools and madmen!

But if the book here noted is manifestly foolish, why notice it at all? For the reason that it deserves to be ranked as a classic expression of capitalistic economics, in which waste is a prime essential. The author naively follows the logic of capitalistic theory right up to the inevitable absurdity, and he is unabashed thereby. Mankind exists for business and business exists for profit; and, for the author, there is nothing ludicrous about the picture he draws.

SWASTIKA: THE NAZI TERROR. By James Waterman Wise. (Harrison Smith and Robert Haas, New York City.)

SWASTIKA OVER GERMANY. By Dr. Siegfried Lipschitz. (Rand School Press, New York City.)

THOSE who may desire a better understanding of Hitlerism in general and the persecution of the Jews in particular would do well to procure the three publications here listed.

The first on the list, a pamphlet of nearly 100 pages, presents the atrocious facts in a manner not to be questioned, and ends with a section devoted to American protests against the tragic idiocy, together with resolutions of various organizations. The second on the list is rather in the nature of a philosophical discussion of the matter, ending with a chapter in which the question, "What can be done?" is answered, apparently without the slightest understanding of modern nationalism and its causes. The author seems to believe that Hitlerism is, in its essence, even as in its appearance, a phenomenon peculiar to Germany, something definitely localized that must somehow be defeated by the rest of the world lest it spread and destroy civilization.

"Civilization," he remarks, "is at death grips with madness in Germany." It is indeed; and it is also at death grips with madness everywhere else in the world, not excepting London in recent weeks.

It is the sensational form of the madness in Germany that befogs the real issue. Jewish persecution is a red herring drawn across the Nazi trail. The real social cleavage involved is not inter-racial, but economic and inter-class. Dr. Siegfried Lipschitz knows this, and his pamphlet is a masterpiece of realistic discussion. The concluding passage runs in part as follows: "Everywhere the workers must awaken to the realization that the enemy is not within their own ranks, but outside. The enemy stands to the right."

EASTERN PHILOSOPHY FOR WESTERN MINDS. By Hamish McLaurin. (Stratford Co., Boston.)

IT is commonly assumed, and without the slightest suspicion of any assumption involved, that the sense view of the world, supposed to be commonly shared by all men, is the only really sane view; that there is but a single mode of thinking, which, if properly employed, suffices for all our human needs. That there may well be a joker in the assumption, the many needless woes of men would seem to suggest. Those who may have suspected such a joker, and are vaguely seeking a less personal and punishing way of regarding human perplexities, might find some valuable hints in the book here listed. $1,935,719 SPENT FOR JOBLESS IN FIRST HALF OF 1933

Report by Provident Association Shows 19,367 Families Were Taken Care Of in This Period.

ONLY 2.2 PER CENT FOR ADMINISTRATION

11.3 Per Cent of Total Sum Went for Variety of Services to Needy by Trained Social Workers.

The St. Louis Provident Association expended $1,935,719 for unemployment relief the first half of 1933, compared with $185,186 the first six months of 1929, it was announced yesterday.

A total of 19,367 families were under care of the associaton during the first six months of 1933 as against 3218 families during the corresponding period of 1929.

An analysis of the expenditure figures for the six-month period of 1933 shows that 86.5 per cent was expended in direct material aid to families under care; 11.3 per cent in direct service to the families and 2.2 per cent for administration.

What "Service" Includes.

The service item, it was explained, includes the cost of workers trained to deal with personnel and family problems; finding jobs and arranging for adolescents to learn trades; reconciling estranged relatives and discovering sources of aid within the family circle; teaching mothers in housekeeping, marketing, cooking; arranging for physical examinations and treatment and, where necessary, for commitment to institutions providing legal aid; advising as to recreations and avocations in the interests of health, morale, personality development and an infinite variety of other administrations to correct the causes of distress.

"Those who founded the Provident Associaton, while wishing to provide material aid where needed believed in restoring independence as against mere almsgiving," declared Peter Kasius, general manager. "This requires trained workers with skilled and mature judgment. To the people they help, case workers must serve as teacher, business adviser and sympathetic friend, as well as the bearer of material relief, and they must have the wisdom to make vital decisions in family situations where lack of knowledge and poor judgment are often the causes of breakdown.

Drop in June.

"Their salaries are many times offset by the natural sources of aid they discover as they go about their main business of helping needy families to become self-supporting.

"During the depression years direct material aid has necessarily taken a disproportionate place in our program. People need work; but since there has been so little of it, we have had to increase relief. To regard skilled service as inessential, however, or secondary to relief, would be similar to arguing that the skilled training and experience of hospital physicians and nurses are secondary to the dressing and bandaging they use in first aid. Skilled service is essential to economically sound and basically remedial social service."

A total of 15,106 families, a drop of 470 families from the previous month, received help from the Provident Associaton in June, Kasius said. The expenditure in June dropped to $323,904 from $338,576 expended in the previous month.

Such opportunities as offered by school music, vocational agriculture groups, home economics classes, and physical and health educational facilities have demonstrated their worth, he says.

A return is threatened, it is held, to the "rigid formalism" and a type of "bookish education" which were hallmarks of discarded standards. Fewer teachers but larger classes—especially in the high schools—foreshadow a return to "mass production classroom methods."

More Pupils, Fewer Facilities.

Reduction of library facilities force adherence to text book assignments minus the broadening benefit of supplementary reading in a day when current events cast their reflection on the pages of history and the stated premises of economists and politicians.

Stocks of surplus materials usually taken for granted, homely objects such as chalk and erasers, were nearly exhausted last term with no prospect of replenishment. Other class room supplies are reduced to the point where their absence handicaps teachers and pupils.

Mounting high school enrollments, it has been found, are attributable primarily to the fact that many boys and girls who customarily would go to work after completing elementary school now are unable to find jobs and are able to go to high school.

Educators feel that this circumstance offers an opportunity for increased service yet find that in the hour of greatest need they have fewer facilities than ever before to meet it.

Suggests More Taxes.

What is the solution? The only solution that Dr. Irion can see is for the State to provide additional sources of income, perhaps through "some form of a luxury tax or a sales tax." It has even been suggested that a special session of the Legislature be convened to deal with the problem of the State school system.

Dr. Irion says there are those prone to lay the blame for the present plight of the schools on many sources but that "faultfinding and blame-fixing" is of scant present value.

He recalls, for example, that many who cry for more revenue oppose additional revenue-raising taxation; that the last General Assembly found as much opposition to a selective sales tax as to additional taxes.

Public Support Needed.

It is idle, he asserts, to talk of a special legislative session, or indeed any legislative action, until the people of the State are prepared to unite in a definite program expressive of a common desire for refinancing education.

Upon the people of the State, including those who live in urban centers where schools have resources not available to other communities, rests the responsibility for saving the school system from disintegration, educational leaders are agreed.

It has resolved itself into a question of an expression of practical faith in the necessity of adequate public education, for the future as well as the present.

How New Federal Loan Agency Plans Home Mortgage Relief

provision also authorizes them to buy bonds in the open market for the retirement whenever practicable instead of waiting 18 years.

If, however, the financial operations should not work out so happily, and the corporation itself is not able to meet the interest on its 4 per cent bonds, the Treasury is directed to pay to the corporation enough funds to enable it to meet all interest payments in full.

For these funds the corporation must pay the Treasury the same interest rate as carried by the bonds.

The bonds will be tax exempt both as to principal and interest, except surtaxes, estate, inheritance and gift taxes.

Suppose, however, the mortgage holder, Mr. B, refuses to take the corporation bonds in exchange for what might be a much more profitable mortgage. Here we come to the second class of borrowers who can get relief from the new law.

Cash Loan Provision.

For this class, the amount the corporation will lend is only 40 per cent of the appraised value of the home. In the first hypothetical case, the only outlay of actual cash by the corporation was the $500 for taxes, title investigation and registration. The second class calls for relatively large cash outlays, and at present the corporation has only the $200,000,000 cash advanced by the Treasury.

If Mr. A's mortgage is over 40 per cent of the appraised valuation of the home, Mr. A is in a most unfortunate situation. The Government Corporation can do nothing for him. Suppose, however, that the mortgage held by Mr. B is for only $3500 and that Mr. B declines to accept the 4 per cent Corporation bonds. In this instance, the Corporation will lend Mr. A cash up to $4000, or 40 per cent of the value of the home, and take a mortgage bearing 6 per cent interest. With the cash, Mr. A can repay Mr. B, pay off taxes and incidentals, and have from 15 to 18 years to pay the Government agency.

The 6 per cent interest on this class of refinancing is expected to discourage the calls for large cash outlays by the Corporation. There are indications, however, that administration details will also discourage this type of loan. Chairman Stevenson has announced that the primary purpose of the new law is for the refunding of mortgages and not for the liquidation of mortgages in cash. The applicant in the cash loan category must prove that he cannot obtain funds elsewhere in ordinary lending channels. He must also prove that he will lose his home if he does not pay Mr. B. It is fairly safe to assume that few Government loans will be made to this class.

Loans for Repairs.

The third class of loans permissible under the act is expected to give relief to persons owning unincumbered homes, who because of the depression cannot pay past due taxes or assessments or who cannot make the necessary repairs on their property. The Corporation loans to these distressed persons cannot exceed 50 per cent of the appraised value of the property and carry interest rates of 6 per cent. These loans require cash outlays by the Corporation, and, like those of the second class, will be limited.

The Corporation has announced that appraisals will not be the technical market value of the home. An effort will be made to determine the value of the property to the owner as a home. The appraiser will give equal weight to (1) the present market value; (2) the reproduction cost less depreciation; and (3) the value as determined by capitalizing the reasonable rental value of the home over the past 10 years.

The corporation will not deal with commercially rented property and will refer typical farm loans to the Land Banks. Homes, however, will not be excluded if, incidentally, the owner has a garden or small farm, or makes some other incidental use of the property.

The limitation of $20,000 appraised value does not exclude many homes. The last census showed that the total number of non-farm homes occupied by their owners was 10,503,386. Of these, 794,724 were valued at less than $1000; 570,047 between $1000 and $1499; 531,277 between $1500 and $1999; 1,167,325 betwen $2000 and $2999; 2,343,769 between $3000 and $4999; 2,297,029 between $5000 and $7499; 989,468 between $7500 and $9999; 906,557 between $10,000 and $14,999; 339,535 between $15,000 and $19,999, and 354,337 over $20,000.

1930 Census Figures.

These figures, however, were obtained from the 1930 census when property values were much higher than today. This is one reaosn why the 80 per cent of the appraised valuation was put in the present law. It is common knowledge that some homes are mortgaged for more than the present market value of the property, and while the law permits the inclusion of second mortgages in the refinancing plans, it is doubtful whether many such mortgages will be included in the exchanges of mortgages for corporation bonds.

The individual mortgage provisions in the new law are all emergency measures. The corporation is authorized to make loans only during the next three years. After June 13, 1936, the corporation is expected merely to sit tight and collect the money paid in by the mortgagors.

The second major section of the new law is permanent legislation. It authorizes the Home Loan Bank Board to help localities set up Federal Savings and Loan Associations. The Board is instructed to advance funds for buying half the capital stock, up to $100,000, in such associations in localities not having building and loan organizations. About half the counties in the country lack such facilities. The new savings and loan associations will be chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and will be allowed to discount mortgages to obtain additional funds from the regional Home Loan Banks, which will act as Federal Reserve Banks for home mortgages.

Statement by Chairman.

Commenting on this section of the law, Chairman Stevenson said:

"The building and loan associations are now the principal source of money to be had by people who desire to acquire or build a home, and there are 1500 counties in the United States in which there is no such association.

"The idea is to promote the organization of such associations by this corporation taking 50 per cent of the stock right along with the citizens of any local community who desire to establish an association. The association, when established, will be a source from which the local people can borrow money to build, buy or improve their homes, and the associations, therefore, will be a co-operative effort to save and conserve capital in local communities. The corporation says to a community, 'if you want to organize a building and loan association of this type, we will put up a dollar of capital for every dollar that you put up. If you take $10,000 capital, we will take $10,000, pay it in as fast as you pay yours in, and that association will become a member of one of the Federal home loan banks, and as it loans to its members in the local community, it can take the paper to the Federal home loan bank to which it belongs and use it for procuring money to reloan to the people of its community.

"It is to encourage thrift and to build up a great co-operative financial structure, dealing strictly with homes."

8000 New Jobs.

Every effort will be made, according to board officials, to keep the staff of the Washington office at a minimum. After state managers have been selected, all inquiries and applications should be directed either to state headquarters or to the local agents.

Recent announcements by the board indicate that 8000 to 10,000 names will be added to the Government payrolls. State managers will be assisted by counsel, appraisers, title examiners and other necessary personnel. There are more than 3000 counties in the United States, many of which will have local agents. In large and populous counties, general appraisers and counsel will be necessary.

Loan applications will be received by state managers, who will return them to local agents in the sections from which the applications come. When the applications are approved by the state managers and their legal advisers, the record will be sent to the Home Owner's Loan Corporation in Washington for review and final approval or rejection. In each instance the action of the state agencies will carry weight although not binding on the reviewing authority in Washington.

German Says Failure Ends Conferences

essary to shove the world economic conference in between. Repeatedly I demanded in my articles that the economic conference be summoned in the fall of 1933 at the earliest. Now one has reasons as plentiful as huckleberries to motivate postponement of the disarmament conference out of consideration for the world economic parley.

The gravest error, however, was that the real problem of disarmament was abandoned and one allowed oneself to be enticed by France into the labyrinth of the French security system. This sin the disarmament conference will have great difficulty in making good.

For agreement on the measure of disarmament of the conquered nations, only a few days were necessary in Paris in 1919. For general disarmament, the American delegation brought into the Geneva conference in the summer of 1932 the following propositions: reduction of armies by one-third, and abolition of all weapons of aggression.

These could have been fulfilled without ceremony. Peremptory demand for equal rights by the disarmed countries could be reached by stages in completion of these propositions. But the disarmament conference deviated from this straight line and believed it had to set up a world peace order in paragraphs.

World guarantees against every attack, a system of sanctions, and a League of Nations' army, as well as a European pact guaranteeing mutual assistance, were the demands that moved into the foreground.

Why Arms Parley Failed.

The disarmament conference failed because it thought it could tackle problems, which in themselves are insoluble in the present state of world development, and which, moreover, expect nations to accept unbearable limitations on their sovereignty.

This encroachment and wantonness brought about the failure of the disarmament conference. Whoever realizes this can discern distinctly the real causes of the failure of the World Economic Conference.

World publicity only illuminated the confusion surrounding currencies and the failure of efforts toward co-operation for early stabilization of exchanges, but behind the currencies stand systems of national economy with their peculiar structures and different requirements, and, above all, the sovereign problem of the relation of the State to its economy.

The tendencies which the gold countries followed with their tactics were directed chiefly against the latter point. Down deep they were political. A portentous climax developed only because the entire World Economic Conference stood on a false platform. It was presumption to think that the world was ripe for a planned economy and to try to adjust the whole conference to it.

Judicious people constantly warned against such giant plans. Catastrophe had to come because the condition of individual national economies does not bear such world regulation. The nations only now are able to commence their reconstruction in the relationship of economy to state. They are just experiencing a new solution that cannot do without special protection for it is the salvation of their peoples and their social order.

So the World Economic Conference must fail, just as the International Labor Conference at Geneva had to end unsuccessfully. Failure of the Labor Conference, which was given far too little attention, had to come because it believed it could force the endless differences in labor conditions throughout the world into a uniform mould of Geneva formulas.

This excess, this presumption which, in setting its aim goes far beyond world development, is the real reason for the failure, uselessness, and twilight of international conferences in the London and Geneva style.

The Tower of Babel.

The Sunday school has taught most of us the story of the building of the Tower of Babel, but not all seem to have read the story in Genesis. It is correct, as generally assumed, that God interrupted the building of the tower and scattered the people because he wished to punish their wantonness in building a tower "the summit of which would reach the sky."

But it is probably surprising to most people to hear that the historian who wrote the book of Genesis emphasizes that the unity of the people and their language, as well as their united will for co-operative work, displeased God so that He therefore made them a people of many tongues and scattered them.

In modern times, this means that the world nation, universal language, and the planned world economic system did not yet seem to divine providence to be a suitable order for the fulfillment of mankind's earthly problems.

Division into single nations decentralized in their development should form a transitory stage. We have emerged long ago from the isolation described in Genesis. We all feel the necessity for co-operation among nations. We grasp also the idea for a future unity of mankind in its many sidedness.

But neither for a world police, nor a world planned economy, nor a universal labor wage scale, are we today as yet ripe. London and Geneva were engaged in building a tower of Babel. Now we shall experience the twilight of international conferences.

STEADY TO FIRM CLOSE ON THE CURB MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The curb market was fairly active today, closing steady to firm after early uncertainty. Distillery issues and metals scored moderate advances, but utilities and oils were little changed.

The "wet" group welcomed a newcomer to its fold, in Schenley Distilling, which opened at 38¼ and closed at a fractional gain. Advances of around 1 to 2 points among others included Hiram Walker, Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A" and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams.

Mining issues in good demand included Lake Shore with a gain of 3 points and Pioneer Gold, Newmont and Silver King Mining up 1 to 2.

PROFIT TAKING FOLLOWS ADVANCE IN COTTON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—An opening advance in response to the acreage curtailment announcement was followed by reactions in cotton today.

There was an active demand at the opening from both trade and commission house sources, but it was supplied by realizing and a disposition to take profits on long cotton was evidently increased by the reports of showers in Texas.

December contracts after selling up to 12.00 at the start, eased off to 11.76 in the late trading and closed at that figure, with the general market closing easy at net declines of 12 to 19 points.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 165,000 bales against 82,000 last year.

Cotton futures closed easy, 12@19 lower. July 11.25n, Oct. 11.55@58, Dec. 11.76@78, Jan. 11.85@88, March 11.93@95, May 12.13@15. Spot quiet; middling 11.40. nNominal.

July opened 11.60c; Oct., 11.75c; Dec., 11.98c; Jan., 12.09c; March, 12.23c; May, 12.35c.

The opening advance met a great deal of profit taking by recent buyers who had evidently anticipated the acreage curtailment action, but it was absorbed on reactions of some 17 to 20 points and the market steadied up again on a broadening of commission house and trade demand.

December contracts, after selling up from 12 cents, or even with the previous high level at the start, reacted to 11.79, but was holding around 11.91 before session had gone far, with active months generally showing net gains of 3 to 8 points.

Liverpool cables said the market there had construed the acreage announcement as bullish, but that moderate buying had been supplied by profit taking. Houses with Liverpool and continental connections were reported sellers here at the opening.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Sharp advances in copper have been followed by a quiet market with offerings from second hands at slight concessions reported. Increased American consumption and a belief that the industrial control act would act in favor of prices have been sustaining features, however, and first hand prices have been generally maintained at the 9-cent level, Connecticut Valley points. Toward the end of the week some improvement was reported in the domestic demand and there were also reports of a fair demand in the European markets.

Tin lost part of the advance in the previous week owing to the continued resistance of buyers. Few consumers' orders have been placed during the past two weeks and prices have worked off about 1½ cents per pound since the close of a week ago.

Zinc showed continued firmness. Offerings continued light with reports that metal for shipment from the West was comparatively difficult to obtain, owing to the continued strength in the ore situation.

Lead prices advanced to the highest level in over two years. Demand was not particularly active, although there was a fair inquiry and as it was confined principally to August delivery the belief prevailed that invisible supplies were none too plentiful.

Antimony was firm and higher, owing to continued reluctance on the part of sellers.

Further advances were recorded in steel production during the past week, the ingot output having risen from 56 to about 59 per cent of capacity, with a continued good inquiry reported from leading users. Pig iron was firmer and $1 a ton higher in nearly all districts.

LEAD, ZINC AND COPPER

NEW YORK, July 15.—Metals nominally unchanged.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The St. Joseph Lead Co. reports that 50 tons of pig lead was sold from Southeast Missouri mines yesterday at $4.50 per 100 pounds New York.

Dry Goods Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—While all prices in the textile field tend sharply upward in view of the early acceptance of codes for operating under the recovery act most merchants were withholding offerings today through inability to secure costs from mills and fix prices on that basis. Further advances occurred in cotton goods, denims being particularly strong. A code has been filed for wool manufacturers and trading is held up until some action is taken on it. Cotton goods market are in state of confusion arising from the imposition of a floor and processing tax in addition to providing for the operation of mills on shorter hours and higher wages. Carpet wools for immediate shipment are very firm and are quoted above future prices.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Commodities, led by a sensational performance of wheat, stole the show from the financial markets during the week.

Stocks simmered and boiled, soared and subsided, as profit taking speculators cashed in large winnings. Bonds edged up steadily, but unspectacularly, to new high levels for the past year or more. But grains ran away from everything as crop deterioration reports, acreage reduction plans and renewed hopes of an international export agreement brought in buying.

Wheat, corn and rye got up to the highest levels in the past two years or more. Wheat, in its week-end spurt, reached $1.23¼ a bushel. Future contracts of this staple on the week, showed net gains of as much as 13⅝ cents a bushel. Rye jumped 19⅞ to 20½ cents a bushel while corn added 5 to 5⅝ cents a bushel to its substantial gains of the previous week. Cotton, although a trifle nervous at times, recorded advances of $5.75 to $6 a bale. Bar silver had its best week in the past two years with a gain of 2⅝ cents an ounce, and was above 40 cents an ounce at one time. Copper held steady at around 9 cents a pound.

Stocks, although turning over in huge volumes throughout the week, exhibited fits of temperament which, at times, ignored the bouyant commodities, business and industry reports and the erratic gyrations of the dollar in foreign exchange markets. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 90 selected issues finished the week with a loss of ½ point at 94.6. Sales during the week totaled 30,976,360 against 29,058,640 in the previous period.

Biggest Day in Two Years.

Although the share market had its biggest day in more than two years on Thursday, when sales approximated 7,500,000 shares, the average was able only to advance a little more than a point. The week's declining days were Monday, Tuesday and Friday.

Specialty stocks held the limelight throughout, with the alcohols and their associates climbing 12 and 15 points on their best days. Gold mining issues, some of the rubbers and packing stocks were given a run as special influences brought followings to these groups. The so-called pivotal shares, however, did comparatively little. Leading rails and utilities were content, generally, to follow a narrow range, although there were exceptions in these divisions.

Proponents of the advance were highly cheered by estimates that steel production during the week was at nearly 60 per cent of capacity, while freight car loadings, electric power output and bank clearings were considerably ahead of their showings a year ago.

The dollar had its weak moments during the busy six days, but steadied as the week ended and, in terms of the French gold franc, was valued at just under 70 cents.

Balance of Net Gains.

Stocks had little trouble weathering week-end profit-taking and came through the Saturday market with a balance of net gains.

Sensational strength in wheat and lively gyrations by current favorites of the share traders kept the rank and file of stocks from getting very far out of line, even during early irregularity; prices firmed all around in the late trading. Volume came to 2,242,460 shares.

Mining stocks, sugars, packing issues, alcohols and the usual assortment of specialties did most of the advancing. Rails acted sluggishly, nor did utilities or steels develop noticeable strength. Motors picked up fractions here and there.

Gold equities found particular favor. Alaska Juneau, Dome, McIntyre and U. S. Smelting were up 2 to 5, while Homestake gained nearly 18. Cerro De Pasco jumped 3. South Puerto Rican Sugar, Central Aguirre, and Great Western Improved 4. National Distillers, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Simmons, United Aircraft, Commercial Solvents and Industrial Rayon were up 3 to 4. Gains were limited to fractions for American Telephone, Western Union, Case, Harvester, Kennecott, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, National Biscuit and Westinghouse, but Union Carbide, Allied Chemical and Auburn firmed more than a point.

Steel Code Filed.

Filing of the steel "code" at Washington was closely followed by announcement of the first wage increases provided thereunder. This affects not only an important branch of industry, but also a leading section of national purchasing power, one which had taken two cuts during the depression, a first of 10 per cent in September, 1931, and a second of 15 per cent in May, 1932.

Rubber consumption, like cotton, reached a record high last month. Whether purchasing has been a bit too fast will become known later.

Freight loadings on the nation's railroads last week showed the expected decrease, due to incidence of Independence Day in the preceding period. The drop amounted to 94,851 cars, but total traffic was 123,295, or 29.6 per cent above a year ago.

Foreign currency fluctuations were narrow by weekend holidays abroad, and changes were unimportant.

Stock Loaning Premium.

The following stock was loaning at premium at the close Saturday: Colorado Fuel, $1 per 100 shares.

Ten Most Active Stocks.

Closing price and net change of the 10 most active stocks: Commercial Solvents, 44⅞, up 4¼; United Aircraft, 44¼, up 4; Great Western Sugar, 40½, up 4⅛; Alaska Juneau, 25, up 3⅛; Armour Illinois "A," 7, down ¼; Aviation Corporaton, 15⅞, up 1; Armour Illinois "B," 4½, unchanged; Packard, 6¾, unchanged; International Telephone and Telegraph, 20⅝, down ⅜, and Radio, 10¾, down ¼.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

SPECIAL ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Total sales on the New York Stock Exchange today amounted to 2,242,460 shares, compared with 5,244,440 yesterday; 3,007,560 a week ago, and 350,170 a year ago. NEARLY 6-CENT ADVANCE IN WHEAT AT CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Rising faster than a cent a bushel a minute, wheat soared a maximum of 5⅞ cents today, and closed wildly. The finish was within a cent of the day's top, $1.23¼, just 1¾ under the dollar and a quarter mark at which many speculators had aimed as their immediate objective.

The day's high was best price since 1930.

It has been 3½ years since wheat sold as high as today. Five years ago, before the depression started, it was only a dime a bushel higher than today's top.

Adding the processing tax of 30 cents a bushel that millers must pay, the total cost to flour makers reached $1.53 a bushel.

Rye, corn, oats and barley all reflected the wild advance in wheat. On a few transactions, rye was up 4¾ cents. Rye, corn and barley as well as wheat outdid previous high price records for the season.

Provisions shared with grains the effect of widespread speculative buying.

Wheat jumped more than 2 cents a bushel today the moment trading began.

Closing quotations on wheat were 4⅞@5⅛c above yesterday's finish, with corn ⅝@1⅜c up, oats showing ¼@¾c advance and provisions at a rise of 2 to 15 cents.

Unfavorable Canadian wheat crop comment was chiefly responsible. There was estimate that Canada's 1933 yield of wheat would be only 289,000,000 bushels, compared with recent official forecasts of 340,000,000 bushels. Opening ⅜@2⅛ cents higher, wheat afterward held within the initial range. Corn started at ⅜c off to ⅜c up, and subsequently altered little.

Whizzing rapidly upward to $1.21, wheat responded to excited buying and then in quick succession touched $1.22 and $1.23. At this stage the market was up in some cases about 6 cents a bushel.

The swift vertical rise of wheat prices culminated at $1.23¼, a gain of more than 9 cents a bushel in 24 hours. At $1.23¼ for May, selling for profits broadened out, and the market tumbled temporarily about 3 cents.

Among the factors hoisting wheat values was an official report from Canada admitting that the present wheat crop prospects were smaller than a few days ago. The leading unofficial Canadian crop authority was quoted as saying the prairie provinces must have rain quickly.

Rye, corn, oats and barley all reflected the wild advance of wheat. The corn market and barley both outdid the season's previous high peak.

Before the whirlwind advance of the wheat market slackened, multitudes of buying orders swept constantly into the speculative pits, which was crowded to overflowing with brokers. Offerings of wheat were relatively scarce until wholesale profit taking set in.

Almost the sole influence apparent for the sensational advance of prices and for a seldom equaled attendant volume of dealings was a trade forecast that Canada's wheat production this season would be approximately 30 per cent less than last year. At the day's peak, wheat was at the highest point since February, 1930.

BOND MARKET IS FIRM, MODERATELY ACTIVE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Moderate activity and a firm tone characterized the week-end bond market, with the foreign issues, on the whole, having the edge on the domestic department.

Total sales amounted to $8,104,000, as compared with last Saturday's volume of $10,753,000. The familiar pattern of new highs, made each day recently by the average for 60 corporate issues, remained unbroken today as another 1933 record was reached at 82.5, up one-tenth of a point.

In the foreign list, South American loans were in fairly uniform demand although Denmark, Canadian and German bonds also worked higher. Gains ranged from about 1 to as high as 7 points.

Outstanding performers in this category included the Argentine 5½s, Antioquia 7s, Colombia 6s, Bavaria 6½s, Berlin 6½s, Chile Republic 7s, Dominion of Canada 5½s, and New South Wales and French City liens. French Republic 7s, however, sagged moderately.

While railway and industrial issues made the best showing in the domestic field, a few of the public utilities had a satisfactory day of it. Rail liens, which advanced from a point to more than 5, included representative issues of the Santa Fe, Burlington, Central of Georgia, Chicago & Northwestern, Delaware & Hudson, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis and Nickel Plate.

Detroit Edison, American Water Works, and Montana Power bonds were most active among the public utilities, while among the industrials Colorado Fuel & Iron, Goodrich, Armour, were popular.

United States Government securities were for most part irregularly higher.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 16, 1933.

An Opera New to St. Louis

Municipal Organization to Present "The Nightingale," a Romance of the Life of Jenny Lind on Forest Park Stage Tomorrow Night—Marion Claire to Have Role of the Great Singer and Robert E. Lee and P. T. Barnum Will Be Pictured in the Cast.

MUNICIPAL OPERA adds a work new to its repertory tomorrow night when, with Marion Claire in the role of the great Swedish prima donna, Jenny Lind, it presents for the first time in St. Louis Armand Vecsey's musical romance, "The Nightingale."

Miss Claire heads a cast that presents the full vocal strength of Municipal Opera this season, and which includes Allan Jones, Leonard Ceeley, Nancy McCord, Joseph Macauley, Clifford Newdahl, Hannah Toback and John Barclay. George Hassell, Doris Patston, Charles Lawrence, Larry Rich, Hope Emerson and Nick Long Jr. also appear in "The Nightingale" to contribute the fun which accompanies the dramatic story of a singer's love.

Armand Vecsey, the composer, is a member of a distinguished Hungarian musical family, his cousin Ferenc Vecsey having appeared here in violin recital. He went to New York unknown and won fame for himself with the score of "The Nightingale," which was presented by the Shuberts at the Jolson Theater Jan. 3, 1927. The book and lyrics are by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, who have contributed to the success of many of the musical comedies of recent years.

The story, as told upon the stage, is pure fiction, yet it authentically presents the dramatic clash between the temperaments of the great Swedish singer, who was of a natural retiring disposition, and her equally famous manager, P. T. Barnum, who was never at a loss for publicity stunts to attract great crowds to her concerts.

It also presents a picture of "the little old New York" of the 1850's and many famous figures of that time, who later became of national importance, and who appear in the course of the romance unfolded on the stage to an accompaniment of Vecsey's tunes. Among these are the then Colonel but later General Robert E. Lee; James McNeil Whistler, whose famous portrait of his mother was recently exhibited at the City Art Museum, and whose grandfather, Major Whistler, one of the first commandants of old Fort Bellefountaine, lies interred in the Military Cemetery at Jefferson Barracks; and Cornelius Vanderbilt.

IN the story told upon the stage Jenny Lind (Marion Claire) has been traveling by boat from Washington to New York, and has met and lost her heart to Captain Rex Gurnee (Allan Jones) of the United States Army, a young hero, who has just returned from a successful campaign against the Indians in the West. The great prima donna has been traveling under an assumed name to escape the crowds, which Barnum has brought swarming around her by his publicity schemes. Captain Rex has not admitted it to the lady but he, too, has lost his heart. He stops in New York to seek out his inamorata and tell her of his love. Meantime the Swedish Nightingale has gone on to West Point, still incognito, accompanied by her companion, Josephine (Dorris Patston), hoping to see her hero welcomed by his old comrades and by his family there.

Barnum (George Hassell) sends Karp (Larry Rich), the general factotum of his museum, in search of the missing prima donna. At West Point, Captain Rex is welcomed by his mother (Elizabeth Crandall) and General Gurnee (John Barclay), his grandfather, together with Colonel Wainwright (Henry Rabke), commandant of the Military Academy, and also by Alice Wainwright (Nancy McCord), the Colonel's daughter, whom their families expect Rex to marry.

The identity of Jenny Lind is discovered and she and the young captain pledge their faith. Barnum arrives and wants to turn their engagement into a sensational story for publicity purposes. He is only prevented by the diva's threat to cancel her contract with him. She promises to return and resume her concert series in New York and she and Rex again pledge their troth.

The scene changes to New York, where the singer is besieged by admirers. Among these are Signor Belletti (Joseph Macaulay), the Italian baritone, who accompanied her on her concert tour and who, incidentally, sang with her in St. Louis; Otto Goldschmidt (Clifford Newdahl), her accompanist, whom later she married; and Stephen Rutherford (Leonard Ceeley), who has been a friend for years of Captain Gurnee. His friend, Rutherford, however, is false and seeks to break up the affair between the diva and the soldier, hoping to make Jenny Lind his mistress.

CAPTAIN REX, disgusted with the Indian campaigns, has accepted an offer of Cornelius Vanderbilt's to become chief engineer for a railroad the financier is building. Rutherford uses his influence and prevents Gurnee from getting the post, believing Jenny Lind will refuse to marry a penniless young man. The prima donna plays into his hands when she learns the news and fears that Vanderbilt has discharged Captain Rex because of his infatuation for her. She is convinced she is preventing him from carving his own career. Rutherford manipulates things so as to place her in a false position in Gurnee's eyes, a plan which she enters into, because of her ambition for his success, with the idea of forcing the young soldier to give her up.

In the final scene of the operetta Jenny Lind is again triumphant as a concert artist and Captain Gurnee comes as an old friend to congratulate her and to present to her Alice Wainwright, his bride-to-be.

Marion Claire, who plays the role of Jenny Lind, like the famous "Swedish Nighingale," won her first singing laurels in Europe, succeeding them with success here. Unlike her Swedish prototype, however, her successes in operetta and light opera have followed her grand opera career, whereas Jenny Lind first won fame in her native land on the lighter lyric stage.

Although virtually every comedian on the roster of Municipal Opera's artists this season is scheduled for a role in "The Nightingale," special interest centers upon the appearance of Larry Rich, who has had an extended career on the musical stage, in Mack Sennett movie comedies, and in vaudeville, and who makes his debut in Forest Park in the role of Karp, the handy man of Barnum's Museum. Rich, whose real name is Richardson, about 10 years ago was manager of two motion picture theaters in East St. Louis.

Immediately following "The Nightingale" Ilse Marvenga, who won much success as Kathie, the role in "The Student Prince" in which she appears for the last performance tonight, will be presented in the title role of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," a part in which she has had such brilliant success in New York, rivaling her triumphs in "The Student Prince."

"Naughty Marietta" will be the eighth of the summer shows with the end of the season well in sight. The four bills to follow will be "My Maryland"; the first presentation on any stage of "Beau Brummell"; "The Cat and the Fiddle," and "Where the Lark Sings". This, the final opera of the season will also be new to the world of the theater.

Southern Melodies For the Highlands

Harry Lange's Musical Merrymakers have arranged "A Southern Serenade," a hodge-podge of melodies and songs of the southland and Negro comedy, as the feature of the free entertainment bill at Forest Park Highlands, this week. A comic highlight is announced as a wedding of "Aunt Jemimah" and "Old Black Joe," with Leslie "Tiny" Durst essaying the role of the bride and diminutive Phil Godwin that of the groom. Al Swenson will act as the parson. This week's song and dance part of the program will be supplied by the Jeanette Lipp dancers with Doris and Bill Layman, daughter and father, featured in an adagio number.

Corinne Griffith to Have Fling at Stage

Corinne Griffith, movie star of the silent days, has arrived in New York to go into a revival of the old A. E. Thomas play, "Home, James." She will give it a preliminary performance at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., July 24, and plans to take it to Broadway later.

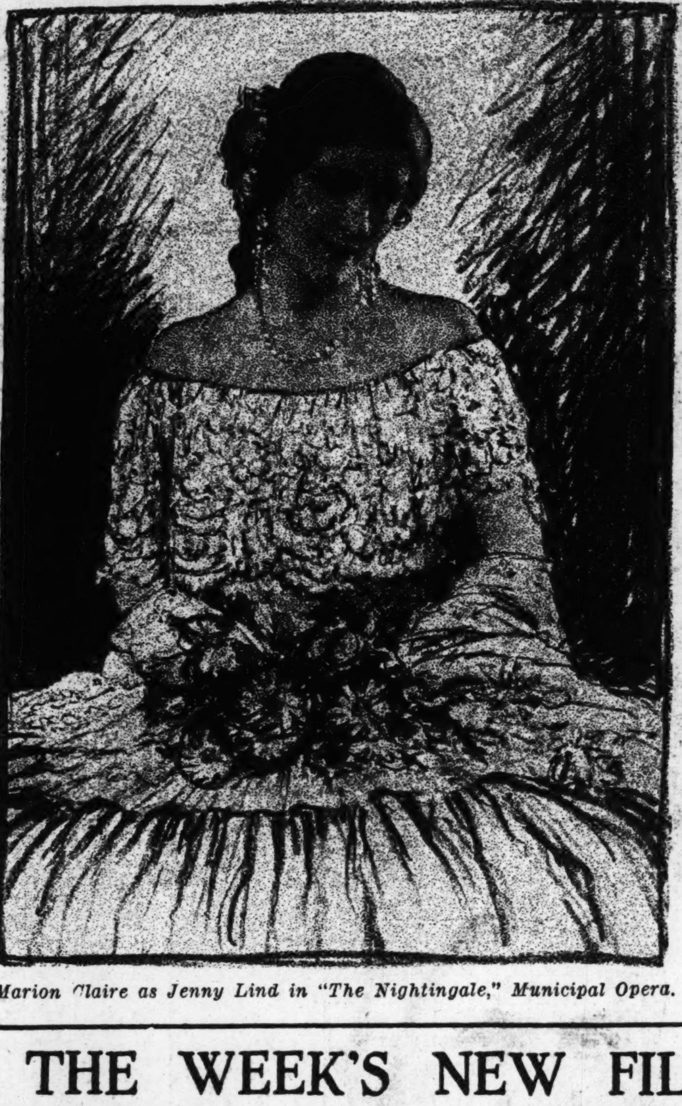
"Home, James," was written originally for Ina Claire and Robert Ames. Miss Claire has just sailed for Europe after finishing a successful season in the Theater Guild comedy, "Biography." She returns in September to take the same play on tour.

Sic Transit Gloria.

Two actresses, whose fan mail once equalled that of Marlene Dietrich and Greta Garbo, peer out from a crowd of 100 of the better dressed extras working in Paramount's "Midnight Club." They are Mary McLaren and Elinor Faire, once featured in bright lights on the theater marquee.

Ruggles Busiest Actor.

Charlie Ruggles, now in "Mama Loves Papa," is so much in demand among all the Hollywood studios that he has had but one long vacation—four weeks— in five years.



Marion Claire as Jenny Lind in "The Nightingale," Municipal Opera.

Ethel Barrymore in Movie Stage Shows

ETHEL BARRYMORE will appear in person at Loew's Capitol, a New York movie house, for a week beginning July 21. The actress will be seen in Sir James Barrie's playlet, "The Twelve Pound Look." She will be paid $2500 for the week after first demanding $3500.

This engagement represents the first time that Miss Barrymore will play more than two shows a day. She appeared in vaudeville in the old Keith days when there was nothing but two-a-day.

Show Business Shows A Great Falling Off

St. Louis theater goers who wondered why they saw so few plays here last winter may be interested in knowing that during the past season, from last September to April, there were 220 shows which started for Broadway. Of these, 130 actually reached a showing on the Rialto, while the other 90 died either in rehearsal or during their try-out tour.

During the more affluent days from 1925 to 1929 an average of 500 shows were announced each season, with something like 220 to 260 surviving as far as a Broadway first night. It can be seen that the mortality rate in show business is considerably high. Also, that show business is 50 per cent less than it was five years ago.

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS

By Nie

"STORM at Daybreak," at Loew's, is one of those pictures which is either a great film or just so-so entertainment according to how it happens to strike your fancy. Magnificently played by Walter Huston, Nils Asther and Kay Francis in a stunning old world, edge-of-the-war setting, the story is the familiar domestic triangle affair except that the three-cornered figure is pretty much on the square if you get what we mean. Walter is an oldish mayor of a Hungarian border town and Kay is his beautiful and youngish wife. They might have gotten along together if a crazy Serbian hadn't killed the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria almost at their doorstep. You may recall that this brought on considerable of a war. It also brought Lieutenant Nils Asther into their home. Nils, an Hungarian, and Kay, a Serb, start off by being bitter enemies but within a few reels, are wound up in a series of non-enemy clinches. For the sake of honest old Walter, the wife and her boy friend decide they had better part, but never quite get around to it and things run along like that for four years or so. About the time the war is over Mayor Huston discovers that he has been harboring a couple of vipers in his home. His first impulse is to get revenge but, on second thought, he kills himself and the only other man who knew about the affair and the picture ends with Kay and Nils holding hands at his grave. Maybe they are still there, for the film doesn't carry on after that, but it is more likely that they got married and lived happily forever after. Most girls could be contented with Nils.

BARBARA STANWYCK goes in for vamping on a big scale in "Baby Face" at the Ambassador. Brought up as a downtrodden but beautiful slavey in her father's tough, and rough, speakeasy in Pittsburgh, she decides that men owe her a living and she starts out to collect. Arriving, via freight, in New York, she begins on the ground floor of a 286-story building and works her way up to the president's repent house on the roof. She couldn't get much higher than that, could she, and the only place left to go is down again. Her climb has been marked by a succession of murders and suicides among the lesser officials who battled to supply her with diamond neglectlesses and other trinkets, but President George Brent gives her a cool half-million in first class bonds and she is sitting pretty until the bank busts. Then she discovers that she is in love with George and she turns all her assets over to save the depositors. Bank presidents not being in demand at the moment she and ex-President Brent go back to Pittsburgh and start life all over again, for it seems his financial training had fitted him to become a steel puddler at one buck a day. "Baby Face" is probably Miss Stanwyck's best picture from the fan's standpoint.

YOU must have heard most of the stories of And-The-Irishman-Said-To-The-Jew type but Charlie Murray and George Sydney tell another one of 'em in "The Cohens and Kellys in Trouble" at the Fox. It runs right along according to schedule except that Miss Kelly, nee Maureen O'Sullivan, doesn't fall in love with one of the younger Cohen boys, probably because there aren't any in the picture. Another distinct novelty is the fact that Mr. Cohen and Mr. Kelly are good friends throughout the film and have no wives, either. The picture is as funny as any of its kind and on the Fox stage the all-colored revue, "Shuffle Along" is good jazz entertainment.

A Murder a Minute.

IT is never very clear in "Terror Abroad," at the Grand Central why John Halliday, a millionaire yachtsman, wants to kill off, one at a time, the guests on board his sailing palace. Perhaps yachting gentlemen are like that. But he does and then, after some roundabout single murders he goes after his crew, wholesale. In the end only Neil Hamilton and Shirley Grey, the love interests, and Charlie Ruggles, the comedian are left. Even skipper Halliday is taken to a world free from excitement by a handy man-eating shark. "Emergency Call," the Grand Central's other feature, is full of thrills, too, being all about grafting in a big city hospital with operating rooms and other pleasant scenes constantly on tap.

Twelve Miles Out.

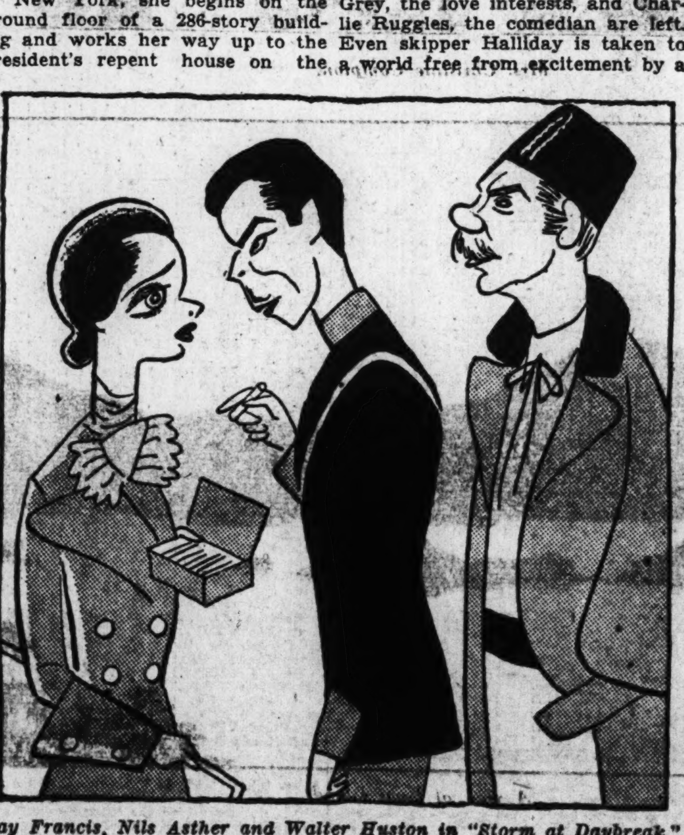
LIFE on the ocean wave continues in "Gambling Ship" at the Missouri, but this is a good and consistent thriller of gangsters' fights on board a floating casino in the Pacific with underworld and underwater bouts well mixed up with a love affair between our old friend Cary Grant and Benita Hume. "Don't Bet on Love" which is also at the Missouri, is a nice little romance between Lew Ayres, a passionate plumber who flew high for a while, and Ginger Rogers.

Cast of "Alice" Nears Completion.

With the exception of the unknown Alice for whom a nation-wide search is being made, the cast for "Alice in Wonderland" has been completed with the selection of Charles Laughton, Jack Oakie, Alison Skipworth, Mary Boland, W. C. Fields and Charlie Ruggles for the leading roles. Norman McLeod, who was to have directed Fields and Mary Boland in "Tillie and Gus," has been relieved of that assignment so that he can prepare to handle "Alice in Wonderland."

Maureen O'Sullivan in "Cohens and Kellys in Trouble," Fox.

Wynne Gibson in "Emergency Call" at the Grand Central.



Kay Francis, Nils Asther and Walter Huston in "Storm at Daybreak," at Loew's State Theater.

Barbara Stanwyck in "Baby Face," at the Ambassador Theater.

Cary Grant in "Gambling Ship," at the Missouri Theater.

Playing Hooky Led to Fame

If Wynne Gibson Hadn't Cut Classes at High School To Go to the Theater She Probably Never Would Have Landed in the Chorus Which Paved the Way for a Chance in the Movies and a Climb to Near Stardom.

By H. H. NIEMEYER

WYNNE GIBSON, playing the lead in "Emergency Call" at the Grand Central this week, isn't exactly new to the screen, by any means. She has been making pictures, off and on, for about five years and has seemed headed for stardom several times only to be sidetracked for some reason or another. Now, once more, the little blonde player is on the up-grade.

Wynne started life in a rather nonchalant manner and has kept in that track pretty much ever since. She was born in an uptown New York apartment to a twenty-year-old father and a nineteen-year-old mother.

Because Winifred was the name of Mrs. Gibson's school-chum there were no prenatal discussions of names to mar the family harmony. If the child was a girl she would be Winifred, and Winifred she was until the neighborhood children reduced it to Wynne.

Frank Gibson became Wynne's father when he should have been receiving his diploma from the City College of New York, but then you know how it is with youth and love. He was Elaine Maccabe's best beau when the pair were barely 12 years old, and one day when they had reached the respective antiquity of 19 and 18, they played hooky from school and paid a legal visit to the city hall.

From the age of 3 to 6, Wynne was the usual spoiled, only child of young, doting parents. She discovered that kicking and screaming was an effielent method of getting her own way. Parental training had nothing to do with Wynne's sudden metamorphosis to a docile, well behaved young lady, but a scratching, biting, kicking engagement with several of the neighborhood's toughest boys, taught her the existence of other people's rights.

WYNNE grew up very suddenly after her sixteenth birthday. About three weeks before graduation exercises at the Wadleigh High School, she was expelled with a friend for cutting afternoon classes upon two occasions to take in matinees in town.

What seemed to be the injustice of this adult decision bridged the space from girl to woman for Wynne. She revealed her decision to go to work, and that was that.

A friend of the family in the insurance business gave her a position in his office. Thus for six months Wynne had few thought outside the complicated claim-file over which she had charge.

And then the sister of her co-expelled school friend became a chorus girl, and that insignificant detail caused the destiny of Wynne Gibson to go into sudden handsprings.

The old fairy tale of visiting the back-stage door to meet a friend and being seen there by an influential personage, worked once again in Wynne's case. This time it was a stage manager who suggested that she find theatrical work because her size, personality and bouyant good looks presaged success in that line. He suggested that she try out for the chorus of "Tangerine."

In the spirit of try-anything-once, Wynne applied for the job and got it. Then she went home to face her family.

"I'VE got a job in the chorus of 'Tangerine,'" she told her father and mother at dinner that night. "If you won't interfere by telling them my age and getting me fired, I promise to fire myself at the end of six months if I haven't risen above the chorus. I like the stage and if I can make more money and win more success there, why should I stay behind the files of any office for the next dozen years or so?"

The argument won the day for Wynne, but her father held her to her six months' promise. The Gibson luck held, and three days before the half-year date fell due she received an offer as specialty dancer in another musical show, whisking her out of the chorus in the nick of time.

Six months later she was playing a lead in a revue with Lew Fields that "wowed 'em." On matinee days she did 13 changes twice daily and played in every corner of the house from the stage to the balcony. What a life! But Wynne loved it.

After a year with Fields she went touring with "The Gingham Girl," and then back to Broadway as the lead in "Little Jessie James." The next part was a sob sister lead in "When You Smile," and right then and there the Gibson luck laid down and died. A string of a dozen or more shelved shows dogged her steps but they did not trip her.

She journeyed to San Francisco and Los Angeles for "Castles in the Air," but didn't attract the attention of the film magnates. That happened later in 1929 when, after a part in the stage hit "Jarnegan," she made her film debut in "Nothing But the Truth" at Paramount's New York studios. For a week during this time, she worked in the film during the day and then took a train to Philadelphia every evening to appear in "Jarnegan."

SEVERAL screen contract offers were made after her initial film flickered upon a few screens. She decided that she needed a vacation, anyway, and it might as well be spent in Hollywood, where things could happen as they may or may not.

Things did happen. She played in "Children of Pleasure" and "The Fall Guy." Then she returned to the stage for three months in the title role in "Molly Magdalene." Her next was a gunman's "moll" in "The Gang Buster" picture with Jack Oakie. Her work in this film produced a Paramount contract.

Not until then did Wynne decide to dig-in and settle down permanently in Hollywood. But she did not settle in the traditional film manner. She never attends a premiere, a Mayfair Club dance or the big nights at the famous hotel supper rooms. She has a large group of friends, all of them non-professionals.

Providing that rain is not driving in torrents, she can be found on the golf links every day. A light rain never deters her and she plays a good, consistent game with the best of 'em.

During the summer she lives in a cottage 15 miles north of Malibu beach, where she indulges in such breath-taking things as sun baths, backgammon and walks along the sandy beach.

She lives alone, and her heart and mind are free. She loves coffee. Drinks quarts a day and knows she shouldn't.

She eats everything, and never gives scales a second thought. Her weight has remained at 103 pounds for the past 10 years and there is no tonnage clause in her contract for she is one of those girls who, had she stuck to the chorus, could have been a "pony" for the rest of her life. But Wynne didn't stay in the "line". She darted onward and upward and now look at her.

The [illegible] at Island [illegible] Compton [illegible]ilt.

A Woman Robinson Crusoe

Why Mrs. Christine Compton, Formerly of St. Louis, Went Into Exile on a Deserted Island in the West Indies and Plans to Spend the Remainder of Her Life There.

Mrs. Christine Compton.

By JACK ALEXANDER

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

TO anyone with a less dramatic conception of life, a fainter acquiescence in the whims of the inscrutable forces that boot certain human beings all over the globe, the two-year exile which Mrs. Christine Compton has just served on lonely Goat Island in the West Indies—and which arthritis will extend to a life sentence—might come as a blow a bit beyond that which a person should be called upon to accept. To this woman, who has a heart that Homer might have delighted in, it is adventure and as charming an existence as any she has ever visioned in a lifetime of world travel and social contacts.

Only with the coming of summer, the very hot summer which most Americans detest, can she leave her tiny island of volcanic rock and coral and dare the Northern latitudes. Even then the sudden cool spells in the evening send the pains shooting through her joints and she wishes she had stayed at "home," with the brilliant-hued birds, the ugly iguanas and the few other forms of life the barren island supports.

It was the verdict of doctors that she must stay in the tropics, if she wished to live. A native of St. Louis, she had raised three sons, become a character actress after she had passed 40 to fulfill an old ambition, and then, when "11 years a grandmother" had been condemned to medical exile. By an odd coincidence, the place she chose for her St. Helena was just one mile from, and within plain sight of, the island of Tobago, which some people think was the place Daniel Defoe had in mind when he described the island on which his hero, Robinson Crusoe, was shipwrecked.

Tobago is a "ward" of Trinidad and about 25 miles the longest way. Goat Island is a 13-acre monstrosity shoved out into the daylight by an undersea volcano centuries ago. At one time it was inhabited by a race of unusually sturdy goats, which have long since passed out of the picture, probably from lack of food. It is a harsh, rough, craggy place battered on all sides by a merciless surf. There isn't a spot on it where the soil, where there is any soil, is 12 inches deep, and where this came from no one knows. A nearly constant hot wind bends the few trees at almost snapping angles and the woman Crusoe, who is the lone inhabitant, never knows when a huge wave is going to rumble in and break over the whole island, causing numberless crannies and basins in the coral and black rock to hiss with angry foam, and everything in the frame hut to drip salt water. The woman of the island is always soaking wet. It is a tempestuous life and Selkirk, who had it easier on Tobago, and a native manservant to help him lord over the fowl and brute, didn't like it a bit if the poem is correct which says: "Better slave in the midst of alarms than reign in this terrible place."

CHRISTINE COMPTON, who draws upon a distinguished ancestry for her strength of will and courage, is enthralled by the daily struggle. And besides it lets her forget her aching bones. She reads novels, types her "reflections" several hours a day, she does her primitive household chores and sits on a rock and absorbs the rhythm of the surf as it batters her tight little island at high tide and drenches her with its salt spray.

Sometimes the rhythmic susurrance of the surf induces a semi-trance in which the woman feels caught in an hypnotic cadence which is hard to shake. When she feels this coming on, she jumps up and runs into her cabin and digs down deep into a waterproof trunk. She pulls out a pretty frock, some fresh lingerie and garters (she says she always has a hard time remembering the garters) and dresses up. If a boat is passing, en route to Trinidad, she signals it and spends an evening at the Hotel de Paris, in Port of Spain. The hotel is a quaint place, she says, peopled by a charmingly odd collection of characters who don't seem to care what happens, if, indeed, anything. After a few hours conversation and a round of rum punches, she is ready once more for Goat Island, where a boat from Trinidad stops every two weeks with a load of "perfectly awful food" and the mistress of the establishment finds it expedient to wear only a rough dress, always soaked and salt-incrusted, and a pair of barefoot sandals, to protect her feet from the sharp rocks and jagged pieces of coral.

At present Mrs. Compton is in New York visiting one of her sons and preparing her experiences in book form. She is a woman of medium size, bright-eyed, rather striking to converse with and generally attractive. She must be at least in the late fifties. Her hair is white. She wears the clothes of civilization with grace and talks with animation and intelligence. She likes the speakeasies into which her son steers her and the excellent New York restaurants even more.

Mrs. Compton was married to George B. Compton of St. Louis from whom she is now divorced. She has three sons—Tarleton, the youngest, who is 28 and lives in St. Louis where he is connected with Standard Oil; Eno, who lives in Virginia, and Bates, a New York advertising man. Her father was Edward B. Eno of St. Louis, who was a Major in the Civil War. His family, of Dutch and French (the name comes from H'Eneaux), has long been located in Kinder Hook, N. Y.

Her mother was Mathilda Bates, of a distinguished St. Louis family. Mrs. Compton's uncle, General John Coulter Bates, was Grant's chief of staff toward the close of the Civil War. Her grandfather, Judge Edward Bates, was Attorney-General in President Lincoln's cabinet. His statue stands now in Forest Park. Her great uncle was Frederick Bates, Governor of Missouri Territory. She has two married sisters living in New Mexico—Mrs. Ralph Todd Kellogg and Mrs. Wagner MacVeagh Wilson—and her brother, Capt. Bates Eno, is dead.

Her early married life Mrs. Compton divided between St. Louis and New York City, but when her sons had reached manhood, she struck out for a stage career and, without a day's training, soon found herself playing character parts in New York. Later she went into the movies and had the same moderate success. It was while pursuing this line of activity four years ago that arthritis struck her. Doctors said her only hope was to find a good hot climate and stay there. They recommended the West Indies. She tried Trinidad and found its 20-degree temperature drops at night painful to her bones.

She tried Africa, sailing twice around the continent without finding a suitable place to settle. Discouraged, she boarded a liner for the States. It happened to be a British boat and she found in a book rack a travel folder telling of the equable climate of Tobago. None of the ship's officers, who considered her rather a bother with her nervous, American way, could add to her knowledge of Tobago and were rather relieved when she got off and boarded a vessel bound for the West Indies. The second boat landed her in Scarborough, the capital of Tobago, a sleepy town, with no bank or hotel, governed, when governing was necessary, by a British officer appointed by the Governor of Trinidad.

"I was immediately taken with the beauty of Tobago," Mrs. Compton said. "It was a gorgeously primitive place and the most beautiful spot I had ever seen, and I'd been all over the world. What was more important, the climate measured up to the claims of the folder. It was good and hot and steamy all the time and it was almost a pleasure to have arthritis in such a place. I got hold of a native guide and we made our way through unbelievably winding trails to the other tip of Tobago, 25 miles away, through lovely jungle and cocoa and sugar plantations whose owners were terribly land poor.

"Here I met a Mr. Tucker, a planter who was glad in his British way to see someone come along to break the monotony. Mr. Tucker owned an island a mile off Tobago called Goat Island, which he thought worthless since it wouldn't support a tomato plant, and made a little money during the depression by carrying passengers out past Goat Island to Little Tobago, or Bird of Paradise Island.

"Little Tobago was stocked with birds of paradise some years ago by Sir William Ingraham who willed the place to Tobago when he died, with the proviso that the birds be taken care of. Today many people visit it. Negro boys supply fresh water and mangoes for the birds and beat paths for the tourists through the vegetation. It must be a nice place, but I have never been there.

"I had spotted Goat Island and I said to Mr. Tucker, " 'Mr. Tucker, I want to go to Goat Island.' "

" 'What for,' he asked.

" 'I want to live there.' "

" 'Nonsense, no one has ever lived there but goats and that was centuries ago. I haven't set foot on it for 30 years myself.' "

" 'Mr. Tucker,' I said, 'I want to live on Goat Island,' and the upshot of it was that I went to live on Goat Island, Mr. Tucker being much mystified.

"THE hardest thing at first was finding a place where a home could be built, but I at last located a small volcanic basin and had one end of my 'pill box' dropped in there, hooked inside the rim, and the other supported on concrete piles made by native builders. The Negroes had to float the cedar planks from Tobago by tying them into rafts and towing them with an outboard motorboat of Mr. Tucker's. Even with this semi-smart engineering the cabin is usually flooded at high tide and during the night the waves frequently beat so high that they come under the space I purposely left open at the eaves and splash all over the place. But it's a fairly modern home. I have a living room furnished with stuff I brought from my old farm house on the Hudson river—a bed, chest of drawers and a dressing table. Then I have a kitchen with a little outside balcony and I managed to get in a shower bath, too.

"The native workmen were not very bright and were amazed at my solution of the problems involved in the shower. You know, there isn't a drop of fresh water on the island, but you can catch plenty of rain water. Well, my rain-catcher had been put just high enough to force water three feet above the level of the living room floor. This meant that I would have to crawl under my shower. After much thought, I hit upon the idea of sinking the floor of the bath three feet below the floor level. It's handy for washing the salt out of your hair.

"I was delighted with my place. The tide almost drove fish into the house and that was a little annoying but the sights were marvelous. I have seen a flock of perhaps 50 pelicans landing on the rocks and flapping their dewlaps to cool their throats. Herons love the coral beach, and the plumage of the birds that live on my island is lovely. I only hope one of the birds of paradise comes over from Little Tobago some day.

"Well, I am master of all I survey. It isn't much in extent but it is a lovely spot. Each night I put out my port and starboard lights, each morning I raise my American flag.

The nationalistic streak in the mistress of Goat Island got her into some good-natured trouble with the Britishers on Tobago who didn't especially fancy the idea of a foreign flag.

" 'You might put the British flag above it,' they suggested, but I said 'Nothing doing,' and they laughed and said that the Governor over at Trinidad might see it and I replied: 'Well, I am the American consul here and what can he do about it?' This amused them and they finished the job by conferring upon me the titles of harbor master, rural constable, custom officer and postmistress of Goat Island.

Mrs. Compton is visited occasionaly by artists, scientists and writers who make Scarborough, Tobago, their headquarters. Sometimes her native friends from Tobago come over for a round of punch. They like to take pictures, too. In fact, she is becoming such a neighborhood celebrity that she finds her solitude very much modified sometimes.

With the first intimation of fall weather, Mrs. Compton will return to Goat Island for the blessing—to her, at least—of boiling heat and a constant humidity that would throttle most persons. Of her return she talks rapidly and tensely. She smokes cigarettes incessantly, a habit born of the effect of loneliness on a high-strung human. She gestures freely and expressively. She would love nothing better, she says, than to stay in the States and pick up once more her stage work, for she is at heart an actress. But that is denied her. Yet one cannot but think, after meeting her only once, that life will always be drama for Christine Compton and her kind, whether in Tobago, or Goat Island or Broadway. For these lucky—and yet, in a sense, unlucky—persons life, no matter where lived, is always exciting. Their audience may be only the stars or the waves of the sea, but an audience they will have.

When a Society Play-Girl Became an "Apprentice Diplomat"

Miss Helen Lee Doherty.

New Secretary to Ambassadress Ruth Bryan Owen, Miss Helen Lee Doherty, Has Already Been Criticised by the Danish Press as the Girl Who Gave Away Nine Automobiles at Her Debut.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

COPENHAGEN, Denmark.

IT IS putting it mildly to say that the arrival of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen as Minister from the United States to Denmark caused a sensation. In this charming, northern capital, where life is on a very simple and unpretentious scale, Mrs. Owen's arrival was a major event.

Not only was she the first American woman minister ever to be appointed, and a handsome and commanding woman, with a distinguished career behind her. But she arrived with a retinue, a troupe. A daughter. A little granddaughter. A servant or two. A newspaper woman from Washington detailed to record her arrival and reception as Minister. And last, but certainly not least, Miss Helen Lee Eames Doherty, in the role of private secretary to the new Minister.

As a matter of fact malicious gossips in the diplomatic crowd hinted that Miss Doherty's reception by press and public rather eclipsed that of her superior, Mrs. Owen. And there is some justification for that interpretation. For Miss Doherty—since the marriage of the Woolworth heiress to a Georgian prince in Paris the other day—ranks, roughly, as America's No. 1 heiress. Causing a sensation is nothing new in Miss Doherty's young life. Her debut in Washington in 1930 was one of the most spectacular parties Washington has ever seen.

Inevitably in a country such as this, where display of wealth is not approved of, Miss Doherty came in for certain criticism. The newspapers, and particularly those on the Socialist side of politics, were frank in their expressions of criticism. They reprinted the stories about Miss Doherty's debut—how it had cost a million dollars. It was vulgar, they said, to spend a million dollars on a party when people were in need of food, it was worse than vulgar, it was stupid.

This went on for some time before Miss Doherty's arrival. No one was certain what her status would be, not even the officials in charge of the American legation. The charge d'affaire at the legation until the arrival of Mrs. Owen was North Winship.

"But your place as first secretary in the legation will be taken now by Miss Doherty, will it not?" the Copenhagen reporters demanded of Winship.

"That is not my impression," Winship replied. "It is my understanding that Miss Doherty is to be Mrs. Owen's own personal secretary, that she will not be a diplomatic secretary in the official sense."

Whatever Miss Doherty's official status it is certain that she will not occupy an obscure place here. To begin with she will be able to live just as she pleases in so far as money is concerned. It is reported that her foster father, Henry L. Doherty, the enormously rich utilities and real estate operator, has given her an allowance of $100,000 a year. Her diplomatic passport was marked "Apprentice Diplomat."

Henry L. Doherty and the former Mrs. Percy F. Eames, at the time of their marriage.

In actuality she is the personal protege of Mrs. Owen. Mrs. Owen's home is in Florida. She has made her political career in Florida and was elected to Congress from that State. Miss Doherty's stepfather owns a good share of the State of Florida. His holdings include utility companies, street railway and bus lines and $16,000,000 of real estate in Miami and Miami Beach alone. Not long ago he added the Roney-Plaza, one of Miami Beach's luxury hotels, to his holdings. Doherty and Mrs. Owen have long been friends. It is said that the utilities magnate has helped to further her career. What more natural then that she should take Doherty's stepdaughter under her protection? Her first day in Copenhagen Miss Doherty was interviewed by a score or more of reporters. She impressed them by her directness and simplicity.

"I am going into the diplomatic service as a serious career," she said. "I have always wanted to go into the foreign service. And a great deal of my training has been to that end. I specialized in languages and in recent political history. It is a career that is now open to women on the same terms as it is open to men."

Helen Lee's story has many of the elements of the Cinderella legend. Her father was Percy Frank Eames, an officer in the foreign service of the International Harvester Co. At her father's death, Helen Lee and her mother were left an all too modest income. To augment this income and give her daughter every possible advantage, Mrs. Eames studied nursing. Her 'teen age daughter she placed in the University of Madrid in Spain. The family had long lived abroad and Helen Lee's mother wanted her to perfect her languages.

For many years Mrs. Eames had been a friend of Mrs. William T. Morrey, a sister of Doherty. In the latter part of 1927 Doherty was taken seriously ill. He had long suffered from arthritis and neuritis. At this time his illness became so acute that he was forced to enter a sanitarium. Mrs. Eames took charge of nursing him and during his entire sickness, which was of almost two years duration, she served him with devoted care.

And it was not merely the duties of a nurse that she performed. She aided him in carrying on from his bed the vast business that he had built literally from nothing. He had been a newsboy in Columbus, Ohio, then an office boy in the gas company there. Within 10 years he had acquired that company and a half dozen others. Swiftly he pyramided his holdings, turning his attention to oil as well as utilities. A man of Doherty's fierce and domineering temperament would not surrender the direction of his companies even for serious illness. When his arms were so crippled he could not hold the telephone, Mrs. Eames held it to his mouth so he might talk to his lieutenants in various parts of the country.

Toward the end of 1928 Doherty began to recover. On New Year's eve Doherty and Mrs. Eames were secretly married in Toronto, Canada. Doherty was still a convalescent and his doctors had advised that the news of the marriage be withheld until his complete recovery.

THE announcement of the marriage was made in April of 1929. The age of Mrs. Eames was given as 38, Doherty's age as 58. Helen Lee was then 18.

It was not long after this announcement that Doherty legally adopted his wife's child. Helen Lee became Helen Lee Eames Doherty. Doherty wanted to shower upon her everything that wealth could buy. Helen Lee's mother often restrained him for fear that Helen Lee would be spoiled by such sudden wealth.

By temperament Helen Lee is quiet and somewhat reserved. She has a decided artistic bent which took a rather curious turn. It occurred to her that it would be interesting to hand-paint her own motor-car and the motor-cars of two or three of her friends. It would be the personal touch, such as coach-makers supplied when they designed a special coach for the noblesse. It would be amusing and clever. Finally she sold the Ford Motor Co. on the idea of "personalizing" motor cars. Associated with a professional artist from New York, Miss Natalie MacDonald Hall, Miss Doherty went to the plant of the Ford company at Highland Park, Michigan, and began to work.

One of the first cars she painted—in a design of horsemen—she sent as a gift to Alfonso of Spain, at that time still on the throne. And there was a romantic story behind this gift. While in Madrid Helen Lee had been riding with a friend who was thrown from her horse on a park bridle-path. Alfonso was passing in his motor car nearby. Miss Doherty, seeking help, summoned the King who took the unconscious friend and Miss Doherty to a hospital.

The hand-painted motor car business was ill-fated from the beginning. By the time the car reached Spain Alfonso was dethroned. Shortly afterward Helen Lee had a disagreement with Miss Hall. That disagreement has grown into a lawsuit, filed the other day in a Detroit court. Miss Hall is suing Helen Lee, Helen Lee's mother and a New York patent attorney, Edmund G. Borden, for $500,000 for breach of contract. In her complaint Miss Hall charges that Mrs. Doherty entered into an agreement to obtain patents for decorative designs she, Miss Hall, originated for the ornamentation of motor cars. Mrs. Doherty, the complaint sets forth, promised not to exhibit the designs until they were protected by copyright.

In violation of this agreement, Miss Hall states, Mrs. Doherty had photographs made of Helen Lee and a painted motor car, clearly displaying the then unpatented designs. In an answer to the original complaint Mrs. Doherty has denied virtually all these charges.

Now Miss Hall's attorneys have requested permission to cross-examine Helen Lee in the legation here at Copenhagen.

But putting aside an artistic career, Helen Lee was plunged into the social life of Washington. It was such a plunge, such a splurge, as even Washington has never seen.

The reports of Helen Lee's debut were, of course, somewhat exaggerated. The party didn't cost a million dollars. It didn't cost a half million. And while it cost plenty, it was to a man of Doherty's wealth nothing, small change.

The Dohertys took for the party all the public rooms of the smart Mayflower Hotel in Washington. To each of the nine girls who stood in the receiving line Helen Lee gave a hand-painted motor car. There were a thousand guests, among them Vice-President Curtis, his sister, Mrs. Dolly Gann, Secretary of War and Mrs. Hurley, and more diplomats and Senators than you could shake a stick at. It was all a little overwhelming to Helen Lee. Most of the guests were total strangers to her. It is doubtful if she had ever seen more than a hundred of them before in her life. But because this debut pleased her foster father she accepted it and was happy.

IN REALITY she is more serious and more intellectual than most people—even those who know her casually—give her credit for. At the time of her debut she was engaged in translating from Spanish into English a highly technical work on mineralogy for one of her professors in the University of Madrid, Don Celso Arevalo.

This is the real reason, the fact of Helen Lee's very genuine intellectual attainments, that Mrs. Owen agreed to bring her to Copenhagen. If Helen Lee is serious about a diplomatic career, she could hardly have come to a better post. Stockholm and Copenhagen are both ranked very high as training posts for young diplomats. And besides acquiring the necessary diplomatic background, Helen Lee is almost certain to have a very good time.

She is young and attractive and Copenhagen is a gay capital. The court circle is extremely democratic and the new diplomat will have a glimpse of royalty that she might not have at any other post. Certainly she will have many young men, titled and otherwise, paying her court, and not alone Danes. The diplomatic service is filled with personable but poor young men who must, if they are to advance themselves in their profession, marry money. That is one of the risks Helen Lee takes in entering the foreign service. But it is a risk which she appears perfectly competent to meet. Possessed of all the necessary qualifications: money, a good mind, sufficient training, Helen Lee may go very far. She may herself be some day, like her present superior, Madame Minister, or, even, Madame Ambassador. Stranger things than that have happened already in the life of this girl of 23.

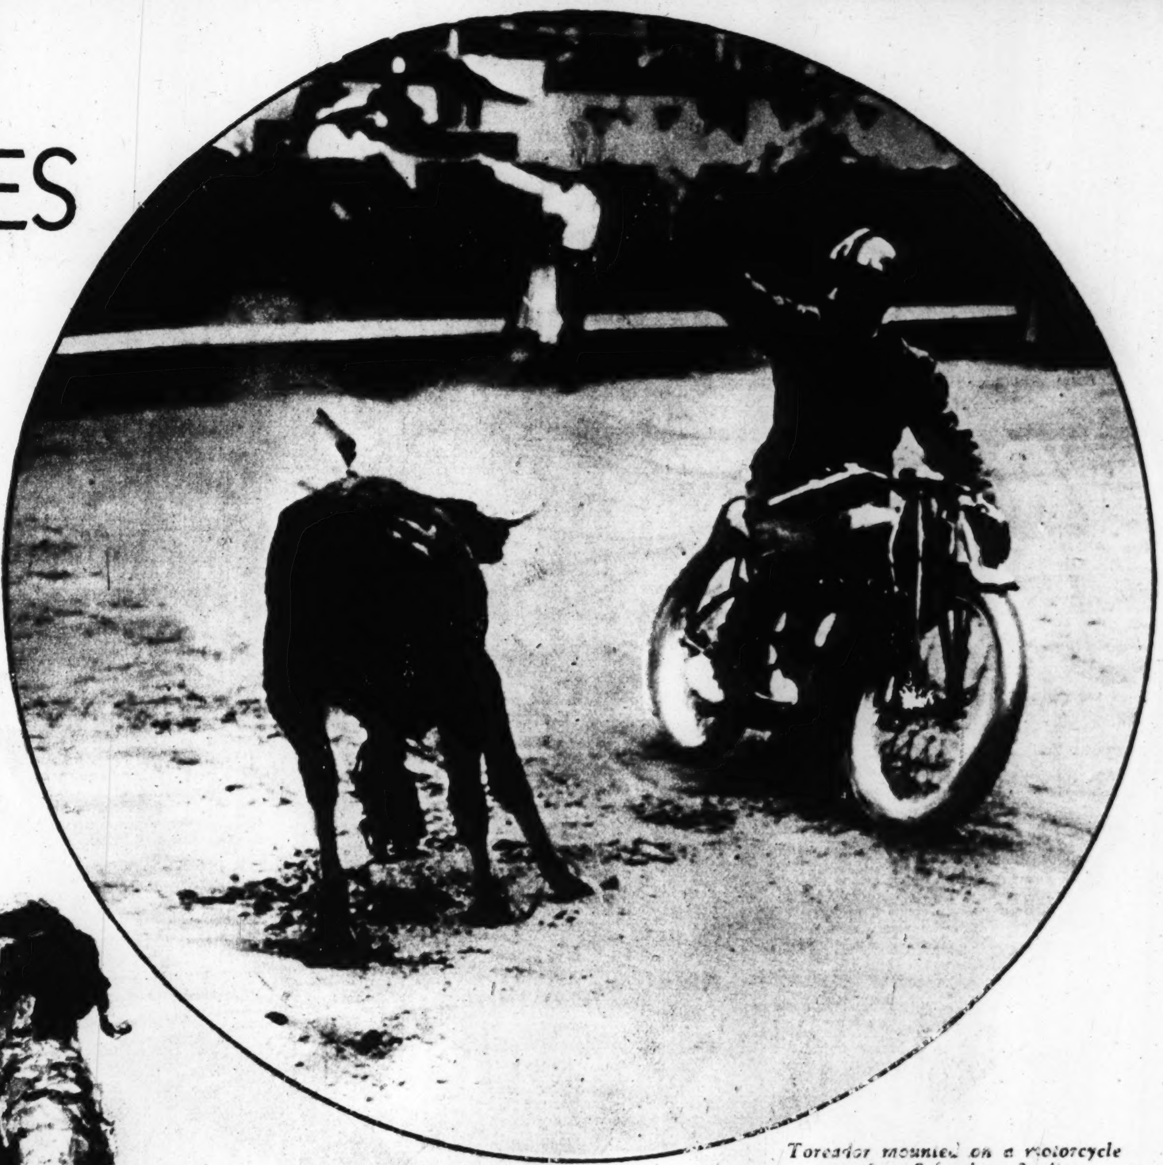
STAGING BULLFIGHTS with TOREADORS in AUTOMOBILES

Latest Innovation in the National Sport of Spain Hailed by the True Aficionados (Bullfight Fans) as but Another Indication of Its Decadence.

Ernest Hemingway.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff



Toreador mounted on a motorcycle at San Sebastian, Spain.

THE virile art of bullfighting has gone on a mechanized basis. Matadors on motor cycles, picadors striking from the safe vantage of a motor car. That is the startling news that has come out of Spain. It can be interpreted, if one has a bitter hate on the motorized age, as simply another art gone decadent and mechanical—another instance of machine-made art.

That is the attitude of most admirers of bullfighting in its pure, classic form. They lament these innovations. It is degrading, they say, to debase in this way the ancient and honorable ritual of the bull ring.

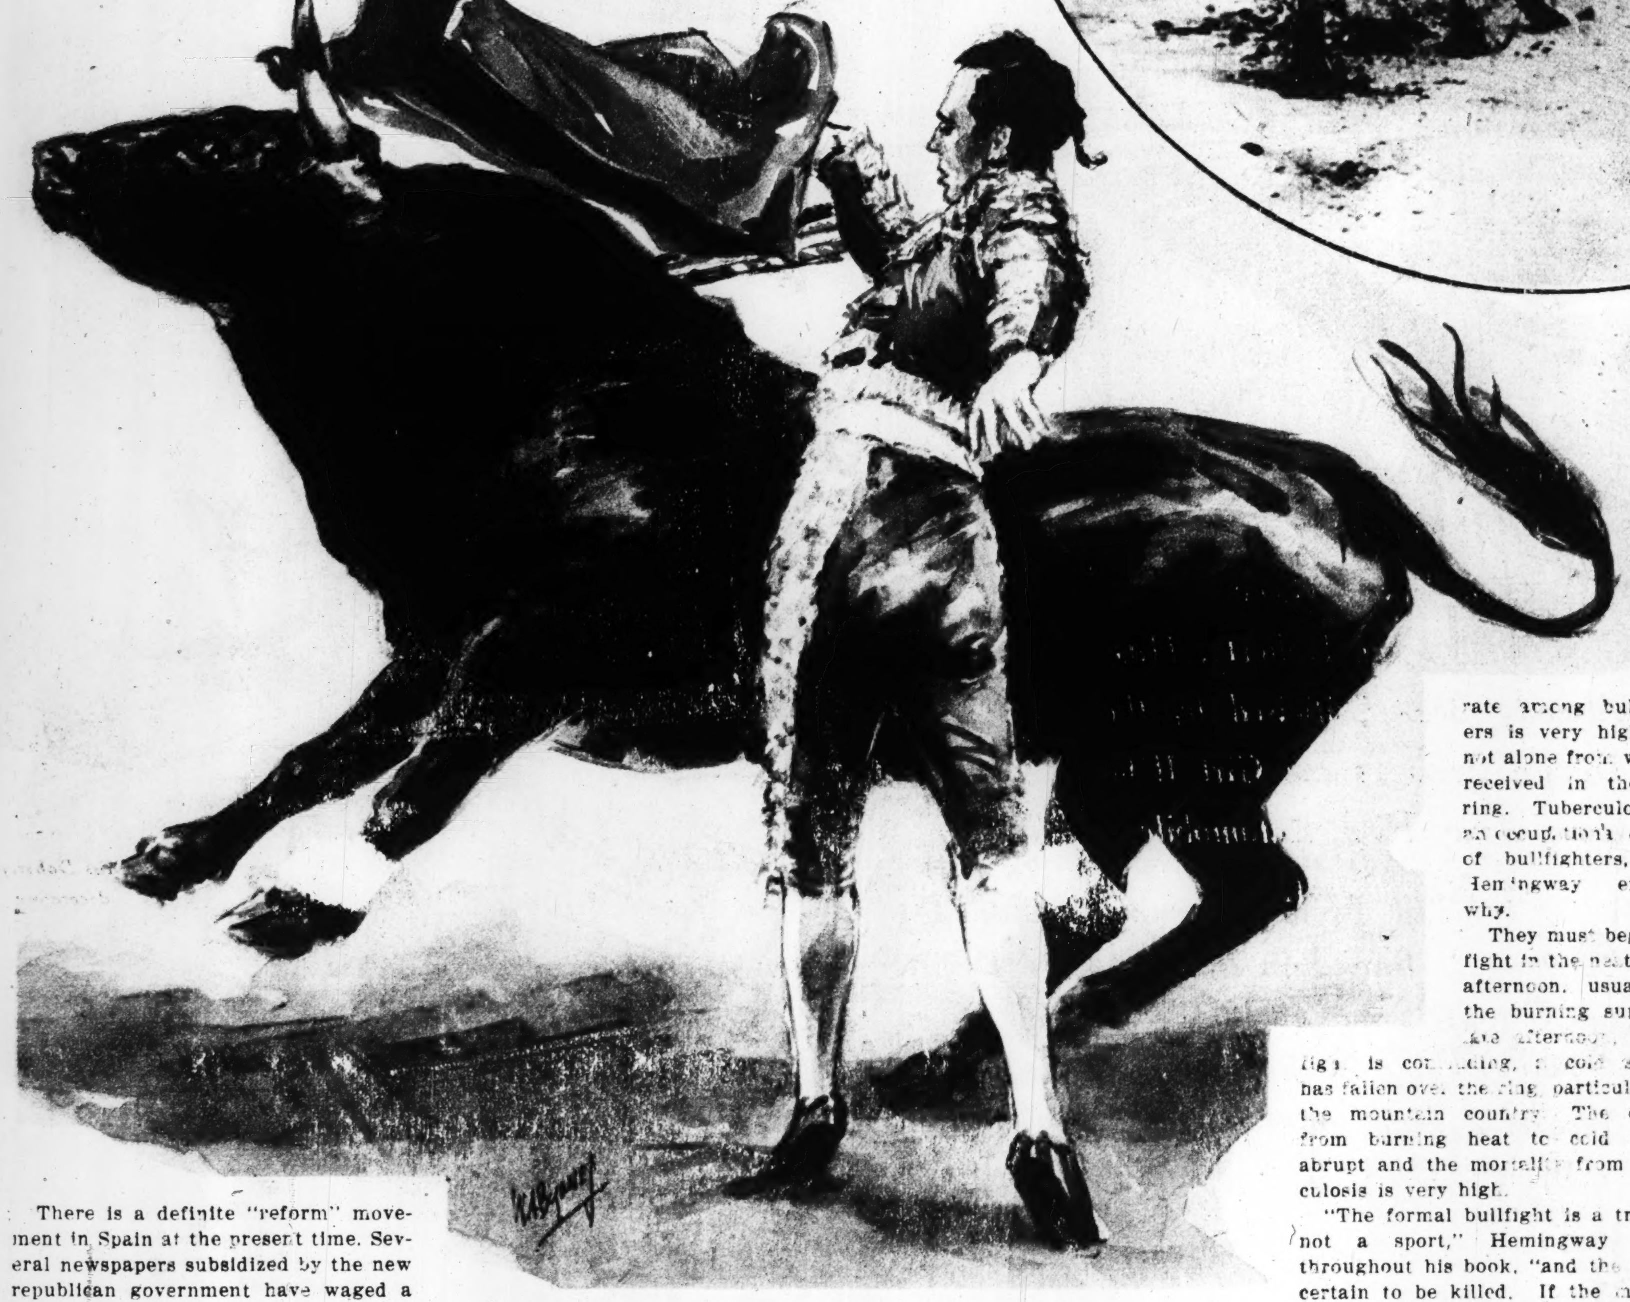
First it was motor cycles that were employed. And now, more recently, at Bilboa, picadors, matadors and banderilleros all used small motor cars in the bull ring. The bullfight promoter at Bilboa, reproached by the bull ring fans who cling to the traditional, gave humanitarian reasons as his justification for the latest innovation. Think, he said, of all the horses that are spared from goring. But no one was deceived by this. For bullfight promoters are, like promoters the world over, out for big money, and they have discovered that there is big money in a new thrill—the spectacular, the startling.

What has happened to bullfighting may be compared with what happened in the wrestling field in this country. Wrestling, as a commercial sport, had fallen to a low state. The average gate hardly paid the promoter's light bill. Whereupon, in desperation, the rules were so liberalized that wrestlers could seem to do everything but gouge each other's eyes out, and promptly business jumped to all but capacity. The new wrestling was spectacular, violent and apparently dangerous. True sportsmen were contemptuous. But the mob liked it.

While this is, in a sense, comparable, it would be more nearly like what has happened to Spain's leading sport if the major league baseball teams should decide to use large, inflated beach balls instead of the customary baseball. It might be amusing and somewhat startling for a time, but to the dyed-in-the-wool fan such an innovation could only be a source of the deepest pain.

And there are many aficionados left in Spain. Aficionado is the name given to one who understands bullfights and still cares for them. In recent years many Americans have developed this understanding. And it is an American who has recently written the classic work in English on bullfighting. Ever since the war Ernest Hemingway has been attending bullfights. He has followed the careers of not only the principal matadors but of the beginners and the novices. In pursuit of his interest he has traveled to all parts of Spain, and not once but many times. His book, "Death in the Afternoon," contains about all there is to know of bullfighting. More, perhaps, than the average lay reader who has never seen a bullfight is prepared to understand. The technique of bullfighting is analyzed in minute detail.

The mechanized innovations are, of course, the type of thing that makes a true aficionado, such as Hemingway, turn purple with rage. Hemingway has a great deal to say in "Death in the Afternoon" about the decadence of bullfighting—the cowardice and lack of skill of some contemporary matadors, the way in which they have debased the true forms of the art. He gives unstinted praise to the two or three matadors who have maintained the rigorous traditions of the past. For those who would "reform" bullfighting he has only brief contempt.



In the true bullfight the postures are traditional and ritualistic.

There is a definite "reform" movement in Spain at the present time. Several newspapers subsidized by the new republican government have waged a fierce campaign against this old Spanish custom. It is only, Hemingway says, with his sharp contempt, that the new Spanish statesmen want to be able to go to the League of Nations meetings and feel that their country is just like every other country. The thing that shocks many Americans—the cruelty to the horses—does not disturb Hemingway in the least. He insists that this is an essential part of the spectacle, a kind of comic relief.

"I BELIEVE," Hemingway writes in his primer of bullfighting, "that the tragedy of the bullfight is so well ordered and so strongly disciplined by ritual that a person feeling the whole tragedy cannot separate the minor comic-tragedy of the horse so as to feel it emotionally. If they sense the meaning and the end of the whole thing even when they know nothing about it; feel that this thing they do not understand is going on, the business of the horse is nothing more than an incident.

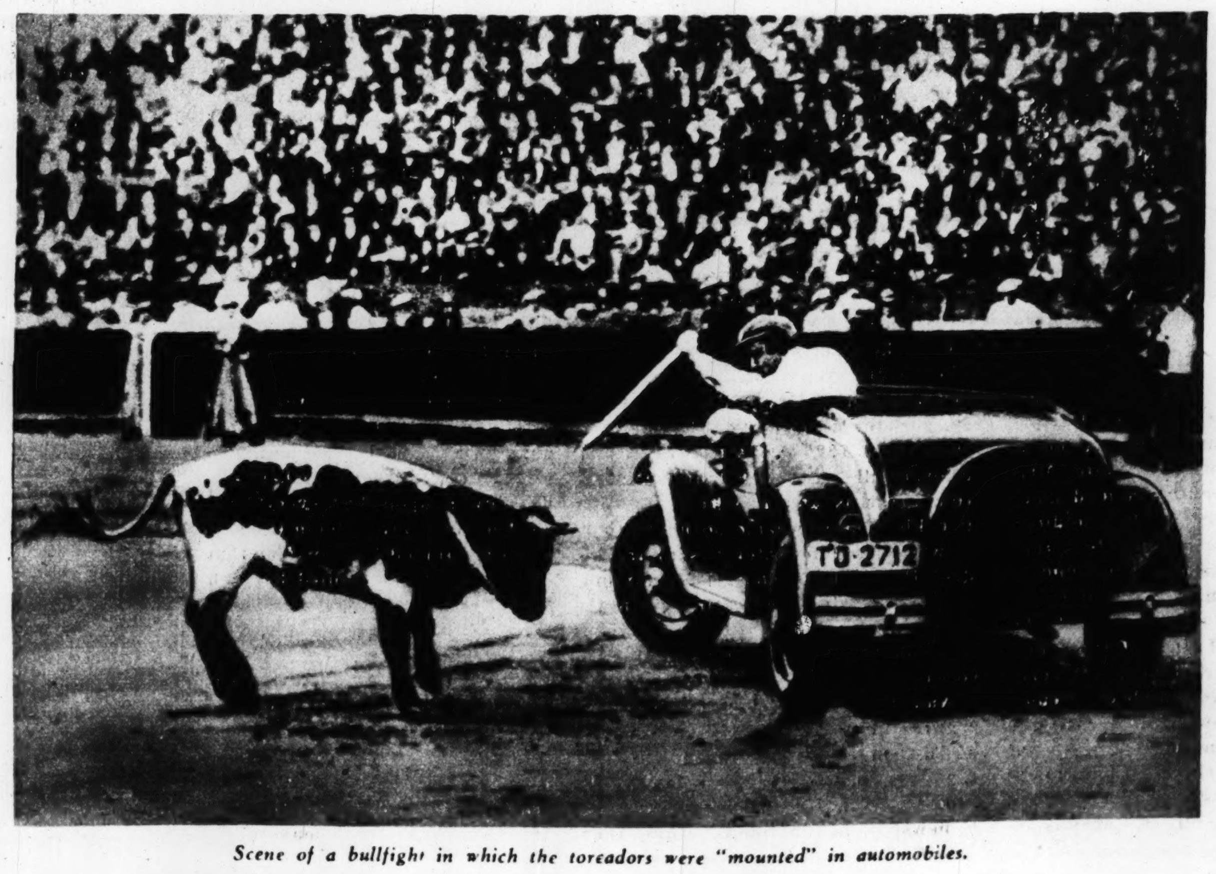
"If they get no feeling of the whole tragedy, naturally they will react emotionally to the most picturesque incident. Naturally, too, if they are humanitarians or animalians (what a word!) they will get no feeling of the tragedy, but only a reaction on humanitarian or animalarian grounds, and the most obviously abused thing is the horse. If they sincerely identify themselves with animals they will suffer terribly, more so perhaps than the horse; since a man who has been wounded knows that the pain of a wound does not commence until about half an hour after it has been received, and there is no proportional relation in pain to the horrible aspect of the wound; the pain of an abdominal wound does not come at the time but later, with the gas pains and the beginning of peritonitis; a pulled ligament or a broken bone, though, hurts at once, and terribly; but these things are not known or they are ignored by the person who has identified himself with the animal and he will suffer genuinely and terribly, seeing only this aspect of the bullfight, while, when a horse pulls up lame in a steeplechase he will not suffer at all and consider it merely regrettable."

The aficionados disapprove of the practice, introduced several years ago, of protecting the horse with heavy pads. In reality, say the experts, this causes the horse more pain than the old way, when he was gored and then led out of the ring and immediately killed. Under the new system a horse can be used a number of times. The animal develops an overwhelming fear and, moreover, the aficionado claims that the actual pain of the buffeting from the bull's horns, though it does not result in death, is greater than the pain of a major wound.

IF YOU have once seen a truly great bullfighter killed, then you will never again waste any sympathy on the horses, Hemingway writes. The horse that is gored is ordinarily put out of its misery, but the man is allowed to linger on, usually to die after weeks or months of suffering. The mortality rate among bullfighters is very high, and not alone from wounds received in the bull ring. Tuberculosis is an occupational disease of bullfighters, and Hemingway explains why.

They must begin the fight in the heat of the afternoon, usually in the burning sun. By late afternoon, as the fight is concluding, a cold shadow has fallen over the ring, particularly in the mountain country. The change from burning heat to cold is too abrupt and the mortality from tuberculosis is very high.

"The formal bullfight is a tragedy, not a sport," Hemingway insists throughout his book, "and the bull is certain to be killed. If the matador cannot kill him and, at the end of the allotted 15 minutes for the preparation and killing, the bull is led and herded out of the ring alive by steers, to dishonor the killer, he must, by law, be killed in the corrals. It is 100 to 1 against the matador de toros, or formally invested bullfighter, being killed unless he is inexperienced, ignorant, out of training or too old and heavy on his feet. But the matador, if he knows his profession, can increase the amount of the danger of death that he runs exactly as much as he wishes. He should, however, increase this danger within the rules provided for his protection. In other words, it is to his credit if he does something that he knows how to do in a highly dangerous but still geometrically possible manner. It is to his discredit if he runs danger through ignorance, through disregard of the fundamental rules, through physical or mental slowness or through blind folly."



Scene of a bullfight in which the toreadors were "mounted" in automobiles.

The law specifying that a bull shall not appear more than once in the ring was passed for the protection of the matadors. The bull learns too rapidly, and never forgets what he learns. In the small towns of Spain, this law is often broken, to the disaster of matadors, both amateur and professional. Sometimes the town organizes an amatur bullfight, roping off the town square, and anyone may take part. The square is filled with young men, all waving scarlet capes at the bull, and brandishing swords. Since the town is very poor, the bull must be saved for another such occasion. The bull's horns may be blunted, in which event it is only a rather amusing event to watch. Hemingway writes:

"But when the bull's horns are sharp-pointed it is a disturbing spectacle. The men and boys try cape work with sacks, blouses and old capes on the bull, just as they do when his horns have been blunted; the only difference is that when the bull catches them and tosses them they are liable to come off the horn with wounds no local surgeon can cope with. One bull which was a great favorite in the capeas (amateur bullfight) of the province of Valencia killed 16 men and boys and badly wounded over 60 in a career of five years.

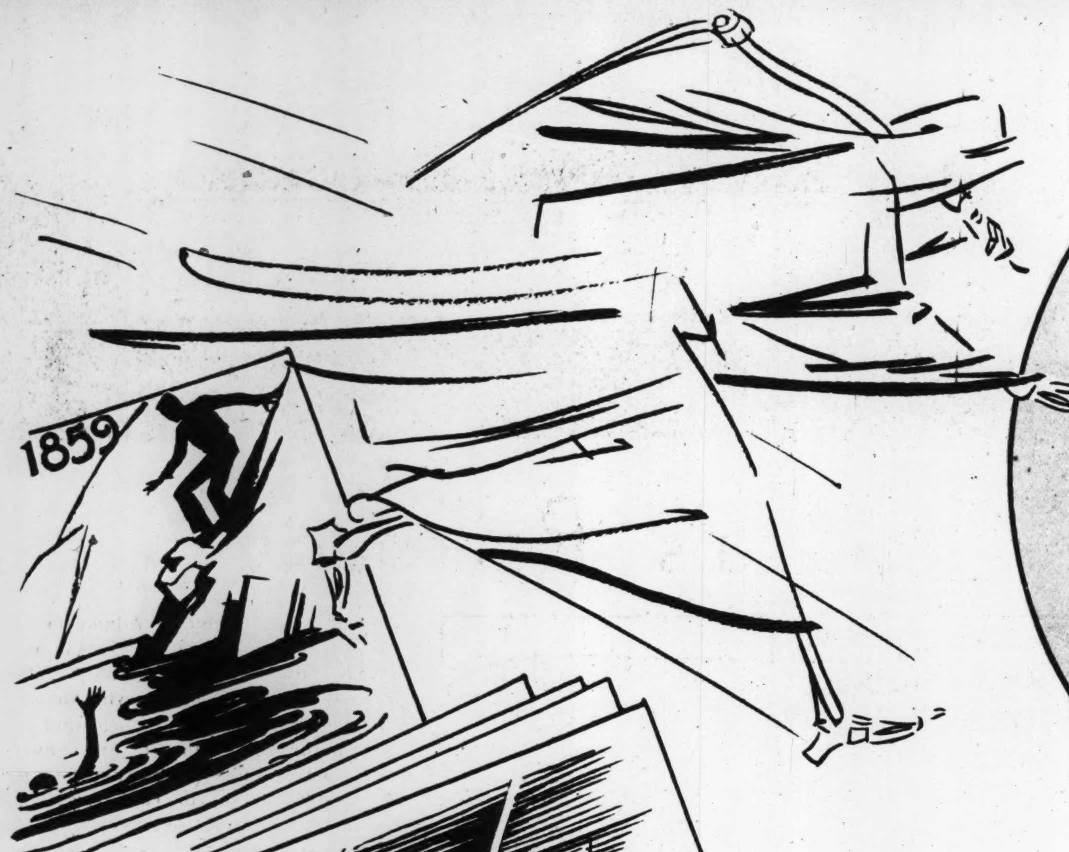
"The people who go into these capeas do so sometimes as aspirant professionals to get free experience with bulls, but most often as amateurs, purely for sport, for the immediate excitement, and it is very great excitement; and for the retrospective pleasure of having shown their contempt for death on a hot day in their own town square. Many go in from pride, hoping that they will be brave. Many find they are not brave at all; but at least they went in. There is absolutely nothing for them to gain except the inner satisfaction of having been in the ring with a bull."

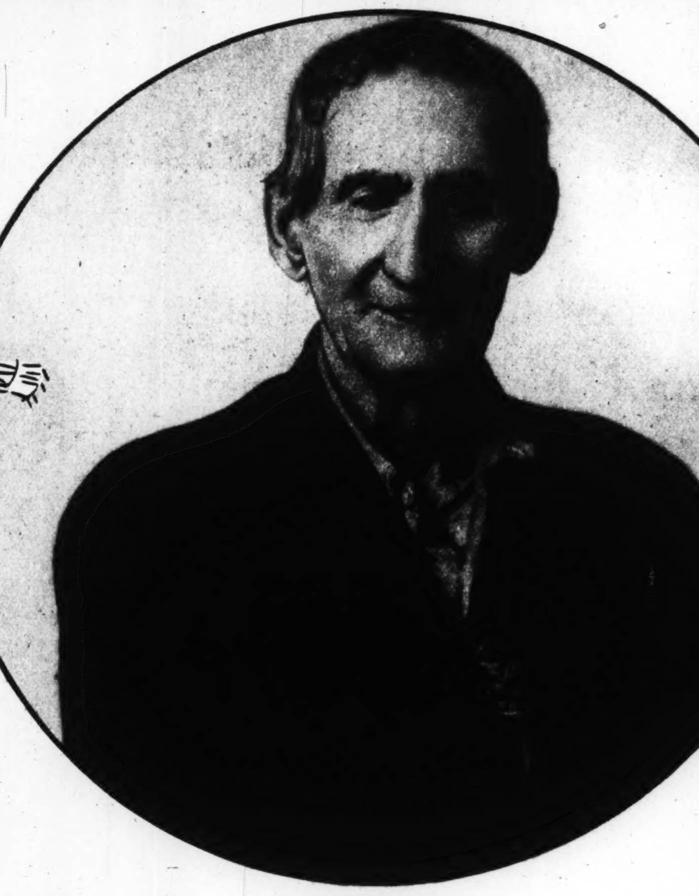
THESE amateur fights are constantly being abolished and reabolished by Government order. But for all the signs of its decadence—the freak innovations such as autos and motor cycles—the formal bullfight will, in Hemingway's opinion, survive. And this despite the fact that many persons in the present government would like to see bullfighting done away with.

Formerly Valencia was the chief center, but now it has passed to Madrid. All through 1931, despite bad times and political unrest, and with only ordinary programs, Hemingway records, the ring was filled to capacity two and three times a week. So many people derive their living from it, he writes, from the raising, shipping, fighting, feeding and butchering of the fighting bulls that the Government would not abolish it, even if it felt strong enough to do so.

"Just now an exhaustive study is being made of the actual and potential use of all lands used for the grazing of fighting bull stock. In the agrarian readjustments that must come in Andalusia some of the biggest ranches are sure to be broken up, but since Spain is a grazing as well as an agricultural country and much of the grazing land is unfit for cultivation and none of the cattle produced are wasted, all being butchered and sold, whether killed in the ring or the slaughter house, much of the land now used for fighting-bull grazing in the south will certainly be retained. . . .

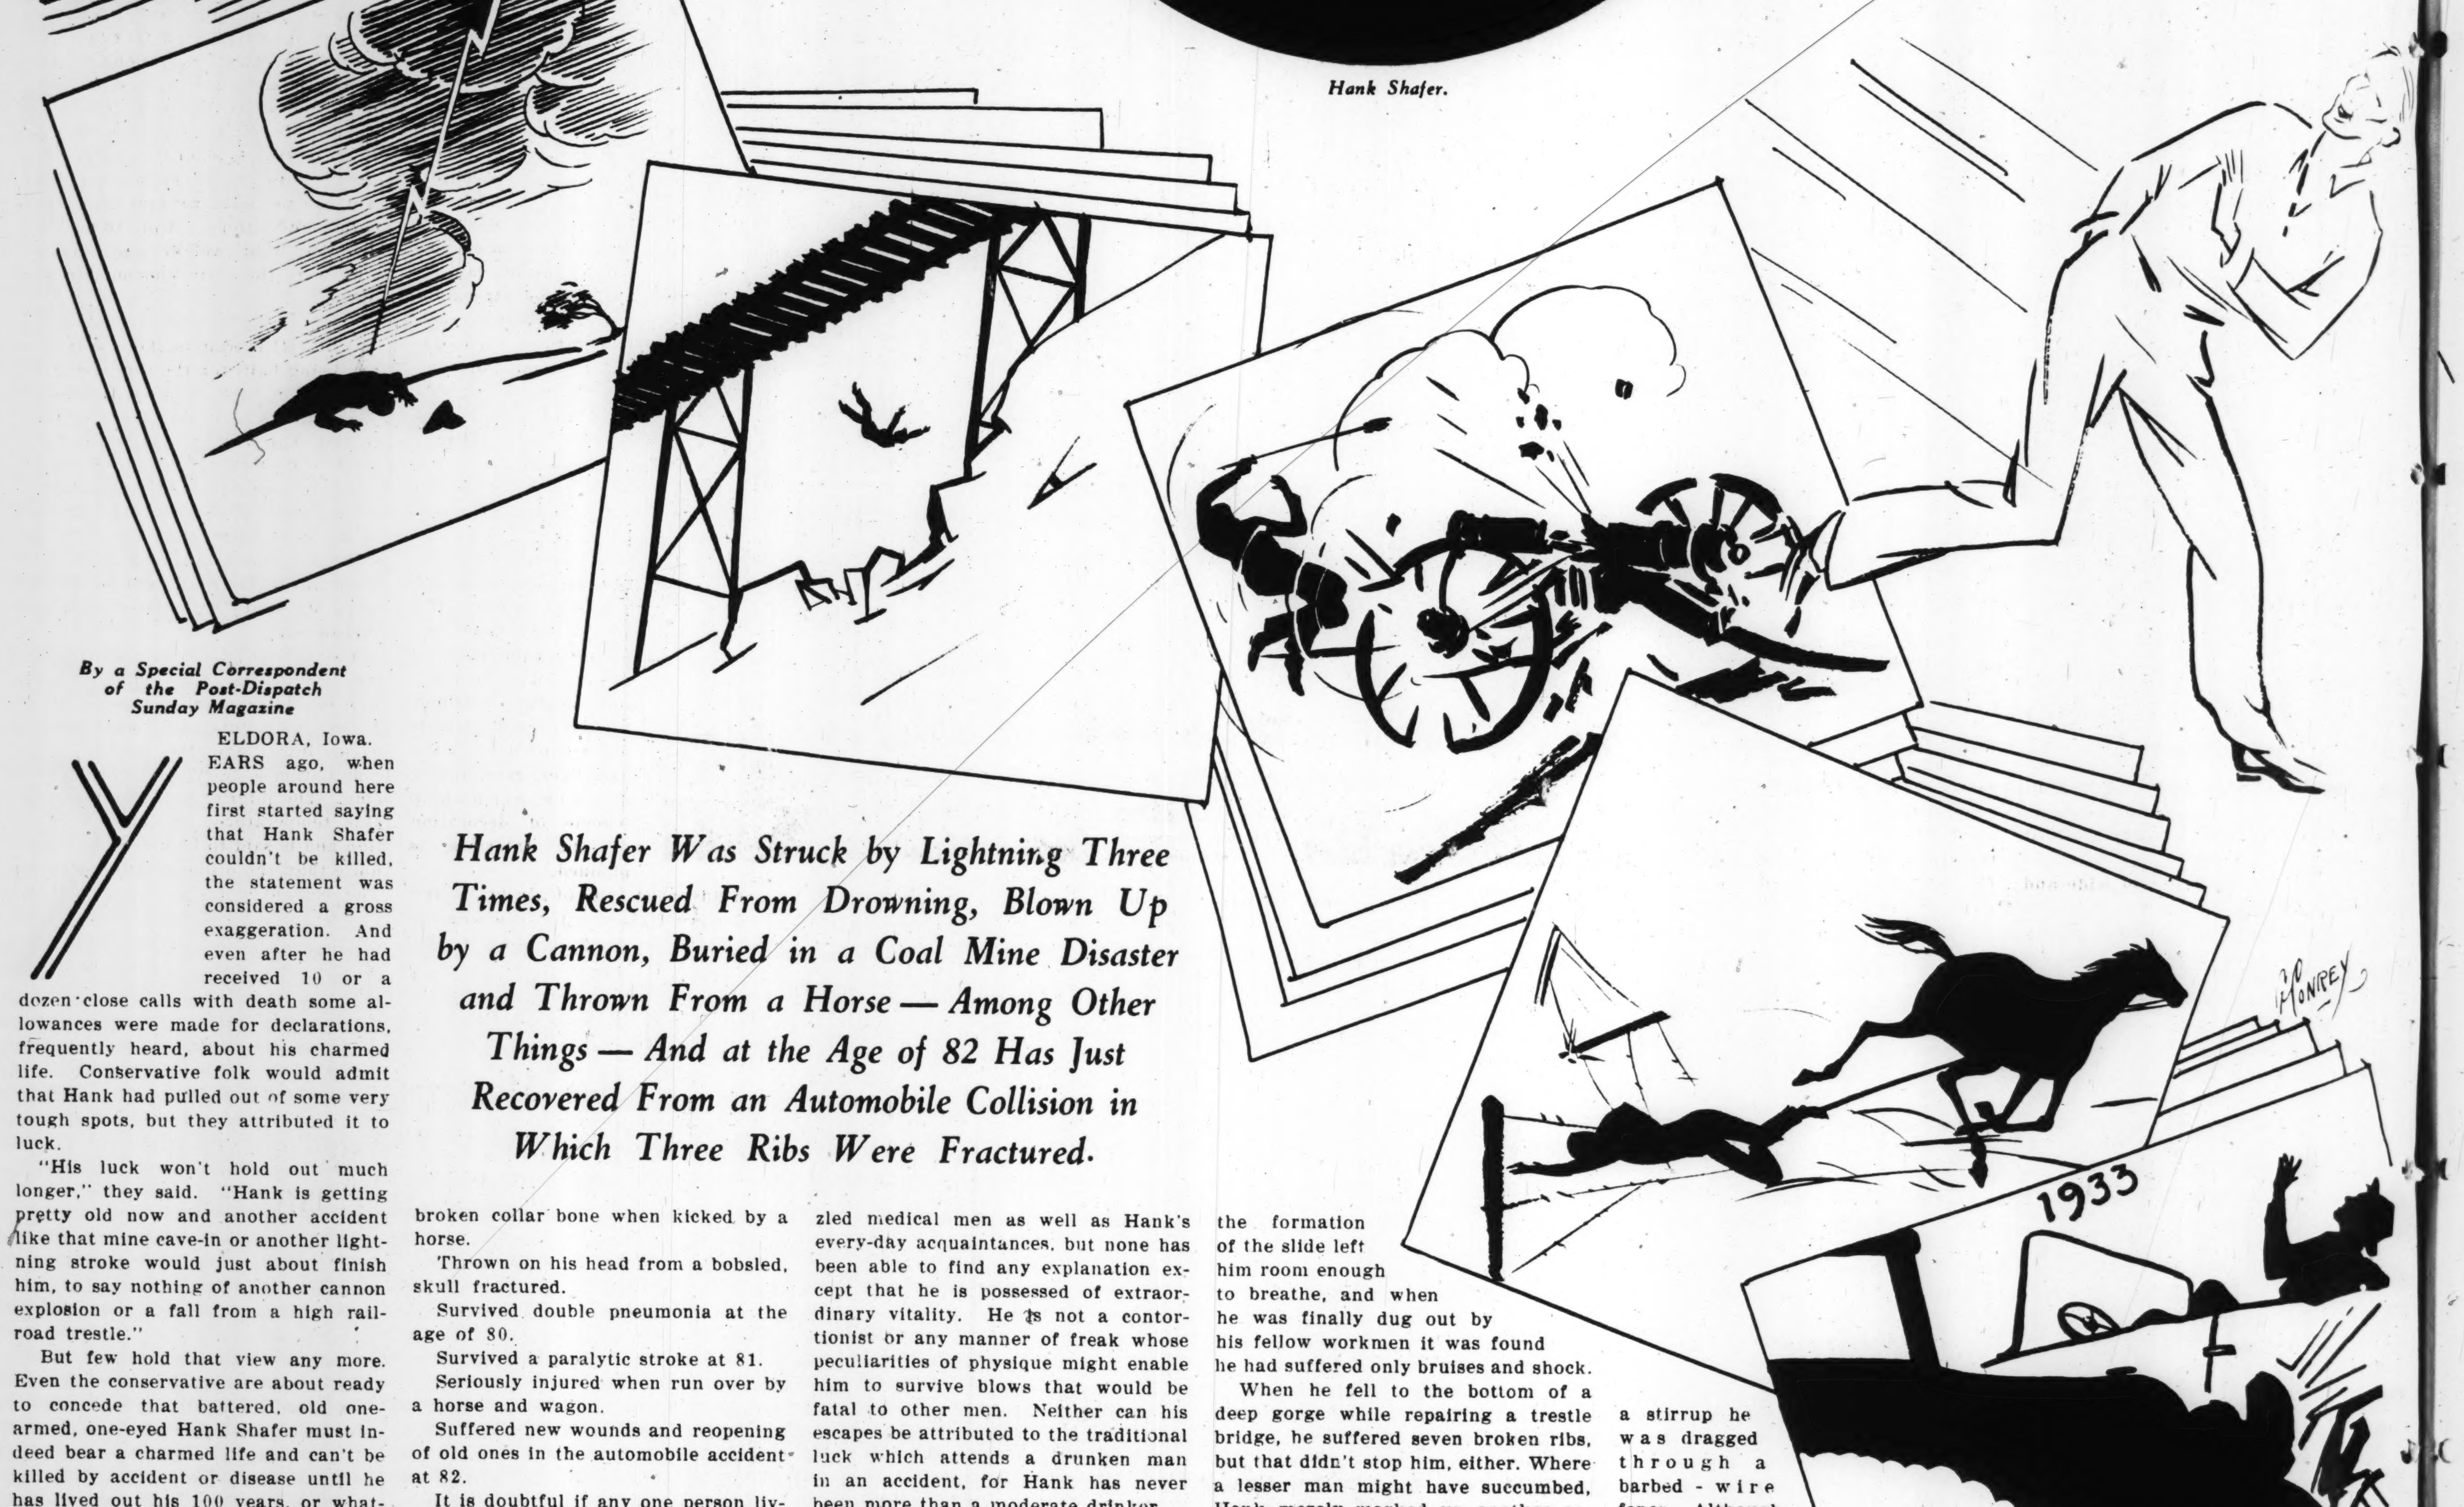
"I look for a certain reduction of acreage in bull-raising land in Andalusia and the breaking up of a number of ranches, but believe there will be no great change in the industry under the present Government, although many of its members would be proud to abolish the bullfight and doubtless will do all they can toward that end, and the quickest way to get at it is through the bulls, since bullfighters grow up unencouraged, having a natural talent, as acrobats or jockeys or even writers have, and none of them are irreplaceable; but fighting bulls are the products of many generations of careful breeding, as race horses are, and when you send that strain to the slaughter house that strain is finished."





Hank Shafer.

His FOURTEENTH Major Accident and He's Still Alive



Hank Shafer Was Struck by Lightning Three Times, Rescued From Drowning, Blown Up by a Cannon, Buried in a Coal Mine Disaster and Thrown From a Horse — Among Other Things — And at the Age of 82 Has Just Recovered From an Automobile Collision in Which Three Ribs Were Fractured.

ELDORA, Iowa.

YEARS ago, when people around here first started saying that Hank Shafer couldn't be killed, the statement was considered a gross exaggeration. And even after he had received 10 or a dozen close calls with death some allowances were made for declarations, frequently heard, about his charmed life. Conservative folk would admit that Hank had pulled out of some very tough spots, but they attributed it to luck.

"His luck won't hold out much longer," they said. "Hank is getting pretty old now and another accident like that mine cave-in or another lightning stroke would just about finish him, to say nothing of another cannon explosion or a fall from a high railroad trestle."

But few hold that view any more. Even the conservative are about ready to concede that battered, old one-armed, one-eyed Hank Shafer must indeed bear a charmed life and can't be killed by accident or disease until he has lived out his 100 years, or whatever his allotted span may be. When, at the age of 82, he went back to work a short time ago, pretty well recovered from the automobile crash in which he suffered injuries that everybody thought would be fatal, local observers quit worrying about anything that might happen to him in the future and came to the conclusion that the only way to kill him would be to take him apart and hide all the pieces.

The automobile accident occurred last November, after Hank had already passed his eighty-second milestone. He was sitting in his car at the side of the road when another car crashed into it. Hank was hurled against the steering wheel and suffered three broken ribs, a broken collarbone, internal injuries and injuries to his one remaining arm. Not many people 82 years old recover from such a battering as this. Hank did. Not only did he recover from these hurts, but his recovery marked the sixteenth time he had pulled out of death's reach in situations quite as serious as this, or even more serious. Here, briefly, is the list of Hank Shafer's close calls—accidents and diseases he has survived:

Rescued from drowning at the age of 8, after he had gone down for the third time and was unconscious.

Fell from a high trestle into a rocky canyon.

Blown into the air by a cannon explosion, suffering the loss of an arm and an eye.

Crushed under 5000 pounds of potter's clay.

Thrown from a horse in a runaway and dragged through a barbed-wire fence.

Suffered three broken ribs and a broken collar bone when kicked by a horse.

Thrown on his head from a bobsled, skull fractured.

Survived double pneumonia at the age of 80.

Suffered new wounds and reopening of old ones in the automobile accident at 82.

It is doubtful if any one person living can remember all of Hank's different accidents and give competent testimony as to his condition after each one. But there are many who remember a number of them and received the records of the others from their fathers and mothers. At any rate, nobody here doubts the record which has come down through a period of 74 years largely by word of mouth.

HANK, himself, says all these accidents happened, and he bears physical evidence of a good many of them. Three generations have heard the stories of his adventures, and the man, while still alive and working for a living, has already become a tradition in this part of the country.

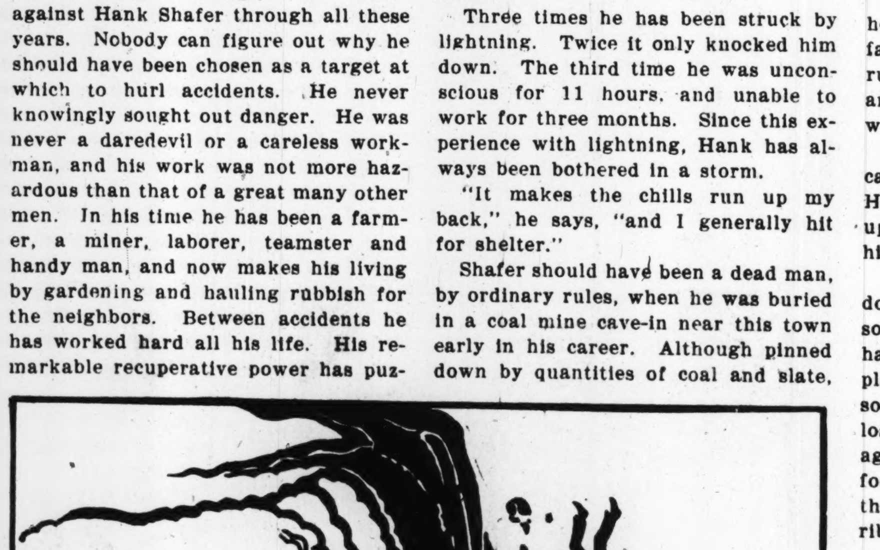
Nobody can account for the grudge which Fate seemingly has borne against Hank Shafer through all these years. Nobody can figure out why he should have been chosen as a target at which to hurl accidents. He never knowingly sought out danger. He was never a daredevil or a careless workman, and his work was not more hazardous than that of a great many other men. In his time he has been a farmer, a miner, laborer, teamster and handy man, and now makes his living by gardening and hauling rubbish for the neighbors. Between accidents he has worked hard all his life. His remarkable recuperative power has puzzled medical men as well as Hank's every-day acquaintances, but none has been able to find any explanation except that he is possessed of extraordinary vitality. He is not a contortionist or any manner of freak whose peculiarities of physique might enable him to survive blows that would be fatal to other men. Neither can his escapes be attributed to the traditional luck which attends a drunken man in an accident, for Hank has never been more than a moderate drinker.

Shafer began his unusual life in a little town in Michigan in 1851, and came to this locality with his parents when he was a small child. His life was not essentially different from that of other boys until his eighth birthday. Then he became different by reason of the fact that he had looked over the brink and had come back to tell about it. He was celebrating his birthday at a picnic on the Iowa River when he fell into deep water. He was unable to swim and rapidly went about the business of drowning. He had gone under the surface three times and was totally unconscious—to all appearances as dead as a doornail—when his father finally reached him, dragged him from the water and revived him. After that, life became one long series of accidents.

Three times he has been struck by lightning. Twice it only knocked him down. The third time he was unconscious for 11 hours, and unable to work for three months. Since this experience with lightning, Hank has always been bothered in a storm.

"It makes the chills run up my back," he says, "and I generally hit for shelter."

Shafer should have been a dead man, by ordinary rules, when he was buried in a coal mine cave-in near this town early in his career. Although pinned down by quantities of coal and slate, the formation of the slide left him room enough to breathe, and when he was finally dug out by his fellow workmen it was found he had suffered only bruises and shock.



When he fell to the bottom of a deep gorge while repairing a trestle bridge, he suffered seven broken ribs, but that didn't stop him, either. Where a lesser man might have succumbed, Hank merely marked up another accident on his list and soon went back to work.

His worst accident came nearly 50 years ago, during a Fourth of July celebration. Among the events of the day was a sham battle between a group of young men of the town and a group of Civil War veterans, who were all dressed up in their blue uniforms.

THE local boys wheeled an old Civil War cannon into place on the court-house square, and Hank's job was to ram the blank charge home. The cannon exploded, however, and the blank charge was sufficiently strong to throw Shafer into the air, to tear off an arm above the elbow, a finger of his left hand and to blow out one eye.

He was so badly hurt this time that he was not expected to live until nightfall. The sham battle came to an abrupt end and the participants hung around the local hospital awaiting word of their comrade.

But it seemed that a mere Civil War cannon was not enough to kill Shafer. He rallied, and in a short time he was up and at work, trying to accustom himself to his handicap.

It would appear that the fates had done enough for Shafer then, but not so. A few years later, while at work hauling clay for a local brick and tile plant, he was caught under a slide of some 5000 pounds of damp clay while loading his wagon. But his luck held again, and fellow workers located a foot in time to pull him from under the pile. He suffered only two broken ribs.

His next accident was a fall from a cliff, about 25 feet down, and he escaped without a scratch.

He was thrown from a horse in a runaway, and when his foot caught in a stirrup he was dragged through a barbed-wire fence. Although badly scarred, he was none the worse for wear a few weeks later.

From the time of this accident, some 30 years ago, Shafer's anti-death bug was given a rest. He continued his usual life, managing to handle as good a day's work as the next man, in spite of his lost arm, lost eye and finger, his bruises and his broken body.

It was only about 12 years ago that his troubles began afresh. He was thrown from a bobsled, and suffered a fractured skull. Local people thought that finally he had met an accident he couldn't cope with. They remembered he was 70 years old. But again they reckoned not on Hank's uncanny inability to die. After being laid up three months, Hank was again at his work, just as always.

Not long after this one of Hank's horses kicked him, breaking his hip and two ribs. Falling from the impact of the blow he broke his breastbone. He recovered.

Two years ago Hank was taken ill with a bad cold. The cold developed into double pneumonia. Everyone gave him up for dead. His son came to be present at the end, and the other relatives were awaiting word concerning the funeral. He was expected at any hour to breathe his last. People thought he was a goner this time because disease was something new to him. But he had been near death so many times it was just one more close call for him. He rallied and before long he was back at work.

Now he is 82 and in these last two years he has suffered a paralytic stroke on his left side—the side of his only remaining arm—and two more accidents. The paralytic stroke further handicapped him, and soon after he was able to leave his home following that illness, his horse, stopping suddenly, toppled him from the wagon. The wagon ran over his body. That cost him three more broken ribs. Then, in a few months, came the automobile crash. In this he suffered the rebreaking of the same ribs and his collarbone. Worst of all, the already partly paralyzed muscles of his left arm were torn. That, he admits, "bothers" him.

Through all these trials Shafer has maintained a keen mind and a keen sense of humor. He jokes with his friends about his experiences, and laughs at death's failures.

He now lives alone in a little house on the edge of his acreage and still goes about his work of gardening, hauling trash, and doing odd jobs. Perhaps he is a little slower at his work than in earlier years, but he still has spirit.

His fellow townsmen are convinced now Shafer can't be killed. They expect he will be here for many years to come, still recovering from accidents. Compared with him, they declare, the nine-lived cat is a piker.

Interior plan of the new Union Pacific train.

OMAHA, Nebraska.

A NEW kind of train will soon be scooting along American rights-of-way. A lean, low, stream-lined monster of metal, without locomotive, without smoke, it will skim over the rails at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour, while its passengers ride in such comfort as never before was provided for the general public in rail travel. The new train is an answer—it may prove to be the most important answer—of rail transportation to the challenge of the automobile and the airplane. It represents an effort to regain lost ground in passenger traffic by increasing the speed and comfort of train travel without adding to its cost or reducing its safety.

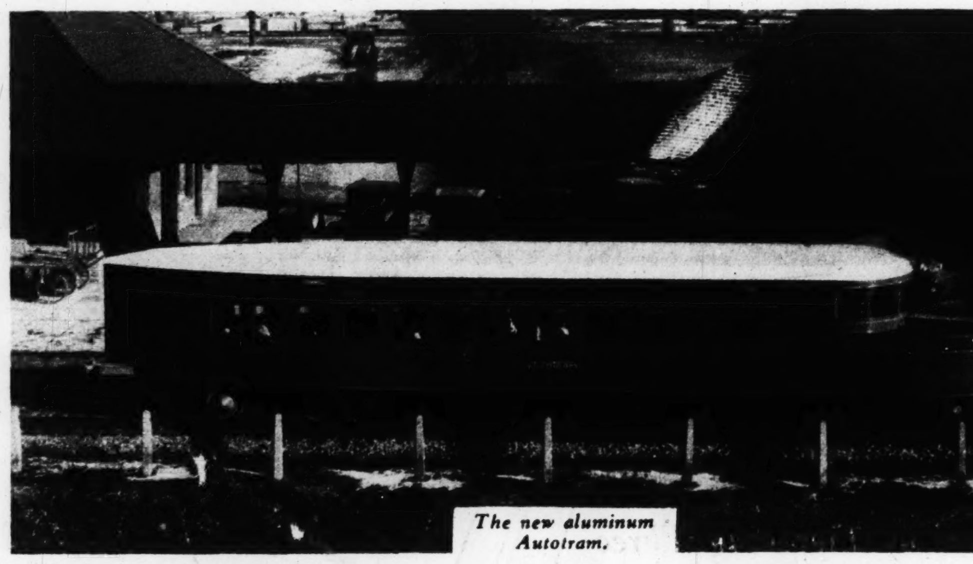
One of these high-speed, lightweight, stream-lined trains, which may become the standard type of passenger-carrier in a few years, is now being built for the Union Pacific Railroad. The train will consist of three cars, articulated, that is, hinged together and with a truck between the first and second and the second and third cars. The length of the train will be about 202 feet, and its weight about 80 tons; this is approximately the weight of one all-steel Pullman sleeping car. The comparatively light weight is obtained by using aluminum alloys in the construction, such metals being as strong as steel but of only a third its weight.

The cars will be nine feet wide and 11 feet 2 inches high, and will ride close to the ground; the bottom of the cars will be only 9½ inches above the rails.

With corners rounded so that a cross-section is somewhat elliptical, the train will have rather the appearance of a tube. Front and rear ends will narrow like the prow and stern of a ship.

This stream-lining was designed after wind-tunnel tests. In conformity with the plan of having a smooth, unbroken exterior surface, the windows will be practically flush with the outside of the cars.

In the front car will be the train's power plant. Here will be a 12-cylinder, 600-horsepower, V-type distillate burning internal combustion engine. It will be connected directly to an electric generator. Two motors, mounted on the axles of the forward truck of the train, will provide power capable of giving the train a top speed of 110 miles an hour, or a sustained, "cruising" speed of 90 miles an hour. In tanks under the floor of the power car enough fuel can be carried to supply the engine for about 1200 miles. While the train will not make its maximum speed around sharp curves, it is said that it will be able to take curves safely at higher speeds than the present steam trains because of its lower center of gravity.



The new aluminum Autotram.

Also in the front car will be a railway postoffice compartment, a baggage compartment, an air compressor and an auxiliary heater. This car will be about 72 feet long.

Passengers will occupy the two rear cars. The one next to the power car will be 60 feet long and contain seats for 60 persons. The last car, 70 feet long, will seat 56 passengers, and in the rear there will be a buffet kitchen from which light meals will be served to passengers in their seats.

The seats, of a reclining type, will be arranged in pairs along both sides of the cars and all will face forward. There will be an unusual amount of leg room, as the distance from center to center of the seats will be 38 inches. No luggage racks will be overhead; instead, there will be space under the seats to place hand baggage.

The entire train will be air-conditioned to provide even, comfortable temperatures inside both summer and winter, the air being filtered before it passes through the conditioning apparatus. The sealed windows will exclude cinders and dust. Further comfort will be attained by the reduction of noise and vibration through the use of heavy body insulation, rubber in the trucks, roller bearings and possibly resilient wheels. Indirect lighting will be used in the passenger cars and a simple, pleasing scheme of decoration of the interiors is planned.

An advanced type of air brake and shatter-proof glass in the windows are among the safety devices to be employed.

Credit for devising the Union Pacific's new train is given to E. E. Adams, vice-president. Adams began his railroad career in 1905 as a mechanic for the Southern Pacific. Transferred to the engineering department, he was successively assistant engineer for Union Pacific and Southern Pacific lines at Chicago. After the separation of the two systems he became consulting engineer for the Union Pacific at New York. In 1920 he was appointed assistant to the president in charge of purchases, engineering and standards, and in 1929 was advanced to vice-president.

In considering the problem of passenger service, Union Pacific experts reduced it to one of higher speed at lower cost per mile, without neglecting comfort and safety. And Adams decided that light weight and streamlining were the main elements in the solution.

ANOTHER train of the new type is being built for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, which expects to begin operating it in the fall. This also will be a three-car affair. Constructed of stainless steel, it will be powered with a 600-horsepower Deisel engine, capable of propelling it at a speed of 120 miles an hour—a speed comparable with that of air travel. The train will be streamlined, its units articulated and air-conditioned.

A single-car passenger train for fast and economical transportation has been developed. Called the Autotram, it is of aluminum construction, stream-lined, and the motive power comes from a 16-cylinder gasoline engine. The interior is kept at comfortable temperatures by forced ventilation and is said to be much freer from noise than the ordinary railway coach. The passenger compartment will accommodate 42 persons if the ordinary seating arrangement is followed. If desired, it may be equipped as a lounge car, the furnishings including chairs having frames of light aluminum alloy.

Building a Room in Miniature as a University Thesis

How Miss Irma Gaebler of St. Louis Carried Through an Unusual Project at "Missouri."

COLUMBIA, Missouri.

AN UNUSUAL thesis for a Master of Arts degree has recently been submitted at the University of Missouri here by Miss Irma Gaebler of 1111 North Park place, St. Louis. This thesis is not a book, but a modern duplex room designed and executed on a scale of one inch to the foot and furnished with miniature furnishings ranging all the way from grand piano down to cigarettes and ash trays. The model is on display here in the university's school of fine arts now and later will be taken to St. Louis for exhibition.

When Miss Gaebler became a candidate for an M. A. degree in the art school with a major in design, selection of a suitable thesis problem for her became something of a problem in itself. The school of fine arts was established only three years ago and Miss Gaebler, as it happened, was the first student to apply for a master's degree specializing in design. Faculty members were at a loss to think of a research project which would serve as a precedent. Finally, Professor Lowell R. Batchelder remembered having visited a home in the East which, although sumptuously furnished and decorated, lacked symmetry and charm. He decided it might be interesting to have the room reconstructed with the defects in design and choice of furniture corrected. So the problem was assigned.

Miss Gaebler started work on her models in January and devoted several hours a day to the undertaking. She finished the job, down to ash trays and book ends, in April, just in time for the annual exhibition of the school of fine arts. Interior decorators and art critics who saw it in the exhibition characterized it as an ingenious piece of work.

The duplex room, offering the maximum of utility in the minimum of space, is designed to serve as a music room, dining room and library, as well as a reception room. It seeks to provide within four walls many of the facilities which the average family, under the modern mode of living, must dispense with. The model is 38 inches long by 23 inches wide, which means that the room expanded on the scale of 12 to one would be 38 feet long by 23 feet wide. A two-step change in floor level divides the room in two compartments—one for sitting room and library and the other for dining room and music unit. Illumination is by indirect lighting from the ceiling. Effective color contrast is afforded by black rug and pale gray walls, which serve as an admirable background for the gold and copper of the furniture coverings. Chromium metals add a note of silver, while incidental touches are of turquoise.

The gray pattern of the black rug integrates the floor with the structural features of the room, unifying the various units in a decorative manner. Soft gray satin drapes hang over sheer white glass curtains. Two of the three windows are effectively grouped by inclosing a mirror wall between them and draping all as one unit with gray swag valance looping gracefully over an ornamental bar.

Miss Irma Gaebler and three of her miniatures.

Approaching the entrance on the side, the visitor finds at the left a two-step rise to the sitting compartment. These steps are flanked by ornamental chromium balustrades and half columns which terminate low wall structures built out into the room from each side to provide a more effective separation of the sitting and library space from the rest of the room.

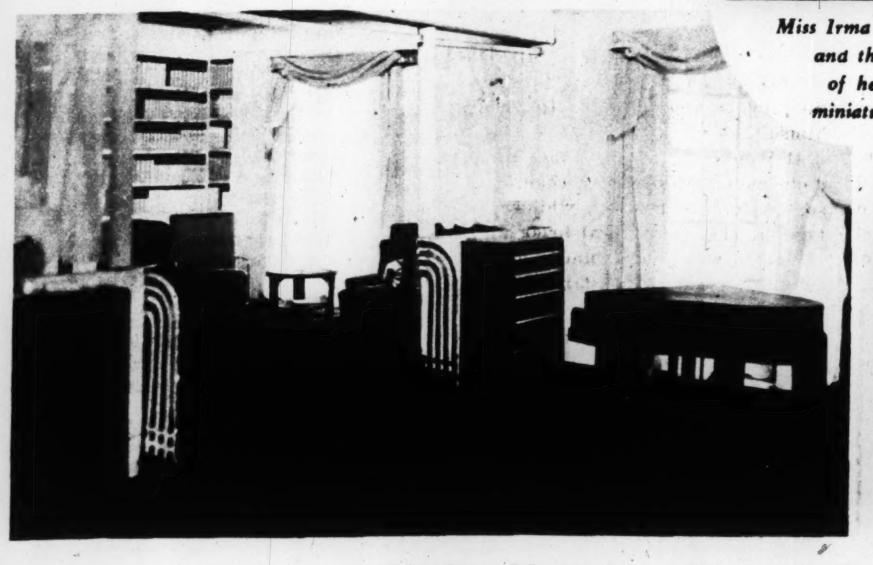
In the sitting room interest centers on a gracefully proportioned modern fireplace, simple and dignified. Evolving about the fireplace is a seating arrangement of two built-in sofas that curve to fit the corners of walls and partition, giving a colorful effect with its rich copper upholstery. On either side of the fireplace are library recesses for the book lover, while modern magazine cases holding attractive lamps are placed in the corners. A large chair upholstered in golden velvet and a round tea table are grouped before the curves of the sofas.

Paintings by Matisse and Van Gogh adorn the walls. Other accessories and incidentals include tiny magazines and a mantel clock guarded by two pigeons.

Descending the steps, one sees on the left the music unit, which balances informally with the dining arrangements on the right. In the former is a grand piano, and on the far wall an electric radio and phonograph in a built-in case, black, trimmed with silver. Between these, two modern deep-cushioned lounge chairs, upholstered, one in yellow silk velvet and the other in turquoise satin, and a table with a gleaming tubing pedestal base form a comfortable grouping.

Against the backs of the sofas on the lower level are seen novel black cases of drawers with silver bar pulls. These tie into the theme of the respective units; one holds sheet music and the other linen.

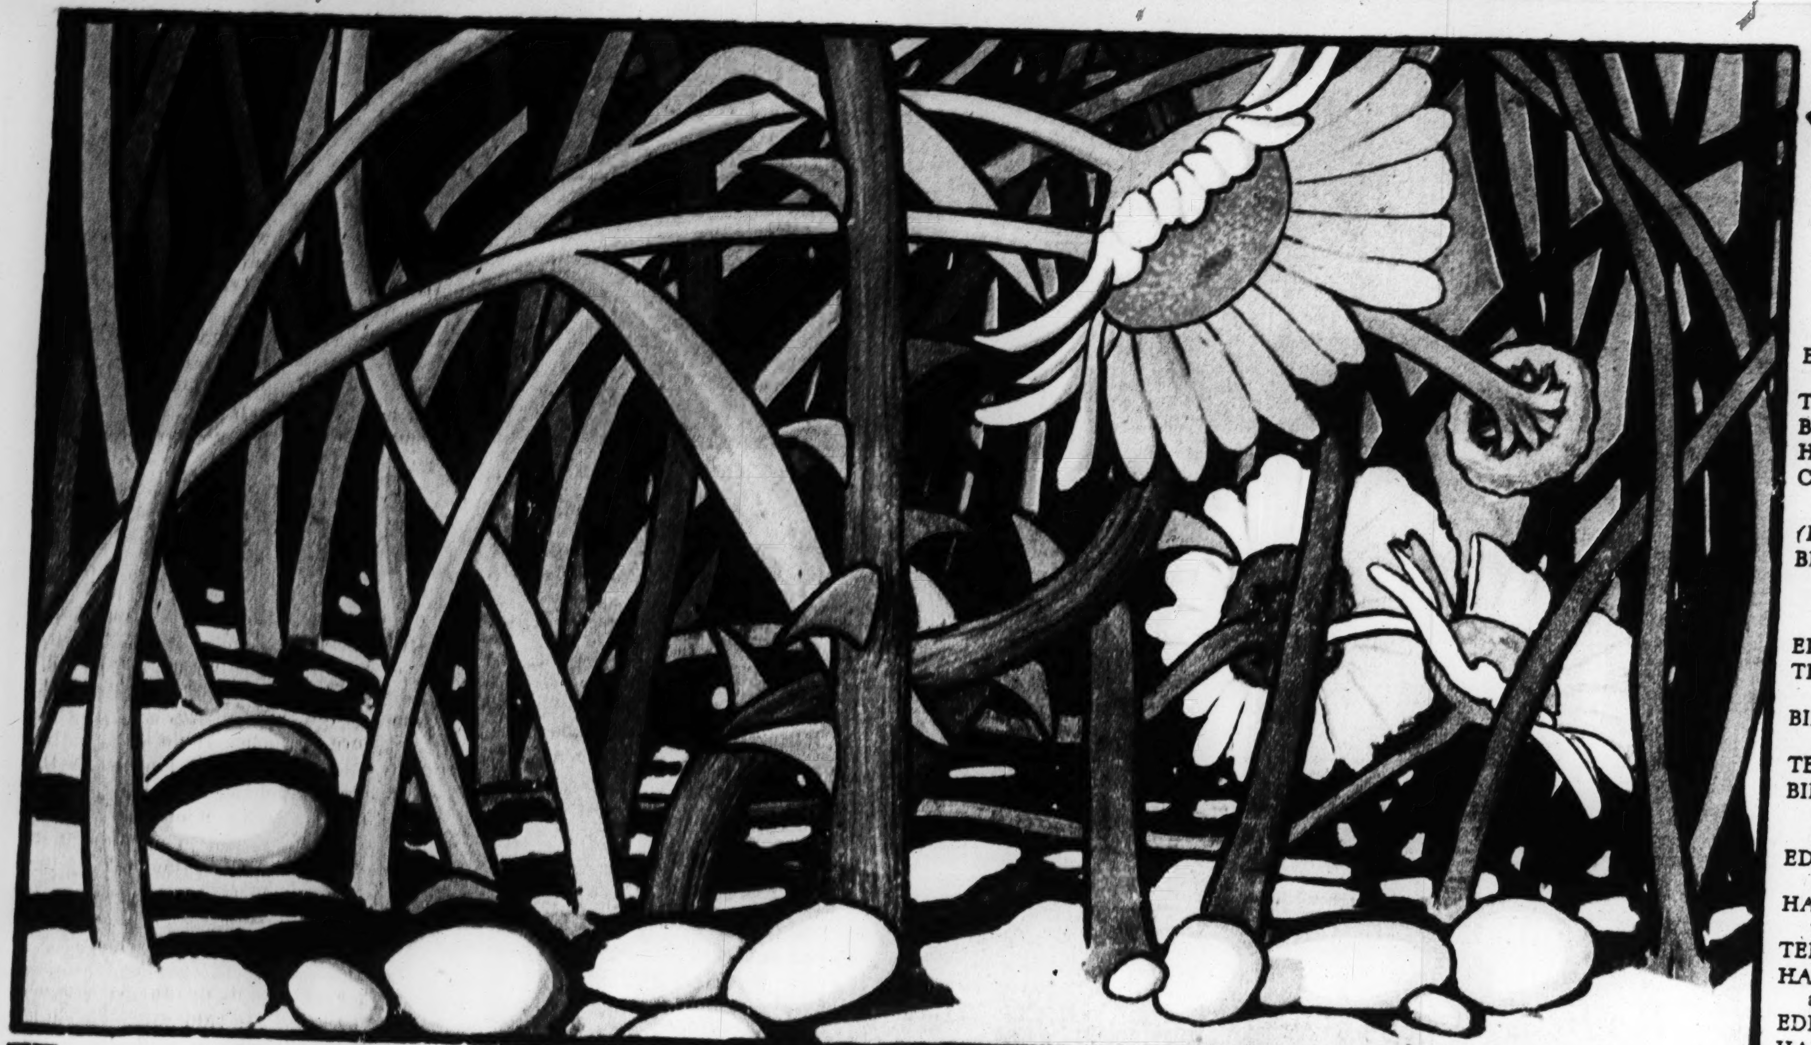
On the right is a dining table of metal and wood with a glass top, metal chairs upholstered in henna, and a buffet which duplicates the built-in radio case as they stand to the right and left of the kitchen door at the end of the long room. Calla lilies, the size of forget-me-nots, are found on the buffet.



ON a mirror-topped occasional table is smoking equipment, even to minute cigarettes. A simple cylindrical pedestal of chromium finish supports a piece of sculpturing of the modern school, and is a distinguishing feature of the music unit as it stands before the mirror wall.

Every article that went into this model room was not only designed but also constructed by Miss Gaebler herself. She even reproduced the paintings and executed the sculptures. The "marble" busts are fashioned out of white soap. Most of the furniture is made of cardboard and toothpicks. Satin was used for drapes, and mirrors of various sizes are represented by real mirrors from compacts.

"From a commercial standpoint, such a model is practical," Prof. Batchelder says, "for it lets the client know exactly what the room will look like when finished. In training the student, this work is valuable because the use of three dimensions is learned. Moreover, the influence of the student in educating the public to modernism is important. Too many people think they can put period furniture into a modern room helter-skelter without regard to harmony. These models serve to show just how harmony is achieved."



TOY TALKIES

PRISONERS OF COLONEL CRAWLER

This is a game that can be played by any child. All that is needed are scissors, paste and some cardboard. The directions for playing "Toy Talkies" are given at the bottom of the game.

THE PLAYERS

EDDIE—One of the Bear twins, who were reduced to the size of Bumblebees by a magic chemical so they could learn the art of making honey.

TEDDY—The other twin.

THE PLAY BEGINS

(Bill Bumblebee enters.)

BILL BUMBLEBEE—Gosh, but this business of teaching these Bears how to gather honey is slow work. (Then louder.) Come along, you lazy bones. (Then in a moderate tone.) The trouble is they have to walk because they can't fly. (Eddie and Teddy enter.)

EDDIE—(Puffing.) W-we're d-doing the b-best w-we can.

TEDDY—(Puffing.) Yes, i-if t-they h-hadn't made us s-so s-small w-we could g-go f-faster.

BILL BUMBLEBEE—I suppose so. But you will have to make the best of it. It's too bad you haven't got wings. It's a nuisance having to climb these flowers.

TEDDY—If we had an ax we could chop them down.

BILL BUMBLEBEE—Chop them down? Don't you ever let me catch you hurting any of these plants. They are the best friends Bumblebees have. You two wait here and rest, I'll fly around and scout for flowers. (He leaves.)

EDDIE—Gosh, this is terrible. All the Bumblebee folks do is work. They never play. (Happy Hopper enters.)

HAPPY HOPPER—Well, well, are you the Bears Queen Buzz had made small so you could be taught to make your own honey?

TEDDY—Yes. Who are you?

HAPPY HOPPER—I'm Happy Hopper, the life of the party. I never work and I always have a good time.

EDDIE—Gee! I wish Queen Buzz had turned us into Grasshoppers.

HAPPY HOPPER—Why not come with me? I'll show you how to enjoy life. I'll even teach you how to chew tobacco. (Bill Bumblebee enters.)

BILL BUMBLEBEE—You had better leave, Happy. I have no time for you loafers. (Happy Hopper leaves.)

BILL BUMBLEBEE—Well, I didn't find any fresh flowers near. I'll have to try again. But while I'm gone, be careful and don't talk to strangers. (He leaves and a moment later Colonel Crawler enters.)

COLONEL CRAWLER—I suppose you are the Bear cubs I heard so much talk about. Learning how to make honey, eh?

EDDIE—Yes. But we are not suited for such work. You see, we can't fly.

TEDDY—But we are strong. I've been carrying this ladder around all day.

COLONEL CRAWLER—Strong, eh? H-m-m. You boys come along with me.

EDDIE—But Bill Bumblebee will be mad if we do.

COLONEL CRAWLER—(Gruffly.) I said come along. You are my prisoners. Bill Bumblebee can go hang. (They all leave and Happy Hopper enters.)

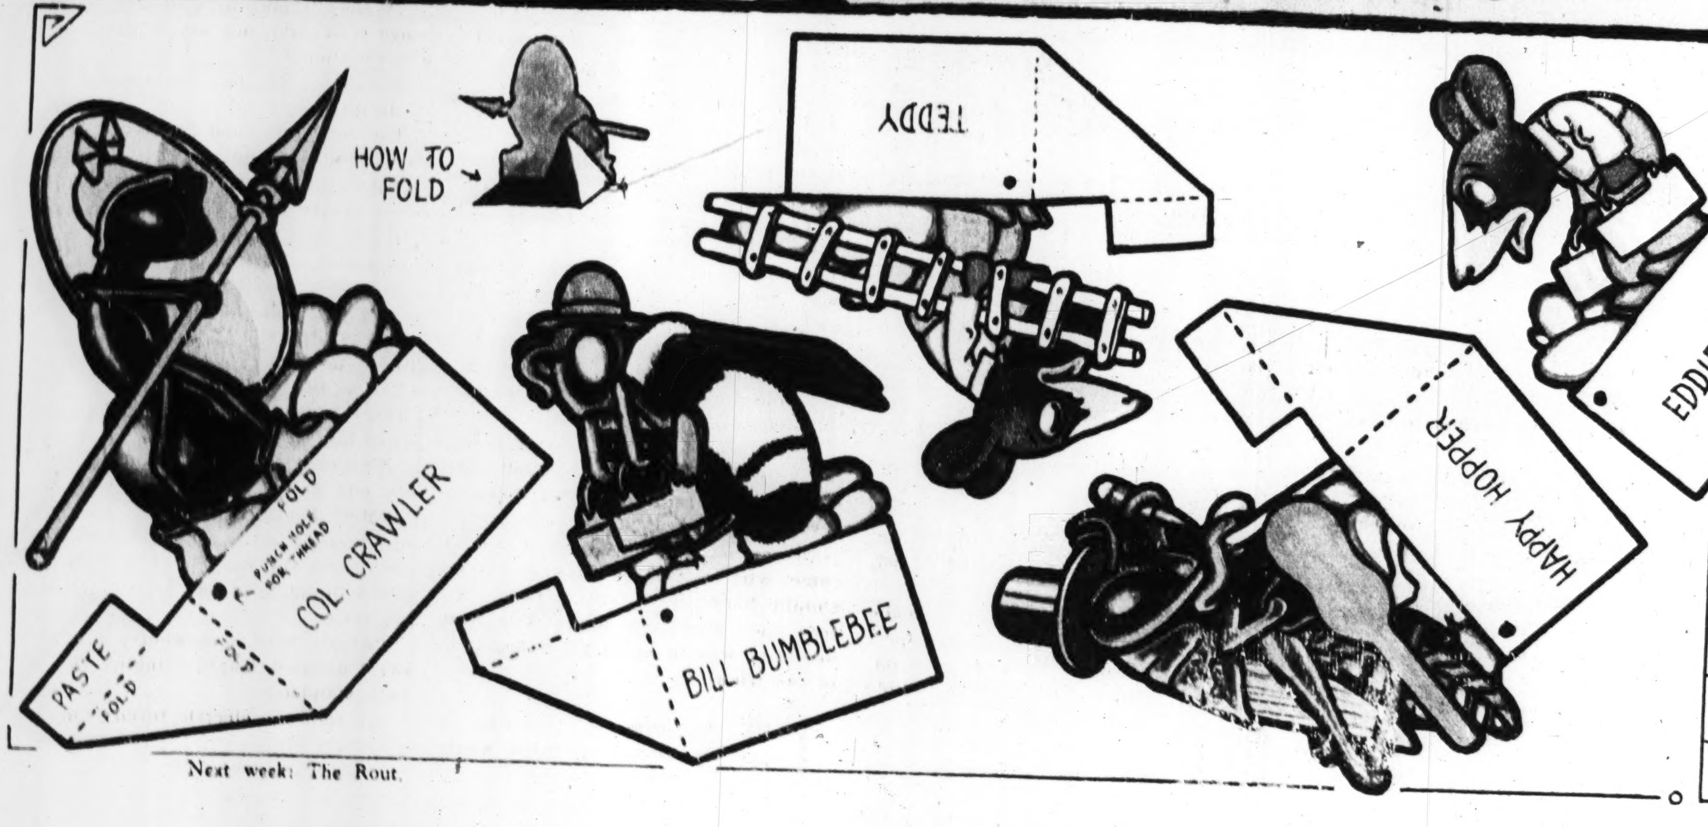
HAPPY HOPPER—I wonder where those Bears are? (Bill Bumblebee enters.)

BILL BUMBLEBEE—Where are those Bears?

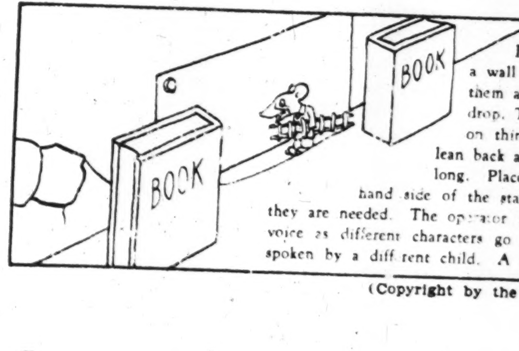
HAPPY HOPPER—I don't know. I just came here.

BILL BUMBLEBEE—I guess they ran away because they wanted to be like you. I'll find them. (He leaves.)

CURTAIN



Next week: The Rout.



DIRECTIONS: Cut out back-drop and pin it on a wall near the floor. Next, take two books and stand them at each end and about 5 inches in front of back-drop. Then take characters, cut them out, and paste them on thin cardboard, folding flap at bottom so they will lean back a little. Attach a piece of thread about 15 inches long. Place the characters back of the book on the right-hand side of the stage and draw them on the stage with thread as they are needed. The operator may talk for the characters, changing his or her voice as different characters go on the stage, or each character's part may be spoken by a different child. A flashlight can be used as a spotlight.

MUNY OPERA DRESSOGRAPHS

JACK SHEEHAN, today's selection among the Muny Opera stars who will appear in this space during the Forest Park theater's season, was born in Manchester, New Hampshire, 29 years ago. He decided to become a Catholic priest and attended Villanova College, near Philadelphia. But his father, a cotton mill foreman, died, and Sheehan left college and returned home to help support his mother and the eleven children of which he was the oldest. He found work singing in a motion picture theater. From there he went to the burlesque stage, then to vaudeville. His first light opera experience was in "Katja."

Accompanying Mr. Sheehan are three costumes he wears in Muny Opera shows. Cut out the star and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress him in his proper outfits. The three sets of costumes shown here are worn by Mr. Sheehan in these roles in the following productions: 1—Jimmy Blakely in "Nina Rosa"; 2—Corporal Ynderstodu in "The Nightingale"; 3—Slick in "Naughty Marietta," in which he is quite dressed up.

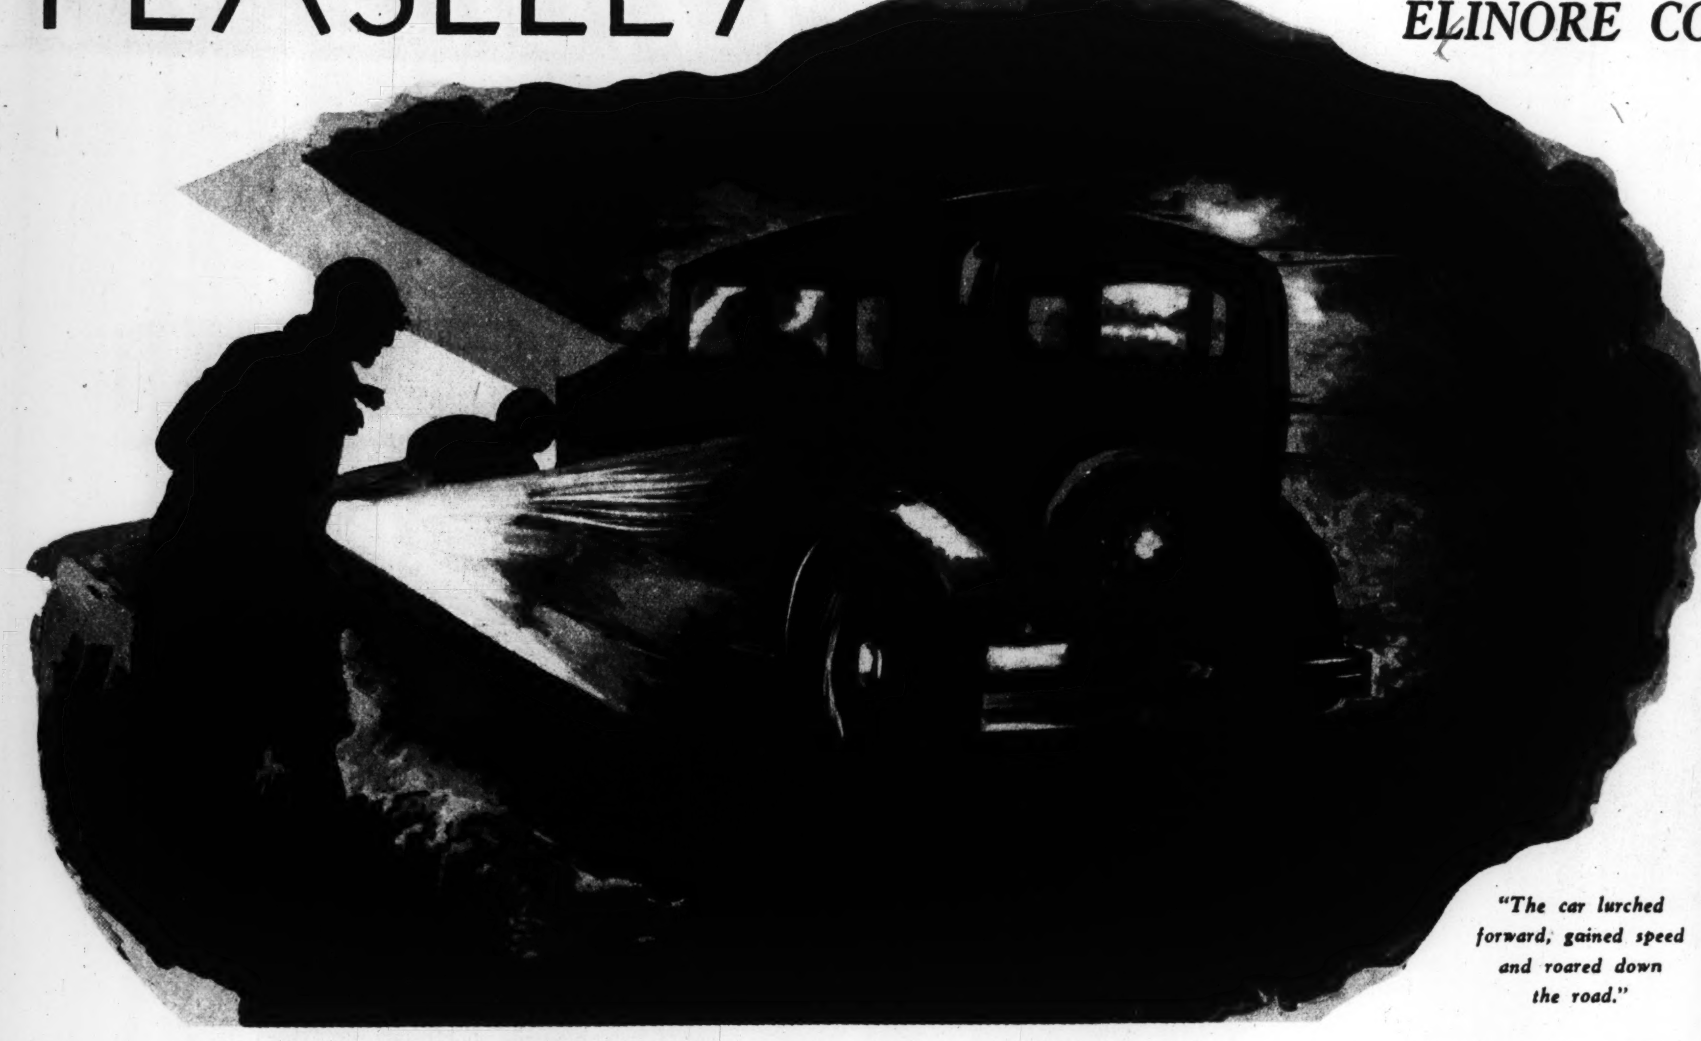
MISS PEASELEY

By ELINORE COWAN STONE



"The car lurched forward, gained speed and roared down the road."

AS HUGH eased over to the side of the road, Phoebe, as usual, leaned forward to protest. She knew the symptoms. Hugh was going to pick up a hitch-hiker. Then at sight of the quaint figure at the car step, she broke off and smiled.

A thin old lady stood there, bent wearily over the covered basket she was gripping in cotton-gloved hands. By the diminishing light, that portion of her face which was visible between the drooping brim of a shapeless felt hat and the fur of her coat collar looked tired.

Her eyes were shaded by tinted glasses. Wisps of white hair straggled into the fur of her collar. She must be hard of hearing; Hugh was shouting questions. Phoebe did not catch the old lady's muffled replies.

"Let her sit with you, Hugh," called Phoebe; "Buster's asleep," and shifted the sprawling baby to a more comfortable position.

Hugh reached for the basket; but the old lady shook her head, and clambered laboriously in with it in her hands, stumbling over her long skirt.

"A basketful of eggs," Phoebe decided. "She doesn't dare trust Hugh with them." Aloud she called: "I think you'll be more comfortable up there. My infant thrashes about so."

"Deaf as a post," murmured Hugh over his shoulder. "Had the devil of a time finding out where she wants to go."

"Where does she want to go?"

"Pittsburgh. Missed the bus. I told her we'd try to catch up with it."

"Poor old thing!" said Phoebe.

Over the touseled head of the sleeping baby she smiled in amusement. Evidently the old lady thought Hugh's 35 miles an hour reckless to the point of insanity. As she sat primly beside him, her cotton gloves clasped about the handle of the basket in her lap, she seemed to strain forward, peering with nervous intensity into the road ahead.

Hugh flashed Phoebe a grin of wicked amusement.

"Bet she's the world's best back-seat driver," he murmured.

No sign of the lighted bulk of the bus showed ahead. Indeed, the great American dinner hour left the dark ribbon of road empty of all lights until the car debouched abruptly upon one of those brightly illuminated little cross-road communities that enliven the Pennsylvania countryside — two filling stations, a barbecue stand and a country store.

Phoebe sat up in sudden protest.

"Hugh!" she called. "We have no jitney license, remember."

For Hugh had braked abruptly to a stop at the edge of the crossroads. Immediately Phoebe saw the reason. In the square of light outlined by the car window appeared a stalwart figure topped by the helmet of the state police.

THE trooper reached swiftly through the open window and, turning on the ceiling light, glanced about the interior of the car. For an instant he twinkled at Buster, who, startled by the jolt of the stop, whimpered, and sat bolt upright to stare belligerently at the intruder.

The twinkle lasted only a moment. Turning to Hugh, he said, "I'll have to look at your license cards, please."

Silently Hugh produced the cards. The officer relaxed as he glanced at them. "From Virginia, hm?" he said.

"Drove through from Richmond," confirmed Hugh.

"Your wife and baby, I suppose, Mr."—the officer glanced again at the cards—"Mr. Crosby?"

"Yes."

"And your"—he looked at the old lady. He started to say "mother," when he noticed the disparity between the gaunt poverty of the old woman's appearance and the richness of Phoebe's furs. "Er—a member of your household?" he finished.

"Well, no." Hugh hesitated. "As a matter of fact, we picked her up back the road a bit. She's just missed the bus."

The old woman, who had been looking in apparent bewilderment from one of the men to the other, moistened her lips and glanced appealingly at Hugh as she found herself the center of attention.

"She's hard of hearing," Hugh explained. "We picked her up about five miles out the highway. She said her name was Miss Sarah Peaseley and that she was going to Pittsburgh to visit relatives."

"Didn't say anything about a holdup out Ligonier way, did she?" questioned the trooper.

Hugh shook his head.

"She isn't exactly a chatty passenger," he smiled. "Bandits get much?"

"The pay roll of the Dosom Cement Company," replied the trooper. "The car was held up and robbed out there about an hour ago. You must have come along just after the shooting."

Phoebe leaned forward.

"Oh!" she said softly. "Oh, shooting?"

"The driver and a guard," said the officer, "were killed. The bandits wrecked their own car, but they've probably stolen another by this time, or they're laying for some poor devil to take one away from. If you take my advice, you won't go along picking up strangers this evening."

Just then a second car drove up behind them and the trooper waved them on and turned to it.

AS if to make amends for her former lack of cordiality, Miss Peaseley turned around in her seat and smiled at Phoebe, a mincing, apologetic little smile. Releasing one hand from duty on the handle of her basket, she patted the plump arm of Buster, who stood just behind her, clinging to the robe rail, his tousled curls a bright halo under the light, and chirped to him with pursed lips.

Buster brightened. This, now, was more like the friendly spirit that should prevail among fellow travelers on a long, tedious ride. Inspired by the promise of an appreciative audience, he broke into an impassioned flight of oratory, in the course of which he became alarmingly rigid and red of face.

"He's telling you how much he admires you, Miss Peaseley," Phoebe leaned forward to say to the old woman, and thought: "How absurd! She can't possibly hear me."

And, indeed, Miss Peaseley had already turned away, and was again scrutinizing the road with nervous attention. Buster was piqued by that tantalizingly turned back. A nice old lady who turned her back upon him was a startling phenomenon in Buster's cosmos.

He addressed her in louder, firmer tones, his head blandishingly on one side. Still she seemed not to hear. He considered—then——

"No, Buster," cried Phoebe quickly. "No, no!" and pulled down the little hands that were tugging provocatively at the scraggly fur of Miss Peaseley's collar.

At the touch the old lady started, turned; then, releasing one cotton gloved hand, she shook her finger, smiling ever so coquettishly over her shoulder at the child.

Buster cackled with delight. He waited until Miss Peaseley again turned her back; then he reached up and tugged again, vigorously, with both hands.

"Buster—you bad boy!" cried Phoebe. "He seems to have taken a great fancy to you, Miss Peaseley," she apologized in a shout to the old lady, who, with her free hand, was pulling the collar up about her neck.

"Let me help"—Phoebe broke off to focus every atom of her attention on Miss Peaseley's movements.

Miss Peaseley was adjusting the white hair that straggled in untidy wisps over the back of her neck. In that first instant Phoebe knew only that there was about the gesture something at once vaguely familiar and vaguely incongruous.

Miss Peaseley was not coaxing the stray hairs upward to tuck them into place with deft fingertips; she was brushing them downward over her neck with the flat palm of her hand, like—why, that was the way Hugh stroked the back of his neck!

It was then that, under the hard glare of the overhead light, Phoebe saw the thing that held her rigid, chilled with fright. Between the edge of Miss Peaseley's hair and the top of her coat collar she had caught sight of Miss Peaseley's neck.

It was a singularly thick, robust neck for an old lady, and down the nape marched a phalanx of short, coarse bristles.

In that instant Phoebe knew stark, hideous fear. Above it rose one sane impulse—the impulse to hide from Miss Peaseley the fact that she had seen. She hardly knew how she managed to lift her hands to bundle the collar about that neck, and say, with deep concern, "There, I won't let him touch it again. I do hope you haven't caught cold, Miss Peaseley."

"Miss Peaseley" made no reply other than a stiff nod of thanks. But Phoebe knew that "Miss Peaseley" had heard.

On through the night they rolled. Occasional headlights bore down upon them and flashed by; but for the main part the road continued to be deserted. Hugh's head loomed ahead over the top of the seat—tilted a bit, as it was when he was intent upon his driving. He would be whistling through his teeth, Phoebe knew, in that funny, abstracted way he had. She must find some way to warn Hugh.

Desperately she tried to think. She remembered Hugh's well-filled wallet, her own diamond wrist watch, the valuable rings in her purse—and brushed them aside as irrelevant. No. The man's object in taking passage with them had been, obviously, escape.

In his plan they no doubt served a double purpose; they provided transportation and they acted as an impeccably respectable background.

But when their usefulness as social setting had been outlived? Just what was he waiting for? A road lonelier, even, than this?

No matter what; the end would come with brutal promptness if he should have the slightest reason to fear they suspected him. The first necessity was to avoid all appearance of suspicion.

THEY had come into the edge of another cross-roads town, where again traffic was being directed by two helmeted figures at opposite corners.

"All right, Mr. Crosby," said the fresh-faced young trooper who inspected Hugh's cards. "I needn't keep you, sir."

"Fine!" said Hugh. "Any news of the bandits?"

"Well"—the officer hesitated between discretion and the eagerness to talk. He was very young, and evidently very much thrilled by the events of the evening.

"We've picked up a suspect just out of Greensburg with a car he couldn't account for. Haven't got him to talk yet, and he didn't have any of the loot on him. But we know that there were two of them."

Phoebe moved cautiously. Now, now! She must get the boy's attention somehow. A word—perhaps even a gesture would be enough. But even as she edged toward the window, it seemed to her that the figure beside Hugh moved also, furtively closer to him.

"Well, it's reassuring to know that you boys are parked at every cross-road," said Hugh. "Do you suppose I'll be stopped again?"

"You might, sir. We have some motor cycles out ahead."

"Hugh!" Phoebe spoke desperately. "Let's stop here and pick up a little lunch. Park here, and"——

"Afraid you can't park here, lady," said the trooper, suddenly recalled to his responsibilities by the line of cars which had just come up behind him. "I've got to keep things moving on this corner. But there's a good little road-house a few miles ahead."

Before Phoebe could catch her breath to protest Hugh stepped on the accelerator, and the car shot ahead. As it did so, Hugh's door swung ajar. When, across the road, he slowed to close it, he glanced at the wallet which he had been just about to return to his pocket, hesitated and removed something from it.

"IF we're likely to be stopped again," he said over his shoulder, "I may as well slip my license cards into my hat. It may save a little time."

Removing his hat, he thrust two cards into the band.

The road stretched ahead, dim and dark—and terribly lonely. Hugh rolled down his window and rested his elbow on the sill.

Hugh thrust his head out the window just as a boisterous gust of wind swept a shower of dust down the narrow brick road. It lifted his hat, and sent it whirling into the blackness behind. He stopped the car.

"That's sweet!" he said disgustedly. "There goes my best hat and my only set of licenses."

He was backing the car slowly, peering out at the side.

"Miss Peaseley" had sat up. She seemed to listen. Phoebe listened, too. Far down the road behind them she heard the chug of an approaching motor cycle.

"About here somewhere, I should say," debated Hugh, bringing the car to a standstill.

He took an electric torch from his pocket, moved as if to rise, and sank back, laughing ruefully.

"Gosh!" he said. "That left foot of mine has gone to sleep. Guess I'll have to rub a little life into it before I try to get out."

The hum of the motor cycle came more clearly now.

"Give me that torch," "Miss Peaseley spoke suddenly in a flat, toneless voice. "I'll get them."

Depositing her basket on the floor, she scrambled hastily to the ground.

The car lurched forward, gained speed, and roared down the road.

"Duck!" ordered Hugh sharply. "He may shoot!"

ALMOST at the same moment dust puffed at the side of the road, and the sound of several shots rang out.

"Gunning for the tires!" gasped Hugh. "Rotten shot, thank God!"

A mile down the road Hugh stopped the motor. Phoebe clung to him between sobs and laughter.

"You knew all along!" she cried. "Oh, how did you manage to look so innocent? How did you guess?"

"Well," said Hugh, "it was the fan. It's loose, and keeps hitting the radiator. It makes just a little tick—nothing a deaf person could hear, or feel—but every time it happened, she—he craned his neck and looked worried."

"She had bristles on the back of his neck," sobbed Phoebe.

"Then," went on Hugh, "when the door blew open, the wind brushed her coat aside for a moment, and there was the edge of a trouser leg. By the way, let's have a look at those eggs."

Over the basket their eyes met, a little frightened. The "eggs" were packets of bills—fifties, tens, fives and ones, and neat rolls of coins in all denominations.

Hugh whistled. "We seem to have bought something," he said gravely.

It was not until they had telephoned their story back to the troopers at Blisstown and after they had received the news that a motor-cycle squad had picked up the quarry in a desperate attempt to escape into the wood, that Phoebe started at a sudden memory.

"But, Hugh," she cried, "your license cards?"

"Oh, them?" Hugh grinned. "They were for him to bite on. Those cards are safe in my wallet, where they've been all along. I knew he wouldn't dare risk being caught without them. That was my gasoline card and a tailor's advertisement I put into my hat."

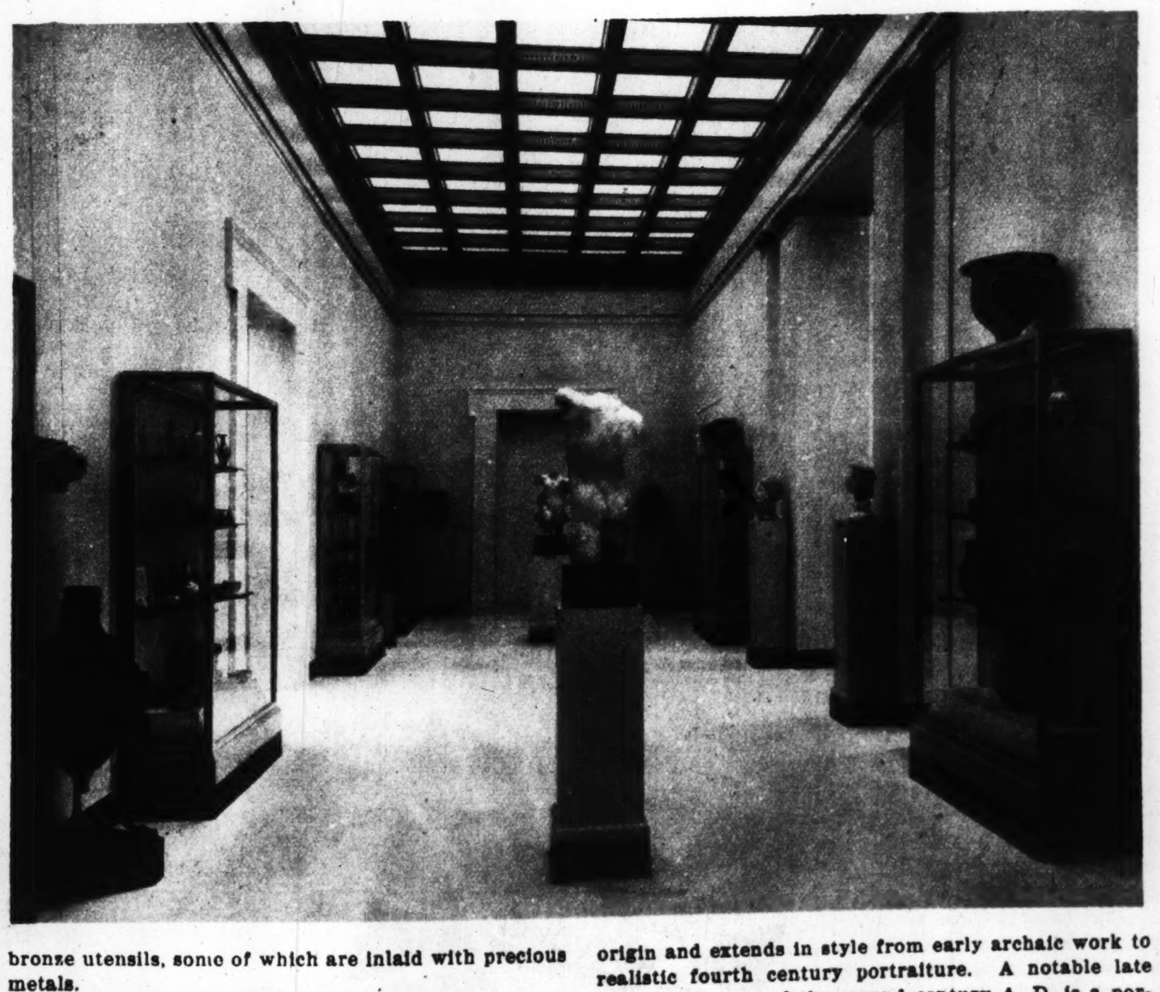
GALLERY OF CLASSICAL ARTS

THE Gallery of Classical Arts is the twenty-ninth in a series of exhibits being featured weekly at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Each display in this "Gallery of the Week" presentation will be reproduced in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, with an accompanying description of the exhibit by museum authorities.

The interior of this gallery has recently been entirely reconstructed as a setting for a portion of the Classical Collection. The construction of a coffer-beamed ceiling with panels of glass permits concealed artificial lighting and more even illumination. The walls have been plastered to give the effect of stone ashlar, and marble door trim of early classical type has been installed. Some examples of classical sculpture are shown, but most of the space is devoted to cases containing glass, bronzes and other minor arts of classical antiquity.

To the right of the east entrance are two cases of antique glass, much of which owes its preservation to the widespread custom of leaving glass vessels and other objects in tombs for the use of the deceased. Among the pieces shown are a great variety of vases, bowls, glass jewelry and double bottles of peculiar form which were once called "tear bottles" but are now believed to have contained skin beautifiers and face paints. Especially important is a group of rare "thousand-flower" bowls, so called from their flower-like mosaic pattern, made by fusing together sections of multi-colored glass rods. Much of this glass has assumed a beautiful iridescent color, due to the partial distintegration of the surface from long burial.

Two cases are devoted to Greek, Roman and Etruscan metal work, largely bronze and silver, covering a wide range of time and illustrating the high skill attained by ancient workmen. Among the objects are Greek silver bowls, Etruscan engraved mirrors and other toilet accessories, and Roman and Gallo-Roman bronze utensils, some of which are inlaid with precious metals.



Other cases contain Greek and Roman pottery from the seventh century B. C. to the sixth century A. D., including early Corinthian ware with archaic painted decoration, expressive little Greek pottery figurines of the type made famous by the discoveries at Tanagra, and Roman pottery wine cups with green glaze and delicately molded relief decoration.

The marble sculpture is of both Greek and Roman origin and extends in style from early archaic work to realistic fourth century portraiture. A notable late Greek sculpture of the second century A. D. is a portrait bust of an unknown bearded man, remarkable for the perfection attained in carving the marble. A marble torso, perhaps of Diana, with skillfully modeled flowing drapery, is a Roman copy of a Greek figure of the third century B. C. and serves to illustrate the dependence of Roman sculptors upon their Greek predecessors.

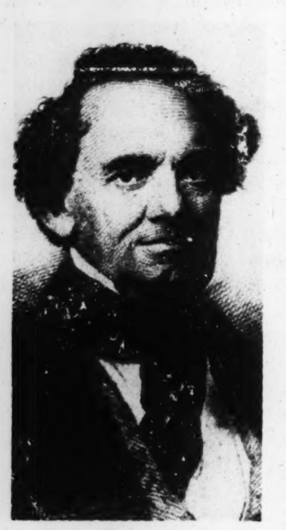
The Enterprising Mr. P. T. Barnum 'Returns' to the Scene of His Triumph

Madame Jenny Lind.

Jenny Lind, Aided and Abetted by the "World's Greatest Showman," Had St. Louis Dizzy in 1851—and This Week They're Seen Again on the Municipal Opera Stage.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

THREE vivid figures out of its past will return to St. Louis tomorrow night as characters in Armand Vecsey's musical romance "The Nightingale," this week's production of the Municipal Opera. But it is unlikely that anyone among the thousands who see the performances in Forest Park will remember the time when the originals of these characters made their brief but stirring contribution to the city's history. It was 82 years ago that Jenny Lind, the "Swedish Nightingale;" P. T. Barnum, the peerless showman, and Signor Belletti, noted baritone, presented a series of concerts here which gave the quiet river town its first opportunity to hear a musical star of the first magnitude.



P. T. Barnum.

St. Louisans seized the opportunity enthusiastically. They crowded the hall for the six concerts given, paying fancy prices for choice seats, vociferously acclaimed Mme. Lind's glorious voice, and joyously lionized the singer. The concert series was a financial, artistic and personal success for the famous soprano. Though "The Nightingale," in which Marion Claire will have the title role, probably will be seen by more people every night than heard Jenny Lind in all the concerts of her first visit here, it can scarcely be expected to outdo, in these days of multitudinous entertainments, the impression she made on this city.

On St. Patrick's Day in the morning, of the year 1851, Jenny Lind, Barnum and Belletti arrived in St. Louis on the steamboat Lexington, which pulled up to the levee with a flourish, banners flying, stacks belching rich clouds of smoke, paddle wheels grandly churning the water. A delegation of citizens was waiting at the landing. It welcomed the visitors and escorted them to the Planters' House, where a strip of carpet had been laid from the street to the lobby. In the hotel Mme. Lind held an informal reception at which scores of admiring St. Louisans greeted her.

Wyman's Hall, on the south side of Market street, between Fourth and Fifth, was chosen as the place for the concerts, and was engaged for the visiting musicians by Sol Smith of the old St. Louis theatrical firm of Ludlow and Smith. In New Orleans Mme. Lind had appeared at the St. Charles Theater, which Ludlow and Smith managed. Smith had to come to St. Louis to arrange for the summer season here of his firm's stock company, so Barnum engaged him to do some advance work for the Lind concerts.

Wyman's Hall was a small place, seating only 350 persons, but as Showman Barnum, approving its selection, pointed out: "An over-crowded small hall, where the late comers must be turned from the door, is always better in its effect on the public than a great hall with scattering tell-tale vacant chairs."

The place was "fixed up" with new paint and paper, and a gallery was installed. Seats were sold at $5 each and a $4 charge was made for standing room. To add to the receipts — and the publicity—Barnum held a ticket auction each morning before a concert. To attend one of these sales a person had to pay 10 cents admission, and these admission fees were turned over to Mayor Kennett for local charity. Choice seats were offered to the highest bidders. A saloonkeeper named Byron paid $50 for one.

Another publicity stunt was a trotting race. Four horses raced under the names of Jenny Lind, P. T. Barnum, Signor Belletti and Sir Julius Benedict. Mme. Lind's conductor was Sir Julius Benedict. Strangely enough, Sir Julius won the race.

The first concert was given the evening of March 18. It was scheduled to begin at 8:30. By 6 o'clock a crowd had collected outside the hall. Two hours later ticket-holders had to have the assistance of police to get through the throng around the door.

THE second concert was not financially successful, but few suspected it, for Barnum papered the house very adroitly. All the others were sell-outs. Many who didn't get inside the hall enjoyed them. Across the street was a line of trees, and enterprising small boys sold seats in their branches for 5 cents each. On one occasion the tree-sitters so heartily applauded Jenny Lind's singing of the "Bird Song" from Haydn's "Creation" that she repeated it as an encore.

Jenny Lind not only sang to St. Louisans, but some of them sang to her. The Pollyhymnia Society, a singing organization, gathered beneath the diva's window at the hotel and serenaded her. Mme. Lind responded by saying she would like to hear the singers in concert. The next night the society gave a concert with the visitors as guests of honor.

Contributing to the success of the Swedish Nightingale's concerts here was the fact that her solo violinist was a St. Louisan, August Waldauer, who later took a prominent part in the city's musical life.

The six Lind concerts here brought in gross receipts of between $35,000 and $40,000. Before their departure, Jenny Lind and Barnum each sent the Mayor a check for $1000 for charity.

Lovely Homes With Steelcote Paints

Home is much a matter of atmosphere and the beautifying and protecting effects of paint go a long way toward creating it. Through skillful use of color on walls and furniture a drab, unattractive house may be transformed into a charming home.

STEELCOTE PAINTS, ENAMELS AND VARNISHES, products of Steelcote Mfg. Co., are made for specific purposes . . . protecting and beautifying every interior and exterior surface, says A. E. Niedt, director of sales, adding:

"There's Steelcote Flat Wall Finish for living, dining room, library and bedroom walls; Furnitint to renew furniture and Steelcote Wall and Furniture Enamels for the bathroom. This finish is ideally suited for use on walls and ceilings of kitchen and bathroom, also for woodwork, brick or stone surfaces . . . a quick-drying, easy-working, long-lived enamel, beautiful, durable, sanitary."

Note the bathroom illustrated. If you prefer a different color scheme, a wide range of colors await your choosing and colors may be blended to give many tints, the sales manager announced.

There's a neighborhood store bearing the Steelcote Paint Stores sign near you, or ask at any hardware, paint or accessory store for Steelcote products.

Give Children Milk Because It Supplies

Carbohydrates for energy.

Proteins to build sturdy muscles and tissues.

Vitamins, essential to health and growth.

Each child should have a quart every day and each adult at least a pint, health authorities state.

LANGE'S INSPECTED MILK is rich in all these properties . . . the same high quality in every bottle insured by laboratory tests. Order it at your neighborhood store . . . exchange the caps for Eagle Stamps and "save as you spend!"

Durlacque

Mrs. Ruth Johnston, Carlyle, Ill., winner of the third prize in the Durlacque contest of April 23, says:

"Durlacque, manufactured by the Durlacque Mfg. Co. of St. Louis, has proved a great source of economy and comfort to me. Having a large eight-room house with painted canvas-covered walls, I use it everywhere. The ceilings are beautifully hand painted, some in delicately colored designs. These have in no way been dimmed or injured by Durlacque, the colors being brightened and freshened. It also has been used on a beautiful hardwood stairway with excellent results. I find it easy to use, economical and its uses so varied I would not be without it."

Your grocer has Durlacque . . . put it on your shopping list for tomorrow.

Presto Matches

"Matches, matches, who'll buy my matches?"

The little girl of song and story fame would not have returned to her home in fear and trembling if she had the Presto brand, manufactured by Cupples Co. of this city. Patrons would have demanded them, just as today's homemakers are doing.

Experience has taught them that:

Presto matches strike easily, anywhere, every time!

The splints are strong, straight, white . . . especially treated to prevent after-glow when thrown aside!

The red tips never fly off . . . always light!

Why not profit from their experiences and "BUY PRESTO MATCHES!"

Falstaff Beer Formula Over 150 Years Old

The formula used in making Falstaff beer has been handed down in the Griesedieck family for more than 150 years, according to Joseph Griesedieck, president of the Falstaff Brewing Corp., 3684 Forest Park Blvd.

"In this century and a half, there has been but little change in the family formula," Griesedieck said. "Modern brewing methods have brought about changes in the mashing process, in controlled temperatures and in improved filtration, but the original formula of ingredients, used in our ancestors' brewery in Stromberg, Germany, has changed but little. It is the formula that imparts the special flavor to Falstaff beer."

Come Into the Elco Garden

You may walk into your kitchen garden this afternoon and make your choice of vegetables and fruits for dinner, even though you live in a small apartment with a kitchenette. How? By stocking your shelves liberally with ELCO CANNED FOODS.

While home methods of canning have practically stood still, the L. Cohen Grocer Co., distributors of Elco Brand products, employing the most modern methods and equipment, have advanced scientifically to their present efficient, perfected system of having foods prepared for home consumption.

The wise housewife, recognizing this fact, stocks her larder with Elco Brand foods and is able to serve well-balanced, tempting meals to her family at a minimum of time and labor.

"An Oakland Pedestal Table range combines the ultimate in convenience, economy, beauty.

"CONVENIENCE . . . Put your meal in the oven, set the temperature controls . . . the range does the rest.

"ECONOMY . . . The heavily insulated oven utilizes ALL of the heat, therefore saves gas.

TAKING A FEW SHOTS AT THE PRINCE

The movie makers put His Royal Highness "on the spot" the other day at the Gaumont British Studios and he bravely faced the cameras and microphones while they ground out a reel or two for the new film, "The Prince of Wales," shown recently at the New Victoria Theater for the benefit of the League of Mercy.

FOR THE LAZY SWIMMER—These miniature motorboats not only keep him afloat, but do all the work of propelling him through the water. The "Wellentummler," as it is called, was invented by a German, E. Hubold, and is now very much the fashion at Wannsee Beach, Germany.

WHEN THE BOAT CAME TO THE RESCUE OF THE LIGHTHOUSE—The seething waves of Lake Erie made it impossible to take off the 10 Clevelanders marooned on the tower, but the coast guard crew did manage to shoot them a line with a key to the lighthouse after they had spent 24 hours on the roof.

Beauty ON THE SURFACE . . .

THAT HAS Character UNDERNEATH

There is a great deal of Beauty on the surface of things today. Sometimes you're taken in by it. In certain cases this may not matter, but when it comes to a personal accessory—like Face Powder—you have to be careful. For then its quality touches your face, and its safety on the most sensitive skin must be an established fact.

That's why Coty emphasizes the character underneath. In addition to character, Coty gives you glamour, too.

You'll notice it in those subtle powder tints Coty blends so skilfully—fine accurate tones which bring an exquisite evenness to your complexion, harmonizing inequalities of skin color; giving your face its truest beauty. You can apply your Coty Face Powder—and forget it after it's on. Ask your favorite shop for Coty.

MAKE SURE YOUR FACE POWDER GIVES YOU ALL THESE!

☐ Fine, adherent Texture—adroitly blended. Coty texture ideally meets most skin needs. Daily use proves it.

☐ Delicate, fresh fragrance—fine and true—not heavy. Coty fragrances unite sparkling delicacy with fresh, enduring quality.

☐ Established Purity—In all that touches your life—you naturally demand safety. Coty purity is a matter of established fact.

Check each point—whenever you buy powder—your face deserves this care.
